God Send Us Men

"God send us men alert and quick
His lofty precepts to translate,
Until the laws of Right become
The laws and habits of the State.

"God send us men with hearts ablaze,
All truth to love, all wrong to hate;
These are the patriots nations need,
These are the bulwarks of the State."

THE BULWARK OF LIBERTY

What constitutes the bulwark of our own liberty and independence? It is not our frowning battlements, our bristling seacoast, our army and our navy. Our reliance is in the love of liberty which God has planted in us. Our defense is in the spirit which prises liberty as the heritage of all men in all lands everywhere. Destroy this spirit, and we have planted the seeds of despotism at our own doors.

— Abraham Lincoln.

Growth of Forests and Churches

No one sits down in a forest to watch a tree grow. Photographers with the relatively new technique of time-lapse photography have been able to produce motion pictures of beans sprouting or flower buds bursting into bloom. Such changes, though too slow for the naked eye to detect, are fairly fast. The growth of a tree would not be recorded as easily on film. The children's literature and figures have been released as to how much the growth annually and in a single day. Dr. Norman D. MacLeod, chairman of the Rhode Island Forest Industries Committee, reports on the growth of all the forest timber in the United States and coastal Alaska. He includes all timber down to five inches in diameter, grown in the United States, at the rate of 17.7 billion cubic feet annually. If that is a big hand to comprehend, one may think in terms of daily growth. The same authority states that our nation's forests grow enough in one day to produce lumber for 15,500 one-family homes. That would mean an annual growth of 2,083 billion board feet - enough to meet the nation's need for 50 years at the present rate of consumption. The bright side of the picture, which Mr. MacLeod called the most notable fact in the 1957 forest situation, was the rapid growth of our young forests. Forests grow and churches grow. How much they grow over a given period is interesting news projected against a background of history which also reveals large differences in species growth and dead timber. How they grow and how they can be made to grow faster to meet the needs of present or future generations is a problem to be discussed rather than a news story to be told.

One does not sit down in a steepled edifice once a week in hopes of seeing the church grow. The church, just as the large number of the churches and Sabbath Schools, has sent the Holy Spirit upon them at Pentecost with power. Ordained men have their responsibilities today, but it is equally true that with the commitment of life to Christ at conversion every believer is commissioned to be a witness for Christ in the Judgment if he stops trying to be one.

In this generation rests the great responsibility for church growth. The giant redwoods of California do not die on the stump. They defy the biting insects, gnawing worms, and other adverse forces of nature. Meanwhile they send out shoots and encircle themselves with growing trees so that when death does overtake these open spaces where they stood is called a cathedral, walled by their towering successors.

FEBRUARY 3, 1958

Jesus for a statement about the kingdom of God. His reply in part was, "The kingdom of God come not with observation; it is like a grain of mustard seed which, when it is sown in the ground, is the smallest of all seeds; yet when it is sown it grows and becomes the greatest of plants and shade is given under it." The Greek word in the text implies intense watching. How ready we are to glue our eyes to the visible aspects of church growth. It is so much harder to see the growth within the kingdom than the kingdom within. Forest watchers may produce accurate figures; church watchers never.

The question still remains, how can we promote that growth which is so hard to measure yet is God's will for us? It may be that the ordained ministers, the laymen in their laity, and the church can be held responsible. They are of great service in helping people to cultivate the Word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," that Word by which our tempted Lord said man shall live and grow.

It is true that Jesus ordained His few disciples and commissioned His chosen apostles, sending the Holy Spirit upon them at Pentecost with power. Ordained men have their responsibilities today, but it is equally true that with the commitment of life to Christ at conversion every believer is commissioned to be a witness for Christ in the Judgment if he stops trying to be one.

In this generation rests the great responsibility for church growth. The giant redwoods of California do not die on the stump. They defy the biting insects, gnawing worms, and other adverse forces of nature. Meanwhile they send out shoots and encircle themselves with growing trees so that when death does overtake these open spaces where they stood is called a cathedral, walled by their towering successors.

So must the Seventh Day Baptist Church grow. Like trees in the forest we should not count the unmeasured growth of the church of the nation than the increase of the cubic feet of timber in the forests of our country. To count numbers without measuring spiritual condition is like counting trees, not of our kind, can get their start and grow in the moisture-laden soil which we have helped to prepare and preserve.

