

I'm not robot  reCAPTCHA

Continue

Likes dislikes worksheet islcollective

If you are looking for some of the best likes and dislikes of games and activities for ESL/EFL classes, then you are certainly in the right place. We will have lots of these, along with likes like worksheets, lesson plans, questionnaires and more. Continue reading for all the details you need to know about likes vs dislike TEFL activities. Likes and Dislikes ESL GamesLikes Dislike ESL Activities: Top 25Let's get in at best who dislike ESL games and activities.#1: Likes/dislikes SurveysI love to use surveys in my classes—just ask my students and they'll tell me the same thing. They are ideal for ESL/EFL classes because they cover a range of skills, getting students interacting with others and also the fact that they are well suited for a variety of subjects. Of course, they are perfect for the device on likes and dislikes. Learn more about designing your own here:ESL Surveys.#2: Do you like to _____? This is a simple but fun ESL activity that requires nothing in the way of preparation or materials and is perfect for likes or dislikes. How it works is that students write down certain things they like or don't like on strips of paper. Then the teacher collects them all and distributes them around the class. Students have to mingle and ask questions in English to find their matches. Find out how to do this activity here:Do you like to _____? ESL Activity #3: Phone Speaking GameOne of the funniest ESL talking games is phone. I'm sure you remember playing it as a kid. The way it works is that students get into teams of 5-10 students in a single row. Then the teacher gives the first students a sentence and they have to cross it down the line. The last student compares what they have with the original. Results? Usually hilarious! In this case, you start with a sentence such as the following:I like banana, watermelon and peach ice cream but I don't like asparagus, pepperoni pizza or blue cheese. Find out more about how to play this game here:ESL Phone Game.#4: Like and dislike board gamesI love playing board games so it makes sense that I get my students to play them too! With a little training, it's super easy to design your own in just a few minutes. In this case, you would like to fill the board with lots of similar/dislike issues. For example: What's something you liked as a kid but don't like now? What kind of food do you like? Where do you like to eat out? What kind of food do you hate? Find out all the details on how to make your own TEFL board games here:Board Games for TEFL.#5: LikeS Songs and ChantsIf you teach the kids, then you'll surely want to use some songs and chants in your classes. It's a fun way to introduce new vocabulary and reinforce important grammar points. If you're not musical, don't worry! There are lots of excellent options on YouTube, including this one:#6: Flashcard my opinion, flashcards are one of the most underrated ESL teaching resources. For kids, I almost never set foot in a classroom without them! In this case, a super-simple speaking activity you can do it to hold up a flashcard to a student. They can tell if they like that thing or not. For example:I like bananas. I don't like apples. Of course, there are lots of other things you can do with them as well. Here are some more ideas:ESL Flashcard Activities.#7: ESL Role-PlaysIf you ask students what they want to work with in class, they will often say conversation or speak. However, this can be a bit difficult for beginners as they often lack vocabulary and grammar to be able to speak freely. One way to bridge the gap is with role-playing because they offer a certain structure. But they also offer some freedom for students to complete the conversation as they please. In this case, the conversation may be something about likes/dislikes. For example, a conversation about where two students would like to have lunch together. Find out more details here:ESL Role-Plays.#8: Rock-Scissor-PaperAn ESL game that you might want to consider working on likes vs dislike, this is easy one. The way it works is that you do a lot of questions/answers related to likes or dislikes. Then cut them up into strips of paper and distribute them around the class. Students have to mingle with each other to find their matches. When they do, rock-scissors and the winner take both papers. You want to give it a try? Read more here:ESL Rock Scissor Paper ESL Speaking Activity.#9: Likedislikes Play and Pause ESL Speaking Activity for Kids #10: ESL Clothing and Fashion Games and ActivitiesClothing is really a matter of personal taste and probably no two people are exactly the same. It's a nice context where you can talk about likes and dislikes. The good news is that there are so many engaging, interesting things to do with this device. Here are some of them:ESL Clothing Activities.#11: Conjunction ActivitiesA nice way to introduce conjunctions (and /men/or/so) is related to likes and dislikes. For example:I love vegetables but I do not like fruit. My sisters like football, swimming and tennis. My dad doesn't like his job so he leaves as soon as possible after work is done. For some of the best activity ideas, you'd like to check this out: ESL Conjunctions.#12: ESL Running Dictation GameOne of the most versatile ESL games is running dictation. It covers all four skills in a single activity, gets students out of their places and having fun and best of all, can be used for any subject or grammar point. In that case, you'll need to find a conversation filled with examples of likes and dislikes. The textbook you use in class can be a good source for this. Read more about it here:ESL Running Dictation Game.#13: Dialogue SubstitutionHave ever noticed that many grammar and vocabulary concepts are introduced through a dialogue in ESL textbooks? However, it's probably also the case that your students are kind of like mine and just blow through them without really paying attention to what they're reading. Of course, it's not the students' fault—it's just that we haven't given them a reason to slow down and pay attention to what they're reading. One way to combat this is to remove so of the words and students must read as well as fill in the gaps. In this case, remove things related to likes and dislikes. Find out more information here:ESL Dialog Substitution Activity.