Goldey-Beacom College Named to Money's 2025 Best Colleges List

Wilmington, DE – Goldey-Beacom College (GBC) has been recognized by Money as one of America's Best Colleges for 2025, a distinction that highlights the institution's commitment to expand access to quality education, empower students and transform the campus through innovation, sustainability and academic excellence.

Each year, Money analyzes hundreds of institutions nationwide, evaluating them on graduation rates, affordability, financial aid, alumni outcomes and more. For 2025, only 732 four-year colleges met the rigorous standards required to earn a spot on the list.

"Goldey-Beacom is proud to be recognized among the nation's best colleges by Money," said GBC's President, Dr. Colleen Perry Keith. "This honor reflects the dedication of our faculty and staff who provide students with the tools to achieve their goals and our commitment to keeping a GBC education affordable and accessible."

According to Money's profile of GBC, 96% of undergraduate students receive grants, the average graduation time is 4.2 years, and typical early career earnings for graduates are nearly $60,000. These outcomes underscore the College's focus on pairing strong academic preparation with real-world value.

GBC joins the list alongside other leading public and private institutions recognized for balancing academic excellence with affordability. The full Money 2025 Best Colleges list and methodology can be found at money.com/best-colleges.