Trees are but symbols. They never climb to heights above nature's realm. Beauty they have, but not love. Forests grow by the lately achieved foresight of man and the natural provision of God. Churches grow supernaturally. We cannot here make detailed suggestions as to methods to be employed by laymen. Our special issue next week will be helpful in that respect.

Have we ever fail to find a way? Where love is lacking there might possibly be some visible growth, but where love exists as a dominating force there is bound to be such straight biological increase in the spiritual board feet of the church. It is no wonder that love is exalted even above faith and hope in the trillium of grace. Gal. 5:13. Let us make sure that we have love!
Editors and Contributing Editors

It seems wise to call attention periodically to the relation between the general editor of a publication and special editors or contributing editors. It is only natural that many people shall be saved by their own efforts in a relationship when the editor lets several years go by without commenting on it.

Our year turns over the editorship of one issue each quarter to another editor who is responsible for all the content of that particular issue with the exception of one or two brief introductory articles by the managing editor. Since these special issues also go out to regular subscribers under the name of the Sabbath Recorder, editors care fully chosen. They are men who can be counted upon to handle well their special assignments and to keep their material in harmony with denominational standards of belief and practice with all due regard for what the majority of subscribers want or need. We believe our people should have confidence in the judgment of these well-chosen editors.

Every week our magazine lists contributing editors chosen by their respective boards to edit or prepare material relating rather specifically to the areas of service represented by the board. The amount and arrangement of material from contributing editors in a given issue has to be under the control of the general editor. He consults sometimes with these contributors as to the content of articles to appear under the board headings but prefers to let them use their own judgment. The relationship is cordial and intimate and is fostered by frequent meetings of the denominational Planning Committee which involves two of the three contributing editors.

The general editor is normally held responsible by the readers for everything within the covers of the magazine, he encourages the readers to note the authorship of specific articles and gives credit in their minds to the individual writers for the opinions expressed. The editor is glad to answer questions but again, where possible, invites the reader to correspond directly with the writer.

The Church and Her Purpose

Very soon following the resurrection and ascension of Christ, churches began to be established—a church in a city, a church in someone's home. What was the purpose of these churches? It seems to have been for a mutual encouragement of one another in the Christian faith, for an opportunity to worship God together and to think about outreach. We find the urging that they continue to teach the doctrine taught by the disciples. They met for worship, not only when one of the apostles was there, but regularly; and they sent out workers to other places and helped to support workers in other areas.

Basically, this is still the purpose of the church. One may be a Christian by himself, but he can do little to bring Christ to others as long as he is by himself. There is a need for a working together with others in Christianity even as he feels a need to work with others in his daily job.

This provides an opportunity for fellow Christians living in the same community to come together as a united force for Christ.

There is a continual need for refreshment in the worship of God. The church helps to meet this need as her people meet in worship. The church is God's people. They sing together, the preaching of God's truth helps to keep one renewed in the spirit and challenged to live according to the truth of God.

Christians need encouragement. Again the fellowship in the church with the opportunity to share experiences and to feel a common purpose should provide an encouragement. The study together of God's Word helps to light the Christian's path in life.

The commission is to take the Gospel to the ends of the earth. No one individual can do this alone. The church, Christians working together, can call out leaders and support them in this work of Christ.

Scouting and the Church

The Boy Scout movement is not directly related to any particular denomination but on the local level it frequently ties in very closely with an individual church. Sometimes it will be saved by its own efforts and with the leadership drawn largely from that church. The general training of a Boy Scout has a certain amount of religious emphasis, one of the much stressed laws being "A Scout is reverent."

There is, however, a much closer relationship to Christian service than is possible in the over-all Scout program. We refer to one of the most coveted awards, the God and Country award which is entirely under the supervision of the church. Pictured here are three Boy Scouts of the Adams Center, New York, Seventh Day Baptist Church who have been under the leadership of a Scoutmaster connected with the church and under the training of the pastor. It was on November 2, 1957, that these three boys were awarded in public ceremony this honor which was earned over a long period of time as they served their church.

The requirements for this God and Country award are very strict and also call for a good deal of personal initiative. For instance, it is required that the boys have a good knowledge of the Bible, read it regularly, and demonstrate an ability to lead in public prayer. Beyond that they must be able to explain the doctrines of the church, show a knowledge of the complete missionary work of the denomination, and take a position in leadership in local and community church service.

These are but a few of the requirements.

