Oksana Leukhina is a Research Officer in the Research Division of the Federal Reserve Bank of St Louis. She is also a member of The Human Capital and Economic Opportunity Network at the Becker Friedman Institute for Research in Economics at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Leukhina is a macro/growth economist. She has made important contributions to the study of the long-run process of economic development, structural transformation, demographic change and female labor supply. She has also contributed to our understanding of informational frictions in financial markets. Most recently, she has been working on questions pertaining to human capital accumulation in college. Dr. Leukhina has published her research in peer-reviewed journals such as the Journal of Monetary Economics, American Economic Journal: Macroeconomics, Journal of Economic Growth, International Economic Review and Review of Economic Dynamics.

Prior to joining the Federal Reserve Bank of St Louis in 2017, Dr. Leukhina held a tenured appointment at McMaster University in Canada. Her previous academic appointments were at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill and University of Washington in Seattle. Dr. Leukhina earned her B.S. in Economics, Mathematics and Political Science from the College of Charleston in 2000 and her Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Minnesota in 2005.