La Salle University Business Systems and Analytics | Finance
West Chester, Pennsylvania, United States

Summary

Currently a student at La Salle University in Philadelphia. Majoring in Business Systems and Analytics along with Finance. I am certainly a member of the "River" as Nate Silver puts it in his book "On the Edge." I have passion for anything numbers-related, math is strong personal subject of mine, particularly statistics and probabilities. I have always been fascinatinat with calculating probabilities and thinking through an analytical lens. Using data to make informed decisions intrigues me. Tied in with this, I am very interested in the world of sports, and more specifically, sports analytics and sports-betting. I am always on the look out for arbitrage opportunities in the sports world, and am always hunting for inefficiencies within some books. I have tied in my love for sports with some formal positions. I have two staff-writing positions under my belt, that were primarily focused on sports. I have also used my love for numbers to get into poker. I have been playing poker ever since I can remember, and have been growing as player, primarily through analytical tactics such as GTO. I am a baby investor, very new to that world, one that has fascinated me since I was very young. Through readings such as Liars' Poker, The Big Short, and Moneyball.
