Kuiu guide jacket canada

24/11/2012, 10:42 #1 See some good deals in Kuiu this weekend, just wondering if anyone had any experience with the Guide Jacket. I need a decent jacket for wind/water resistance, breathable, but light enough to keep me warm as I like to walk away from the truck as much as possible. 24/11/2012, 10:45 #2 No return. But I did a ton of research and ordered the jacke and pants yesterday. 24/11/2012, 11:13 #3 I got the jacket. I found it a little cold when I hunted sheep. the wind seems to eat through it. It looked good when I covered myself underneath. That said, I love the way it fits and the location of the pockets. I can put my calls, camera and rangefinder in different pockets while hunting bows, have easy access to all of them and nothing is stopping me from drawing and shooting my bow. 24/11/2012, 12:31 #4 I got the jacket and agree with what's said above, having said that I was really shocked at how well it repelled the water and kept me dry even with heavy rains, but I suspect it could demote a bit as the DWR wears a bit. I think the place that is the best use is a breathable protective layer for my base and insulating layers like my wool and merino basses that I'd rather not do as well bust brush. I spent 3 days hunting the upper Pitt and it rains nonstop up there and after seeing how my attack pants and guide jacket dealt with the rain and how fast they dried i never picked up my rain gear when the rain came, the only time it drenched was when I was sitting on wet logs or floor, but that's to be expected. You will not be disappointed with this equipment and after moving away from hunting clothing for more mountaineering equipment based on fit and mobility, the price and quality and ability to move properly in this gear brought me back to hunting equipment by Kuiu. 24/11/2012, 13:22 #5 If you will be wearing glasses in the open wind, I recommend the Sitka Jetstream, as it has the laminated gore windstopper.... it is an exchange, however, as the Kuiu Guide will breathe better for walks, as it does not have the laminate. Longer sleeves and dull in the Guide. 24/11/2012, 17:13 #6 agree with the other comments, I have to layer if it is cold.. Also super fast dry... 24/11/2012, 18:41 #7 Is a system. It's definitley not a do it all. Depending on the hunt and the temperature. Layers of wool under, and a jacket down, and rain shell on. It is light enough to hunt summer sheep and with layers is good until the end of October. As for rainproof, it works with light rain. But I put the bark on top when it really starts to rain or snow comes back packing and not where to dry it. It's not the hottest as others have said, but I have the DCS Guide and if I use a lightweight synthetic bass layer underneath (or more specifically have it on the packaging so you can put it on when you're still) it's a stellar jacket. Great pockets, great fit and very quiet. I also have 2 pairs of attack pants and for above freezing temperatures and a light merino wool base, you won't find better pants that dry as quickly as they do. As Big Boar said, these technical companies like Kuiu and Sitka should be used as a system not to stand alone, so if you use your solid session and my Sitka Traverse base layer under the Kuiu Guide jacket would be good for some white-tailed novemeber hunts. I walk a little so that something that can breathe and dry fast is key, besides being silent and layers of light to be able to move while still staying warm. I like the new digital standard they came out with, but I'm looking at the Brown Solids or Olive, going to do a camouflaged season next year. Thank you guys. 28/07/2016, 19h30 Date of departure: Dec 2010 Location: Look behind you :) Posts: 27,345 Sitka or Kuiu and why? Let's say you had the option of either or... what system do you choose and why? Looking for early/medium/late options. LC ___ the same guy who started Sitka started Kuiu. Sitka was her first baby, but they wanted to go to Cabela's mainstream. His dream was to keep it small, cut the middleman thing, be able to afford to do more, provide more than one product for the price without the middleman. So when sitka became mainstream he switched gears. At least that's what they told me. Sitka has been good enough for me, I really like her research and intentional design behind her equipment. When you use it in the mountains, all these little details on your equipment really make a difference. Well done, if high price. I usually research similar products between Sitka, Kuiu & First Lite and choose the one that fits me best with the features I prefer. I seem to gravitate to first lite stuff almost every time. If you have time, listen to this podcast with Ken & Ryan from First Lite - some good laughs there. 