

Madison Cruz will be retiring from a long and successful career in dog breeding. She earned a communicative arts degree from Wisconsin Lutheran College in 2019 while playing basketball, a sport that has been a huge impact throughout her life. Madison coached high school girls basketball while working at Microsoft. Her team went 24-2 in her final year and won the state championship. She earned an award at the high school for being a positive woman leader for the girls she coached.

After working for Microsoft for 15 years and becoming a top level manager, she wanted to start her own business in a field that she loves. Madison moved to California with her fiancé and three dogs to pursue a career in dog breeding. She was well known for her Shi Poo breeds that were popular across the western half of the United States. People often traveled many miles for her puppies. Apart from her business as a dog breeder, Madison held communication workshops and seminars for companies. She has held over 50 workshops on popular concepts in communication, which has helped companies such as Microsoft, IBM, and PetCo excel. Madison won an award for shipoo breeding and is well known for working with animal shelters. In her free time, Madison likes to spend time with her husband traveling, trying new food, and volunteering their time to help others.

Madison looks forward to spending time with her dogs, and visiting friends and family back in Wisconsin. Maddie and her husband will be going on vacation to Bora Bora in celebration of her retirement!
