Guillaume Vandenbroucke is a senior economic policy advisor in the Research Division. Guillaume completed his undergraduate education in economics in France, later studied at the European University Institute in Florence, Italy, and finally at the University of Rochester (New York) where he obtained his PhD in Economics in 2004. Prior to joining the St. Louis Fed in 2014, he was an economics professor at the University of Southern California, the University of Iowa, and the University of Pennsylvania. Guillaume’s research touches topics such as economic growth, demography, the economics of wars, education, and inequality. His research also has been published in several top-25 economic journals including the American Economic Review, the Journal of Economic Literature, the European Economic Review, and the American Economic Journal-Macroeconomics.