

Alvernia University

Alvernia University in Reading, Pennsylvania, is a private Catholic university known for its close-knit community and strong focus on ethical leadership and service. Founded in 1958, it offers small class sizes and a student-centered learning environment. The university also plays an active role in downtown Reading through initiatives like the CollegeTowne project, blending education with community development.

Alvernia University offers over 50 student clubs, including cultural, academic, and service organizations. The Campus Activities Board hosts events like Fall Carnival to build community spirit. Through the Holleran Center, students engage in local service projects, strengthening ties between the university and the Reading community.

1:14

Student to Teacher
Ratio

27 total intercollegiate athletic programs

