These items are covered under a separate Limited Warranty along with other non-suspension items listed above. Rough Country's Lifetime Replacement Warranty and Limited Warranties are non-transferable and may only be enacted by the original purchaser of warranted equipment. These warranties do not cover the removal or installation of our products.

When enacting a warranty claim, Rough Country will need to verify that you are the original purchaser and may require photos of the defective or damaged part(s). You must provide a copy of the Bill of Sale, a valid order number or other transactional documentation to verify your purchase. We advise storing your receipt in your glovebox, or printing your order confirmation e-mail for safe keeping.

FMVSS
126 COMPLIANT

As a part of our ongoing quality initiatives, we have tested our product and passed the Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard No. 126 test. Through a series of specialized tests designed, we have ensured that the installed Rough Country suspension system did not interfere with the vehicle's Electronic Stability Control (ESC) system - now standard on new model vehicles.

ESC systems use automatic computer-controlled braking to assist the driver in maintaining control in critical driving situations. The NHTSA estimates ESC systems will prevent up to 238,000 injuries annually once all vehicles on the road are equipped with this new technology.

As part of Rough Country's continued commitment to quality and safety, our products were thoroughly tested on a closed-course and monitored by computer to ensure there was no interference with ESC systems. In third party testing a trained driver simulated a "loss-of-control" scenario causing the ESC system to activate and regain control. After analyzing the data it was proven that Rough Country products in no way interfered with on-board ESC systems.

Rough Country prides itself on offering high-quality products with an impeccable reputation for safety. This certification is yet another step in our ongoing effort to provide our market with superior products at an unbeatable value.