The week of February 7-13 is Boy Scout

Week. At this time all Scouts who have earned the God and Country award will attend church service in uniform and will again be recognized. The theme for the week is "Onward for God and My Country."

The National Headquarters for Boy Scout work is located at New Brunswick, New Jersey, not far from Plainfield. From this office come figures indicating the wide influence of the Scouting movement, an influence for good over millions of boys in the younger age bracket. It is reported that there are 1,385,000 Cub Scouts, ages 8, 9, and 10. The organization counts 1,110,000 Boy Scouts 11, 12, and 13 years of age. In the older group are 400,000 Explorers from 14 years old and upward.

In emphasizing the strictly religious organizations such as Christian Endeavor and Youth Councils, it is well for adults to remember also this other great organization for boys which has the potential of developing real leaders in the church if the church takes advantage of its opportunity in providing volunteer leadership and in promoting the organization among its boys. Seventh Day Baptists can have a vital part in this if they assume responsible positions of leadership and channel the activities of the local troop in ways that are consistent with Seventh Day Baptist principles and practice.
devoted to your service and the service of our great imperial family to which we all belong. But I shall not have the strength to carry out this resolution alone unless you join in it with me, as I now invite you to do. I know that your support will be unfailingly given.

Have you ever made such a vow to serve the Lord all your whole life? Our fellowships have been in order that either we should be able to have us make such a covenant with Him and He would be most happy to provide the spiritual strength and the leading of His Holy Spirit to help us keep the vow.

WOMEN'S WORK — Arabeth M. DeLand

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

(Written by Mrs. Walter Wilkinson, chairman of the Christian Culture Committee of the Women's Board.)

The first Christian prayer came from the lips of the Virgin Mary, mother of Jesus (Luke 1:46-55). That prayer was a vision of the Kingdom of Love, possible through the power of our Lord Jesus Christ. That vision, submerged though it was through the Dark Ages, comes forth again as a resurrection to individual souls who listen to God. In 1887, Presbyterian women, believing in the power of prayer, began observing a day for united prayer for homes. In the early nineties, two Baptist leaders issued a call for foreign missions, but not until 1919 was the same day observed for both fields, by women of different faiths. The following year, this observance had spread to Canada. Since then, with the aid of mission workers and missionaries, and women, numbering approximately 60,000, from all theWide world, besides twenty thousand communities in the U. S. A., the first Friday in Lent has come to mean the World Day of Prayer. It brings with it a vivid realization that all together they constitute the household of God, the World Christian Community.

Dawn of the World Day of Prayer breaks over Tonga Island, west of the International Date Line, where Queen Salote leads her devout subjects in prayer. Hour on hour, songs of praise and prayer, in one thousand and sixty-eight languages and dialects, rise on continent and island throughout the day, closing with the service on St. Lawrence Island in Alaska.

The purpose of the World Day of Prayer is twofold: First, to unite all Christians in a single prayer—each one to share in a fellowship of prayer with others around the world, and to witness to their belief that prayer has the power to bring the world day by day, closer to the King of the world's will. Second, to bring their offering of love, that the regular projects and special requests may be effectively administered.

These projects, in home missions, cover a wide field, including religious activities for five thousand Protestant Indian students in government boarding schools in nine of our western states and Alaska; training of rural pastors and establishing Vacation Church Schools in low income communities; working with migrant children.

Overseas, education for Christian Leadership is making its unique contribution in colleges and universities in Japan, Korea, India, Hong Kong, and Africa. Women, especially, are eager to make use of these opportunities, and readily assume responsibility for community development.

Each year the National World Day of Prayer Committee of the United Church Women invites women from a different country to write the service. In 1959, the service will come from the women of the Near East. This year the women of Australia, including the aborigines, have prepared the service. The theme, "The Bread of Life," is universal in its content, using Isaiah 55:1 and 2: 3-4. The following prayers, used in the printed service, were prepared by the Aboriginal women.

Most High Father God, may Your love go into all parts of the earth, and may the people of all nations learn to know Your great truths and goodness. May each one be able to teach their children that only through Him can the people of the world have true happiness and lasting peace. — Mondal of Goulburn River.

You know, O God, that a very small leaf on the ground can mean that big roots are underneath. So we pray that even a little light from You, touching the heart, will mean that men and women will know of a very great love coming from You for them. We pray that this love will lead to repentance until everyone will have beard the story of Your Way. — Nalambana and Mijamawus of Millington.

