

Wisconsin Lutheran College is proud to announce they have found who will lead the future of WLC men's basketball. Mr. Aaron Aanonsen has accepted his offer to become head coach after 11 years with Lakeland University where he had successfully fielded several fantastic teams and established a winning culture. Coach Aanonsen recognizes that making this jump will be a big change for him. During his time spent with Lakeland University, he has built strong relationships with others involved in Lakeland University athletics and has made a difference in his players' lives. However, he says that Wisconsin Lutheran College has welcomed him with open arms, and he is excited to build new friendships with WLC faculty and WLC basketball players, and to make a positive impact on them both on and off the court. Coach Aanonsen has noticed the success that Wisconsin Lutheran College has seen athletically and as an institution in general. He is thrilled to work with all of the wonderful staff that WLC has been blessed with within the athletic department, but he is also proud to represent a nationally-ranked institution that has seen great graduate and job placement success rates. Mr. Aanonsen is looking forward to coach the Warriors in his first season next year. As of now, he says that he does not currently have specific goals for the men's basketball program, but he certainly foresees the team being an elite force in the Northern Athletics Collegiate Conference for years to come. Coach was sure to point out that he sees his new opportunity as a way to continue building winning basketball teams here on WLC campus, but he specifically sees a special fit for him because of Wisconsin Lutheran College's foundation in biblical principles. The future of men's basketball is bright. Welcome, coach Aanonsen!
