TOCA Football provides a one-of-a-kind, tech-enhanced soccer experience for players of all ages and skill levels.

TOCA was founded in 2016 by two-time U.S. World Cup and former MLS and English Premier League midfielder Eddie Lewis. He led the development of TOCA's training platform, which employs a proprietary ball machine, digitalized targets and a data-enhanced app to create a welcoming environment for players at every level. TOCA recently opened new sport centers in the Chicago-land area, Nashville, and Dallas, and added US Women's National Champion, Abby Wambach, to its board.

Serving local communities throughout the United States and Canada, their training centers welcome players and families to find their best with classes, training sessions, and league play that meet players' respective skill-sets.

Headquartered in Costa Mesa, California, TOCA Football, Inc. is a technology-enabled soccer experiences and entertainment company that is transforming the sports experience and building communities that inspire everybody to play. TOCA provides an authentic soccer experience on demand, making players better and getting more people to play.

TOCA was named to Forbes' list of Top 500 Startup Employers in 2020 and was recently nominated for a Football Business Award in innovation.
