Torr Metals (TSX-V:TMET) CEO Malcolm Dorsey joined Proactive's Stephen Gunnion to discuss results from a 6.4-square-kilometer (km<sup>2</sup>) induced polarization geophysical survey done in late-2022 over the Dalvenie Zone at the company's Latham project in British Columbia.

Dorsey said the results provide invaluable geological context to identifying potential subsurface extensions to previously identified zones of at-surface high-grade copper-gold mineralization within the Dalvenie Zone - which he described as "one of the most prospective exploration targets within this region of the Golden Triangle" of northern British Columbia.
