What to say at your Mission Possible drop off!

"Hi, my name is _______ and I am a constituent of ________ and a volunteer at MomsRising.org; a national organization with over a million members across the United States, including many right here in this district. May I please speak briefly with your chief of staff or appropriate representative to give them some materials?"

If no one is available, just speak to the person who received you. When the staff person that you’ll be handing the mini-book to is there, you can say:

“Hello! I’m a volunteer with MomsRising, a million member organization, and here’s a MomsRising Mission Possible book with first-hand accounts from families that show the need for policies like paid sick days, paid family leave which includes maternity leave, as well as early childhood education and childcare, and more to boost our economy and our families. Would you please see that the Senator/Representative gets these materials? Thank you!”

It’s easy! And fun!

Make it a mini-celebration of sharing the voices of moms. Speaking of which, don’t forget to use your mobile phone to take fun pictures along the way — you could take a picture of the #Mission Possible mini book with the sign outside the door that has the name of the member of Congress showing, or even a picture or video of the staff member holding the page. Email your pictures to Nina@MomsRising.org so we can inspire other people to do their deliveries done too.