The theme, "The Bread of Life," reminds us that bread is one of the richest symbols of our Christian religion. The spiritual idea of bread for the soul is closely linked with the physical necessity for bread for the body. As He taught the multitudes on the hillside Jesus was mindful of their physical hunger, He fed their bodies as well as their souls and minds. He did not say, "Man does not need bread," but, "Man shall not live by bread alone." On the folder of the day's program is a picture of wheat, which suggests bread; on the World Day of Prayer, which celebrates the whole world, both bread that feeds the body and knowledge of its maker, the worldwide relief, book publishing, accounting, public relations, as well as many others.

Upon different occasions my attention has been called to the need of secretaries and typists in the Division of Christian Education offices. It seems to me that there is a fine opportunity for Seventh Day Baptists youth to enter into religious work. Anyone who has ability along secretarial lines is urged to write the Seventh Day Baptist Board of Christian Education. We'll be happy to investigate job possibilities.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION — Sec. Rex E. Zwibel

JOBS IN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

The following ad appears in the January, 1958, edition of the International Journal of Religious Education: "Our New York City offices offer a variety of opportunities for people who want to use their skills in Christian service. Secretaries and typists work in such areas as television production, field work, world relief, book publishing, accounting, public relations, as well as many others."

Christian Endeavor Letter

President, International C. E.

What a moving experience was ours in the Public Auditorium in Portland, Oregon, last summer. During our great International Christian Endeavor Convention there was a host of young people and leaders of youth rallied under the banner 'For Christ and The Church.' That theme made the heart throb of the great assemblage there and brought to every point in this North American continent.

And that theme has echoed down through the decades as Christian Endeavor has stood for the things that count for Christ and His Church. We stand on the threshold of a new year. With God's help it can be a year of advance — in every direction. Let us work in Christian citizenship — a year of advance

Sabbath School Statistics

On page 239 of the 1957 Seventh Day Baptist Year Book are the totals for the Sabbath School and Vacation Church School activities for 1957. Everyone active in Christian Education will be interested in comparing them with the ones on page 224 of the 1956 Year Book. Neither are completely accurate as several Sabbath Schools did not report. The one encouraging figure is the number reported in youth activities.

in our program of alerting, winning, and training youth.

Millions have been and are being influenced by this great movement. I am convinced that you want to be a part of this vital ministry for Christ and the Church.

Abraham Lincoln

A God-Fearing Religious Man

By J. Fred Whiteford

Former Director of Public Relations at Milton College

Lincoln's mother knew the early years of a child's life were the habit-forming ones and evenings reading to little Abe from the only book they owned, the Holy Bible. She died when the lad was 9 years of age, but had helped him memorize long passages from both Testaments and had him promise to take the Good Book as his guide through life. After becoming nationally known, Lincoln said: "All that I am or hope to be is due to my sainted mother."

In early manhood Lincoln had a period of doubt concerning certain passages of Old Testament Scripture. While debating with a young agnostic, Joshua Speed, he said: "Josh, you must take all of the Bible you can with reason and the rest with faith."

In his law practice, public addresses, Thanksgiving proclamations, and in both inaugural addresses Lincoln made frequent and tremendous use of Scriptural passages. To his political leader, Theodore Parker, Lincoln said: "My first love is God, then man, then nature."

In Springfield and Washington Lincoln attended Presbyterian churches. When asked by one of his pastors why he did not join a church, his well-known reply was:

"I have never joined a church because I have found it difficult to give my assent, without mental reservations, to the long complicated statements of Christian doctrine in their beliefs. When any church will inscribe over its altar an act of homage to the faith of membership, the Master's statement of both the LAW and the GOSPEL as found in Mark 12: 30-31, I will join that church with all my heart and all my soul."

The reader will recall that Christ called the first "The Great Commandment," the second "Like unto it" and added, "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

In one of his earlier political campaigns an "Elder" Peter Cartwright publicly called Lincoln an agnostic and a scoffer at religion. Lincoln felt compelled to reply publicly: "I have never denied the truth of the Scriptures. I have never spoken with intentional disrespect of religion in general, or of any denomination of Christians in particular...."

Apropos of human slavery Lincoln said: "I know slavery was the injustice of slavery: I see the storm coming and I know HIS hand is in it. If He has a place and a work for me, and I think He has, I believe I am ready. I am nothing, but TRUTH is everything. I know I am right because I know liberty is right, for Christ taught it and Christ is God. ... As I would not be a slave, I would not be a master — this expresses my idea of democracy."

