

Choosing The Right Business

ENTITY CHOICE IS JUST THE BEGINNING

When starting a new business, or changing the form of an existing business (e.g. from a sole proprietorship to a corporation), a business owner should seek the assistance of a qualified business attorney to assist the owner in choosing the most appropriate form of entity for the business activity.

Business attorneys provide more than “fill in the blank” forms that often leave a client with an incomplete process. A qualified business attorney will be able to discuss and provide advice on the form of the entity, such as sole proprietorship, corporation, LLC, partnership or limited partnership as well as entity structure, financing, tax election, employment relationships, and insurance coverage.

Web sites and self help products are no substitute for thorough analysis, consultation and follow through that come from a trusted advisor when starting a business or changing the business entity’s form.