#14: WH Question Games and ActivitiesW and H issues lend themselves particularly well to likes and dislikes. For some of the best ideas for activities and games to use with your students for who/what/when/why/how questions, you want to check out the following:WH Ask Activities.#15: Like ESL Games for Young Students #16: Just a minuteAn easy-talking activity that's perfect for likes and dislikes is just a minute. It is challenging and best for high-intermediate or advanced level students. The way it works is that every student has to speak for 1 minute without stopping about a particular topic. For example, foods they like or dislike. Or, their style and what things they like to wear. Check it out for yourself:Just one minute ESL Speaking Activity.#17: Just One QuestionThis is a survey activity that is perfect for likes and dislikes. How it works is that in pairs, students have to ask their classmates an interesting question, compile the results and then report them to the class. It requires a range of skills and some serious teamwork. Learn how to try it with your students:Just One Question Survey Activity.#18: Disappears TextA nice option to review sentence construction for likes/dislikes is to disappear text. Write a sentence on the board and students must speak it out loud. Then you delete the words one by one and the students will eventually say the sentence, but there will be nothing left. Find out all the details:Disappearing Text Review Activity.#19: Likes Dislikes ESL Activity #20: Me Too! ESL Speaking ActivityThis is a simple speaking activity that is perfect for reviewing likes/dislikes. How it works is that students have to make a statement about something they like or don't like. If another student had the same opinion, they had to stand up and say: Me too! Here's more information about it:Me Too! ESL Speaking Activity.#21: Discussion Starters Likes and DislikesI tell students to talk to a partner about things that and don't like for a certain amount of time, you can be met with silence! The better way is to give some direction and discussion starter issues. They are something concrete for students to deal with if they get stuck and sure what to say. Here are some of the best choices:Discussion Starters for English Learners.#22: Dictogloss with Likes and Dislikes ExamplesIf you teach more advanced level students, try this challenging listening activity. Find, or write a paragraph with someone who talks about things they like and don't like. Then you put the students in pairs and read the passage at a faster than normal pace for the level of the students. Students must take notes and compare them to a partner to try to recreate what they just heard. Repeat the process again. Ultimately, students compare their version to the teacher's version. Check it out:Dictogloss.#23: Memory CircleThis is a nice review activity to talk about things that people like or dislike. Students can say a sentence with something they like or don't like. Then the next student must repeat it and then add their own. The game continues until people can't remember and one person is left standing. Read more about it:Memory Circle.#24: Like and Dislike Vocabulary AuctionThis is a fun sentence building activity that works very well with like/dislikes. Make up a lot of sentences using the target vocabulary. Then, cut each word up and mix them up. In groups, students offer words that they believe will help them make full sentences. After the bidding, there is a trading session. Finally, the winner is the group with the most complete sentences. It takes some preparation time to do it, but it's totally worth it! Students love this activity. Find out more:ESL Vocabulary Auction Game.#25: Do you like? Song for KidsLikes and Dislikes QuestionnairesThere are some excellent ones that dislike questionnaires and surveys that you can find online that are perfect for TEFL classes. Here are some of them to consider using:Pearson LongmanITESLJESL PrintablesLikes Dislike WorksheetSWhy invent the wheel if you don't need to? There are lots of excellent likes and dislikes of spreadsheets online:ISL CollectiveESL PrintablesLike vs dislike activitiesALike and dislikees esl lesson planIf you are a busy English teacher, then you know what a game-changer it might be to just use a lesson plan already done for you. Just print it out and take it to class. There's a lot of good out there—here are just some of the best for likes/dislikes:ESL Kids StuffTEFL HandbookEnglish Lesson PlannerDid you like these Likes vs Dislike Games and ActivitiesYes? I thought so. Then you will love this book over at Amazon: 101 ESL Activities for Teens and Adults. The key to better English classes is a wide range of interesting and engaging games and activities and this book will help you get there in style. The best is that it well organized in sections from speaking to writing to grammar and icebreakers so you can find what you're looking for in just one or two. Less time for lesson planning? What a teacher doesn't love it! Pick up a copy of the book to keep in your office to use as a handy reference guide. Or, consider taking the digital version with you on your tablet, phone or laptop to your favorite coffee shop for some lesson planning on the go. It's easy with the free Kindle reading app. Head over to Amazon to pick up a copy for yourself, but only if you want a serious dose of ESL teaching awesome in your life:Does your Say about Dislike games for ESLDo you have a top pick for a like and dislike game or activity for ESL? Did you try one of them from this list? Leave a comment below and let us know what you think. We'd love to hear from you. Also, be sure to give this article a share on Facebook, Pinterest, or Twitter. It will help other busy English teachers, like yourself find this useful resource. Dislikes ESL activities and gamesLast update on 2020-12-02 / Affiliate links / Images from Amazon Product Advertising API API