In his farewell to neighbors and friends spoken from the rear of the train about to start for his first inauguration Lincoln said in part: "I leave not knowing when or whether ever I shall return (his life had been threatened) with a task ahead greater than that which rested upon Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being who ever attended him I cannot succeed. With that assistance I cannot fail. Trusting in Him who can go with me and remain with you and be everywhere for good, let us fondly hope and pray that all will yet be well. To His care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend me, I bid you all an everlasting farewell."

Early in the Civil War following a series of disastrous defeats a group of clergymen came to the executive offices in great consternation and bluntly asked, "Mr. President, do you think God is on our side?" Lincoln stretched up to his full 6 feet and 4 inches and replied: "Gentlemen, I am not at all concerned about that — but it is my constant anxiety and prayer that this nation shall be on God's side. Go back to your churches and pray for THIS!"

In the Bible was the foundation of Lincoln's pure and precise literary style. It was also the basis of his system of righteousness expressed in law. He reserved an upper room in the White House for his own personal use when faced with crucial problems. "It is here," he told his law partner, Herndon, "I get down on my knees and pray for guidance when I do not know what to do."

The heart of Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg Address shows his reliance upon God's help: "... that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom. . . ."

A proclamation issued by Lincoln after the 1863 reverses reads as follows:

We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of Heaven; we have grown in numbers, wealth, and power as no other nation has ever grown. But we have forgotten God. We have grown, and we have become too vain, too conceited, to think that we could so perish. But God has not so consigned us as aliens and revilers. We are tell-tale; we cannot oppress, we cannot humiliate without a feeling of conscience that goes to heaven, to God, we cannot get rid of that conscience. Our one hope in the condition under which we are now involved, is to beipmap to God through Christ, to be reconciled to him. . . ."

Had Lincoln lived, it is improbable that the nightmare of "carpet-bagger" government could have occurred following the war, or that all compensation for the enormous economic losses due to freeing the slaves could have been made. Had Lincoln lived we might have been able to impress upon the owners of the hateful power of the vengeance of the times. His lofty reconstruction plans are beautifully worded in the closing paragraph of his second inaugural:

"The second cause of the hostility between the Protestant churches and urban culture," he declared, "is Protestantism's chronic moralism and its insistence upon formulating its moral judgments of city life on the ethic of rural and small town traditions."

[Dr. Douglas is a New York City church executive. It is possible that some of the moral judgments referred to come from the Ten Commandments.]

Missionary Appetizer

The next regular issue will carry the story of some of the far-reaching actions of January 26 meeting of the International Missionary Council as told by the corresponding secretary. Soon to be made public are the plans for nonurban culture as being more favorable than city life to the growth of religion and therefore as being in some sense more pleasing to God and more favored with the Divine sanction.

"Other Folds and Fields" Missionary Council in Ghana

The first meeting of the International Missionary Council under its new constitution ended January 8 near Accra, capital of Africa's newest republic, Ghana. Discussion of the proposed merger of the IMC with the World Council of Churches occupied a large part of the time. There seemed to be serious and philosophic willingness to make every concession to those who wanted to study it further. As a result of delaying opposition to it, the proposed merger was referred to member councils and to the next meeting of the WCC Central Committee in Denmark next summer. The discussion for merging the IMC into the World Council as a new Division on World Mission and Evangelism was dropped.

To provide time to study the merger further, the World Council was requested to defer its assembly, scheduled for Ceylon in 1961. This possible change of date will also be taken up when the WCC Central Committee meets again.

Ockenga on the Air

The first three Sundays of February Dr. Harold John Ockenga can be heard on the NBC network. Featured with him will be singer George Beverly Shea and Light and Life Hour Choir. Dr. Ockenga, an author and speaker much in demand, is pastor of Park Street Church in Boston and president of the Board of Trustees of Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena.

Copies of his messages will be available to the public following the National Association of Evangelicals, 108 North Main Street, Wheaton, Ill.

Polar Preachers

Two U. S. navy chaplains, a Protestant and a Roman Catholic, comprise a clerical team which travels in modern circuit-riding style to serve their South Pole parish in Little America. Lieutenant-Commander John E. Zoller, former pastor of Grace Community Church in Oakland, Calif., is the Protestant and Lieutenant Leon S. Darkowski of Pittsburgh, Pa., is the Catholic chaplain, at Little America, scene of the United States' scientific studies during the International Geophysical Year.

