

The next congressional recess is right around the corner. Between Friday, April 7 and Sunday, April 23, members of the Senate and House will leave Washington and return home for two weeks. We cannot let up the fight to protect our health care - Speaker Paul Ryan is promising to bring forward another bill to repeal the Affordable Care Act. And just days before recess is set to begin they have promised to make their already bad bill worse. Their latest repeal effort would allow states to eliminate protections for those with pre-existing conditions.

We need to send a strong message over the next few weeks to #ProtectOurCare. Stop trying to repeal the Affordable Care Act.

Here's where things stand right now: (1) The House had to pull their health care repeal bill after at least 30 Republicans refused to vote for it. (2) At that time, Paul Ryan admitted, "Obamacare is the law of the land. [...] We are going to be with it for the foreseeable future." (3) Flash forward and Paul Ryan and other House Republican leaders are back at it, talking about bringing their even worse repeal back after recess. President Trump and Republican operatives are urging him on and there will be tremendous pressure on House members to go along, even those who publicly opposed the Ryan bill before.

So what does that mean: The Affordable Care Act is still under threat and we need to intensify pressure to make sure Republicans get the message that repeal has been rejected and it's time to give up on repeal.

Demand that Congress #ProtectOurCare

Republican efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act failed because people loudly rejected their plan to rip away health coverage from 24 million people and raise health care costs for millions more. Instead of working to improve our care and fix the law, House Republicans have said that in the next few weeks they'll once again try to repeal the law - putting partisan politics before the health and financial security of tens of millions of people in America.

Ask

Keep it simple and demand Republicans #ProtectOurCare. Stop trying to repeal the Affordable Care Act.

Key Questions to Ask Members of Congress

Members need to keep hearing from their constituents so they understand that it's time to give up on repealing the health care law. Remember: Keep it personal. The best and most impactful questions are ones where someone shares their story about what the Affordable Care Act has meant to them or their family.

1. Do you agree with Speaker of the House Paul Ryan that you should not work with Democrats to fix the Affordable Care Act and work together to bring costs down?
2. Will you give up on repealing and replacing the law with anything that results in people losing their health coverage and increasing costs?
3. Choose your own issue: It's clear that people are against the American Health Care Act - will you pledge to never vote for legislation that:
 - a. Creates an age tax that makes health care more expensive for people between the ages of 55-64?
 - b. Guts Medicaid by shifting costs to states through a block grant or per-capita cap and rationing the care of seniors, kids and people with disabilities?
 - c. Allows insurance companies to stop covering basic services such as prescription drugs, maternity care and cancer screenings?
 - d. Stops women from getting their health care from a Planned Parenthood?

4. Do you think the Trump Administration should be working to strengthen the individual market versus trying to sabotage it?

Talking Points

The Republican health care repeal bill was really bad for people and now Republicans are talking about making it even worse. Instead of working together to make a better health care system, they're giving into the demands of the extreme-fringe.

- At a time when Americans are concerned about health care being too expensive, the Republican repeal effort would raise premiums by 20 percent, even charging people over 50 five times more than younger people, increase out-of-pocket costs and deductibles, while leaving 24 million more people uninsured.
- Caving to extreme parts of their party, Republican leaders made the bill even worse - letting insurance companies stop covering basic services such as prescription drugs, doctor visits or cancer treatment.
- Now, Republicans are talking about allowing insurance companies to once again deny care to those with pre-existing conditions.
- Medicaid cuts and changes to health insurance rules would have dramatically cut access to mental health and opioid use disorder treatment.

It's time to move on. Republicans were unable to repeal the law because the American people - along with a bipartisan majority in congress - want to keep the law's protections and key components.

Republican Senators, Governors and even Republican Members of Congress joined a bipartisan majority to oppose repealing health care because of key provisions of the Affordable Care Act that they wanted to keep: access to affordable care, Medicaid expansion, essential health benefits, protections for pre-existing conditions and much, much more. They all admitted that repeal of health care would increase costs, cut coverage and stop insurance companies from covering basic services.

The Affordable Care Act is more popular than ever. Polls show voters don't want it repealed. They want Democrats and Republicans to work together to bring down costs - for coverage and prescription drugs - to protect patients and to make sure even more people have access to affordable coverage.

- The Kaiser Health Tracking Poll shows the ACA has the highest favorability since it began polling—more than 60 tracking polls ago and Pew Research had support at an all-time high.
- The newly released Quinnipiac poll had only 1-in-5 supporting full repeal.

The Administration has complete power to make the exchanges successful. Now that efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act are over, the Trump Administration and Congress have a responsibility to make the law work and to do everything in their power to keep the Health Insurance Marketplaces healthy and stable. The Affordable Care Act is the law of the land. It is the government's responsibility to make sure it works for people and that competition is strong.

If the Republicans break our health care system, they will be held responsible - if you break it, you own it. As the Wall Street Journal editorial board recently wrote, "Republicans run the government and that means they are responsible for what happens in health care."

- President Trump regularly cheers for his plan is to sabotage the law, but the American people will not tolerate the Administration rooting for people to suffer in order to give them political gains.
