Conversation Guide

Many people are gathering friends and family to listen to the Ready to Resist call together this Sunday. Use these questions to help lead a conversation to deepen learning and commitment to action. Together, we are building a movement to dismantle white supremacy.

You can stream the call live at moveon.org/readytoresist. If you RSVP'd for the call, you'll receive a phone call from a 202 area code around 8 p.m. ET (7 CT/6 MT/5 PT) Sunday to join the call. The slide presentation and the audio recording will be posted at moveon.org/readytoresist immediately after the call ends Sunday; a transcription of the call will be posted there by 4 p.m. ET Tuesday, August 22.

You can find additional resources and a list of Ready to Resist partners at www.moveon.org/readytoresist.

Post-call Facilitation Guide:

1. What's one thing a trainer shared on the call that you found particularly meaningful or new?
2. How has your understanding of white supremacy changed or deepened in the past week?
3. What actions are you committing to take to help dismantle white supremacy? How can those of us here help support you in that commitment?
