Book 88

“I will take Phil the Lamb to school.
Dot the Owl is at school today.
She will teach us how to write.”

“Phil cannot go to school today.
He has a stomach ache.”

“Max, will you go to school with me?
Dot will teach us how to write.
Phil cannot go to school.
He has a stomach ache.”

“I cannot go to school today.
I need to fix the wheel of my bike.
I ran into a mud bank.
The wheel is a mess.”

“Mit, let’s go to school,
Dot will teach us how to write.
Phil cannot go. He has a stomach ache.
Max cannot go. He has to fix his wheel.”

“I cannot go to school with you.
I need to fix my horn.
It will not play well.”

“Mat, will you go to school with me?
Phil has a stomach ache.
Max needs to fix his bike wheel.
Mit needs to fix his horn,” says Kit.
“Yes, I will go to school with you.”

“I got toys for you at the toy shop today.
The toys are for you when you know how to write.
I will teach you on this big white wall.”

Mat phones Phil. He phones Max.
Then he phones Mit.

“Dot has toys for us at school.
We get the toys when we can write on the white wall.”

“There is no ache in my stomach now.”
“I do not need to fix my wheel today.”

“My horn plays well now.
Will you teach us to write on the white wall?” Says Mit.

“When you all sit in your chairs,
I will teach you. I will write on this white wall,” says Dot.

“When do we get a toy?” Says Max.

“When you can write well,
you will get a toy.
Write the toy you like on the white wall, then you can take that toy.”
