I.C.G.S. Coaching Philosophy

The responsibility of the team coach in athletics is to guarantee the success of his or her players. Success in competition often is viewed as winning, but it must also be evaluated in terms of the enjoyment, self-improvement, satisfaction, self-confidence and other benefits that players and the school derive from the athletic experience.

The ICGS Athletic Program in carrying out the mission of the school is dependent upon the generosity and cooperation of the many staff and volunteer coaches who share their time and talents. All participating coaches must articulate the philosophy and mission of the school through their actions and dialogues with student-athletes.

Coaches are to provide by personal example and direction the ideals of leadership, citizenship, sportsmanship, and fair play to the athletes and spectators. They must understand their role as teachers and their responsibility to create a feeling of team loyalty by the encouragement and constructive criticism of all team members. Their success is not determined by winning percentage but according to how they instill life skills in each student-athlete through discipline, accountability, teamwork, work ethic, fairness, and striving for goal achievement.

Team & Player Expectations

Each Head Coach must prepare and submit team and player expectations for the Athletic Director and his/her team players and parents prior to the start of the season.
