Denver, CO | May 18, 2021 09:00 AM Eastern Daylight Time

M Moser Associates, a global architecture, design and engineering firm, today announced the opening of its Denver, CO office. This move is inspired by the region's economic growth and surging client demand for business-centric architecture and design solutions. M Moser has created holistic, human-centric spaces for many of the world's most successful companies globally over the past 40 years.

"Denver is an attractive regional hub given its central location in the U.S., the access it provides to a deep pool of talent, and its rich history in modern office design" said John Sellery, Group Managing Director at M Moser and proud Denver resident. "The market has become a magnet for many of M Moser's high-growth clients and industries – from technology and science, healthcare, oil and gas, aerospace and more – that require a new approach to architecture and design – one that seamlessly integrates the physical, digital, and social needs of their employees."

The Denver office will be run by Eric Lind (Director), a self-proclaimed Denver "transplant native" living in the city for more than 30 years. He is partnering with Laura Walsh (Senior Associate, Client Services), a third generation Coloradan who has lived in Denver her entire life. Together, they bring a wide variety of expertise in architecture and design along with a deep understanding of the region's culture and business environment, and a true appreciation for the lifestyle that Denver provides.

In 2019, Forbes ranked Denver the fourth best city in the country for business and careers, and the region consistently ranks as a top place to live. M Moser's move also comes at a time when workplaces are broaching a return-to-the-office following a year of major changes in how, when and where people work. The region's steadfast commitment to work-life balance and employee wellbeing makes it a fertile ground for designing world-class environments and strategies for dynamic, fast-growing companies.

"People who live in and around Denver place a premium on the connection to the outdoors and the natural beauty of their physical surroundings – both of which heavily influence how we design to attract the best and brightest talent in the area," noted Lind. "Whether gazing at the Rocky Mountains from your office window or venturing out for a hike, our relationship with nature and how it defines workplace cultures throughout the city is what makes our job so special and rewarding.”

The entrepreneurial and experimental mindset that drives success in the Mile High City aligns with M Moser’s approach to design explorations and helping organizations and their employees realize their growth potential. With a local team of long-time residents supported by the collective creativity of the global organization, M Moser Denver is positioned to make an indelible impact on the direction of architecture, design, and client service in the market.

M Moser’s Denver offices are located at 1001 Bannock Street, Suite 231, Denver, CO. For more information on the firm and career opportunities, visit <https://www.mmoser.com>.