28/07/2016, 20h00 20h00 2.374 I'm a mixing and game guy I hate the kuiu and sitka packages I like more of the kuiu super down layer better than the kelvin set of Sitka I like the wooden pants on everything else As for long underwaer I like to break-ice I use Sitka Storm Front for rain because at the time was 3 layer and the others where 2 Also depends on its construction , I'm athletic built , everything fits perfectly I have a friend who is short n round and some things do not fit very well ___ Only here to buy n sell... 28/07/2016, 08:06 PM Join Date: Feb 2011 Posts: 2,374 I practically pack all the same clothes from August 15 to October 31 I saw winter in August and summer in October The ram in my photo was filmed at the end of 2 years ago , it was the most pleasant if I ever had for a trip of 10 days. For active hunting of light weight is kuiu. As mentioned above the guy who started kuiu also started Sitka. He left Sitka and started kuiu because using the best materials and technology was cost prohibitive with the Sitka retail model. When you buy kuiu you are getting the best there is. When you buy Sitka you are getting decent stuff restricted by retail tags. Kuiu doesn't really have equipment that will work for real cold-time hunting. 28/07/2016, 21h49 Action Date: October 2010 Location: Sylvan Lake Posts: 638 I have both, I have gravitated toward kuiu because the equipment seems to fit me better. To be spruced up to look like an ad from Sitka could have bought a rifle. Personally I buy from mec or cabelas and what will do the trick. Usually a heavy fleece cabelas with a rain jacket for the mountains. Wool pants and a pair of rain pants is all that comes with me. My last rain pants had a tear on the opening trip so I tied them up and they lasted 6 years hunting dalls not bad for 60 bucks and I didn't hear the sheep complaining. I spent most of the 20 years wearing what was available, but even with the regular size of the clothes has been a problem for me. I have an inseam of 37, so pants are always a problem. Sitka is the only brand I know that offers pants in the length I need. I hated the idea of spending this guy on cash but after wearing proper clothes last year, hunting was more enjoyable. Fjallraven clothes is another option. I bought a pair of pants for the start of the season and they're amazing. Stocks are a problem for them, so I have to wait until they pick up stock for a coat. 29/07/2016, 14:44 PM Join Date: Feb 2011 Posts: 2.374 Something so important that was not brought is socks I'm using ultra light liners under weight socks med Kenatrek ____ Only here to buy n sell... 29/07/2016, 14:47 007 Join Date: May 2007 Location: lac ste anne county,west of Stony Plain Posts: 1162 Theres a new kid on the block as far as top-end hunting clothes go They just opened their doors yesterday and have the same concept as kuiu Check out the website of UNEP Outdoors 07-29-2016, 03:22 PM Join Date: Mar 2015 Posts: 424 Quote: Originally posted by leeelmer ONKA is also a great mountain gear company and is based on B.C. They make the best wool in the game and their synthetic/waterproof membrane stuff is as good if not better than kuiu/sitka. They are constantly pushing boundaries with materials like the new Aerwool items and having tried/used equipment from First Lite, Kuiu, Sitka, Core4Element etc, their fit is the best in the business. There are heat dumps on the crotch, and zippers in 2 ways on the leg so you can put them off removing your boots, it doesn't have a built-in belt. I started with the Timberline Pant jacket and Jetstream (my mid-season setup). I loved it so much that I kept adding pieces. I like Kuiu's stuff better, but Sitka serves me better. What I don't like about Kuiu are two things. 1) You can't try it anywhere, as i know. What happens if you ask for a little and it doesn't fit? 2) You have to deal with customs with Kuiu. My friend was caught with customs when he asked for some. Early season system- Sitka Open Country Ascent pant and Jacket. Very light and elastic. No element protection Mid season system- Sitka Open Country Timberline Pant (amazing pants) jetstream jacket (windstopper). Very flexible system with layer options. Last season's system/sit hunting- my mid-season system with Kelvin Pant and Jacket underneath. That's very hot almost too hot is to walk a lot. I think I want the fanatical pants/bib and jacket to replace my end-of-season setup. I think it's best to hunt trees and get hot. My lower back cools down with my current setup at the end of the season. I think the big-time bib is going to fix this. It also has the super packable light weight Gortex (Dew Point, I think it's called) and expensive Sitka Open Country rain equipment. Stay at the bottom of my backpack until it's necessary. 30/07/2016, 23h20 Date of action: May 2007 Posts: 3.119 Another to consider is the Kryptek Attitude if the hunting of the sticky mountain. 31/07/2016, 07:26 AM Join Date: Jan 2013 Location: Calgary Posts: 978 Recently bought the Kuiu Guide pants and Guide jacket. I chose this level since they will work well for cooler weather fighters where I'm moving/climbing and can layer up a bit to still hunt/glass. I didn't even consider buying Sitka because of the cost. Yes, I paid some tax on this setup, but it didn't even come close to the cost of a comparable Sitka system. I would have gone with First Lite before Sitka. I tried the jacket recently on a reconnaissance trip to retrieve some photos from the game camera. It rained all weekend and although I put a shell over the guide jacket for part of the day, it didn't leak when it was the outer layer. I slept with my jacket and stayed warm all night in a tent that was full of rain. Very happy with the setup and looking forward to using it this fall. _____ 31/07/2016, 16:08 On board Date: Aug 2009 Location: Langdon, AB Posts: 377 Have any of you checked the UNEP equipment on your website?
