Students from Malabo and Bata have taken access exams for the Gepetrol grants. The exam took place simultaneously in both cities at the facilities of the National University of Equatorial Guinea.

30/05/2016

Within the framework of agreements for cooperation signed between GEPETROL and the National University of Equatorial Guinea (UNGE) to offer grants for studying at the institution, an access exam was held on Saturday 28th May for the Gepetrol grants.

There are various grants offered for both students from Malabo and those from Bata. The exams took place simultaneously in the two cities.

The Director General of GEPETROL

"After the exams, those who pass will go on to the next phase of selection for the Gepetrol grants. It will consist in demonstrating merit, such as the verification of the personal file, We are examining technologies of computing and communication. We are in mechanical engineering, electronics, oil, translation and interpretation, among others. The general aim is to contribute towards the work of the Government in training human resources for the country. These are not resources for Gepetrol, but for the country in general. What we are doing is above all taking a serious step in the Gepetrol selection process, where the merits of each student will be paramount".
