The lumineers ho hey song

Years from now, when those who do such things look back on the cultural phenomena that grabbed the attention of our nation, it will be impossible for them to avoid the Ho Hey of lumineers. And why would they ever want to avoid it? There's a reason the song has become so ubiquitous in the times since it humbly made its national debut on the CW drama Hart of Dixie back in 2011. From there, it worked its way into commercials and movie trailers, was covered on the ABC show Nashville and in concert by Taylor Swift, and even received the ultimate tribute: A late-night parody from Jimmy Fallon and friends in chicken suits. The song rolled to #3 on the US charts and was a Top 10 hit in countries around the world, which is quite remarkable considering the simplicity of the chant-along title that anchors the song. In fact, it harkens it back to the golden days of rock and roll, when songs with nonsensical titles such as Who Put The Bomp (In The Bomp, Bomp, Bomp), Tutti Frutti, and Do Wah Diddy sounded like the most profound poetry of radio listeners. Make no mistake though: Ho Hey is not a novelty song. Although the text does not follow any kind of linear history, they are full of passion and heart. Lumineers frontman Wesley Schultz sing them with a unique combination of vulnerability and power, putting not only his heart but also his guts on his sleeve. Love we need it now, he sing. Let's hope for someone / 'Because oh, we bleed out. It is almost impossible for this song to fade in the background, which was exactly as Schultz had thought when he wrote it back when he was still living in New York, before his disillusionment caused him to move to Colorado. In an interview with American Songwriter in 2012, he explained exactly what he was trying to achieve. That song was an attempt to get under people's skin at shows in Brooklyn, where everyone is quite indifferent, he said. And I thought if we could puncture it with shouts, we could get someone's attention. Well, not just Brooklyn, but while the world paid attention to the song, so missions performed. Too often, the songs that are played endlessly for a certain amount of time wear out their welcome quite quickly. For all its ubiquity, Lumineers' Ho Hey still sounds fresh. Wesley Schultz sings early in the song: I can write a song. He wasn't kidding. 2012 single by The Lumineers Ho HeySingle by The Lumineersfrom the album The LumineersReleasedJune 4, 2012ReIndie folkLength2:43LabelDualtoneSongwriter(s)Wesley SchultzJeremy FraitesProducer(s)Julius GatumaThe Lumineer's singles chronology Ho Hey (2012) Stubborn Love (2014) Ho Hey is a song by the American folk rock band The Lumineers. It was released on April 4, 2015. The music video was released on 11, 2012. Ho Hey reached number 18 non-consecutive weeks on the Billboard Rock Songs chart, as well as two weeks in the top spot on the Billboard Alternative Songs chart and eight weeks in the top spot on the Adult Pop Songs chart, reaching number 3 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart, becoming their first single to do so, as well as their first top 5 single. It also reached number two on the Billboard Mainstream Top 40 chart, behind Locked Out of Heaven by Bruno Mars. It is also their first single to be certified in the United States. Background information The song was originally created during Schultz and Fraite's time in New York as a kiss-off to disinterested concert-goers. That song was an attempt to get under people's skin at shows in Brooklyn, where everyone is pretty indifferent, Schultz told American Songwriter. And I thought if we could puncture it with shouts, we could get someone's attention. [1] The composition Ho Hey is written in the key to C major. A McIntosh MC240 amplifier was used in the recording. [2] The song was a commercial success and was a breakthrough hit for Lumineers. It debuted on the Billboard Hot 100 at number 90 on the week of June 10, 2012. From there, it became a sleeper hit, slowly rising the bar until it broke into the top ten in week 10. [7] It has also sold over four million copies in the United States as of April 2013. The song also became a crossover hit, topping Adult Pop Songs, Rock Songs, Alternative Songs and the Triple A charts[9] and reaching number two on the Pop Songs chart, topped only by Bruno Mars' Locked Out of Heaven. [10] It was also mapped on adult contemporary[11] and country airplay charts. [12] This success in several formats made it possible to reach number two on the Hot 100 Airplay list[13] and remain on the Hot 100 for 62 weeks, one of the longest charts ever. The song also had international success, reaching the top ten in the UK, Canada, Ireland, France, Israel, Italy, Slovakia, New Zealand, Australia and Switzerland. Critical reception Ho Hey has received positive reviews from critics. Anne Erickson of Audio Ink Radio gave the song a rating of 4 out of 5, comparing Wesley Schultz's vocals to the song with Raine Maida. Erickson went on to say that it's refreshing to sit back and bring in some real, straightforward music that comes from the heart. [14] Rolling Stone named the song the 26th music video for Ho Hey on September 11, 2015. The video was directed by Ben Fee. The video shows the band walking down a hall in the former Vista Hospital while singing and dancing to the song. In popular culture Before its release, Ho Hey was first featured on December 5, 2011, the episode of Hart of Dixie. [16] [17] Later, the song was used in a TV commercial for Bing 1. [18] [19] In the UK, the song was used in an advertisement for E.ON, in the last episode of sitcom Cuckoo as well as ads for the film Silver Linings Playbook. [20] A purely instrumental version has been used in an advertisement for Blue Moon beer. The song appears as a playable track in the video game Guitar Hero Live. Ho Hey appears in the premiere episode of the eighth season of Bones, The Future in the Past, which aired on May 17, 2017. The song appears in the fifth episode of the tenth season of The X-Files, Babylon, which aired on 15 September 2015. Referenced in the text, Canal and Bowery are crossing streets in lower Manhattan, New York City, NY where bus routes arrive and depart from different parts of the United States. The song appeared in The Vampire Diaries Season Four episode three The Rager introduces the character Hayley Marshall Dekker In the sixteenth episode of the first season of Nashville, the characters Maddie and Daphne Conrad covered Ho Hey. [21] This version, credited to the actors' real names Lennon and Maisy Stella, debuted at number 58 on Country Airplay dated for the week of April 27, 2013, and reached 47. [22] Blog Taste of Country reviewed their cover positively, saying that The Stellas redefines the song's message, and made it an adorable statement between two sisters. [23] Taylor Swift covered Ho Hey on the 2013-2014 tour, The Red Tour. The song was part of the entire tour and was shattered by Swift's own song, Stay, Stay, Stay. Ho Hey was the only song that was part of the nightly list as a cover. [24] Parodies On Late Night with Jimmy Fallon, an all-clucking cover of the song was performed by an ad hoc group called The Chickeneers, starring Jimmy Fallon, Blake Shelton and Nick Offerman in chicken suits.
