

Christina Bissonette

December 22, 2014

Dear Christina,

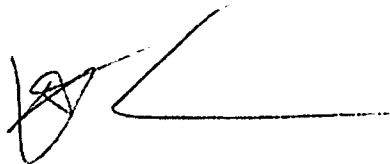

I'm really sorry for my conduct. While I did not intend to make you uncomfortable, I understand that you have been hurt. For that I am truly sorry. I feel embarrassed and ashamed. It was very poor judgment on my part, and not with any intention to place you in a compromising position. By no means was my behaviour acceptable in any way.

When I mentored you for embalming, I valued you as a keen apprentice. My impression of your work ethic is that you take your job very seriously. In my experience working with you I have observed that you are thorough with the tasks that are presented. I find you bright and eager to learn. You pick up on tasks easily and fast.

I truly want you to become the best embalmer that Kearney's has to offer and I believe that you have the skills to achieve this. I would hate for my poor judgment to stand in your way from achieving this.

Once again, please accept my heartfelt apology. I am willing to do whatever it takes to ensure you feel comfortable and supported in your apprenticeship.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to be 'Kevin Rostek', with a long horizontal line extending to the right.

Kevin Rostek