The two chaplains traveled together during Christmas week to conduct services for Navy and civilian personnel scattered over a 2,500-mile stretch of Antarctica. Traveling by Navy skyray and helicopter, the chaplains took along their portable altars and Communion sets, as well as a batch of mail. They conducted services in some of the chapels, tents, garages, and in the open air.

In the great upsurge of church membership and attendance, loyalty and belief are distressingly shallow, says William Peters in the November issue of Redbook magazine.

NAE Appoints New Field Director

The National Association of Evangelicals has brought the Rev. Mahlon L. Macy to the headquarters office to assume the newly created post of field director. The move took place January 1.

He begins his new work with a considerable backlog of experience. He pastored churches in Oregon, California, and Washington. Both in Camas, Washington, and in Portland he was active in cooperative efforts with Youth for Christ, the Billy Graham Crusade, and other denominational agencies. While in Portland he also served as president of the Holiness Ministers' Fellowship. He has served on the Board of Publications of the Oregon Yearly Meeting of Friends.

Distributing Special Issues

"We believe that each active Seventh Day Baptist will want to hand out at least a few copies of this special issue. Possibilities might include placing them in barber shops, beauty shops, hospital reading rooms, doctors' offices, and schools. Will you cooperate in this effort to present in the area around us the truths as held by Seventh Day Baptists? You can help by: 1. Joining in prayer for the editing of this devotional and reading of these issues that Christ may have His way in the hearts of people. 2. Sharing your ideas for the effective distribution of this issue. Doing your share in handing them out, mailing them, or otherwise placing them in the hands of the public."

Heart to Heart Talk

Do you expect to be a doctor? Many of our young people are looking forward to such service. Some are already in medical school who were only making plans a few years ago have now gone into home or foreign practice. The time quickly flies.

If you do become a doctor you will find many new tools, many modern inventions which will make your work more easy and more sure. You can know more about the human heart than anyone now knows.

On my desk are two newspapers which came the same day. One of them has a picture of the little broadcasting device which we mentioned in previous heart-to-heart talks—a tiny three-fourth-inch microphone which can be pumped through the arteries into the heart. The other is a new invention of the Burdick Company at Milton, Wisconsin. It, too, is pictured. I'll tell you about it.

The Burdick people call this new cardiac monitor the Burdick Telecor. It would seem strange to most of us that after so many years of progress we have not been able to develop the means of listening to the thumpety-thump of a human heart. Perhaps you were asked or an evangelist at church or camp reminded you that the heart of God is reaching out for your heart. Perhaps you were asked to bow your head and to listen while God was speaking to your heart. Something like this may have been done recently at the Billy Graham meetings at Madison Square Garden. Hundreds of teen-agers evidently saw the heart of God in a new way and heard His heart speaking to them. Their hearts responded and their whole lives were changed.

This kind of heart-to-heart talk between God and youth has been possible all through the years of Christian history. Do you respond in your heart to the call of God? There is no need of new instruments to make it possible for God to see and hear what your heart wants to say to Him.

Wide Observance of Youth Week

Thousands of Protestant churches in North America have just completed the annual celebration of Christian Endeavor Week (January 26 to February 2) which had its beginning in 1913. Since 1944 the week has been observed jointly with the United Christian Youth Movement. C. E. Week extends around the world in all major denominations, states Dr. Earle W. Gates, president.

From the headquarters of the International Society of Christian Endeavor comes this plan to maintain the strength of this pioneer youth organization.

Thousands of societies in Protestant churches in North America, with approximately one million members, are included in the International Christian Endeavor. The World's Union counts in its membership three million members in more than fifty national or island groups, encompassing eighty denominations. Headquarters for both the International Society and the World's Union are located at 1221 East Broad Street, Columbus 16, Ohio.

Announcement is being made of a Radio and Television Script Writing Contest in connection with the 1959 C. E. Week observance. Entries must be submitted by April 1, 1959. The deadline for the Household of God" (Eph. 2: 19).

"I like winter with its clear, cold nights, and the stars, like silver-headed nails driven into the vault of heaven." — Dr. G. C. Macdonald, author and minister, deceased, "Christianity Today.

Mabel Titsworth Rogers

A tribute by the faculty of the Georgia State College for Women

Miss Mabel T. Rogers joined the faculty of the Georgia State College for Women in February, 1919, and for thirty years served as a member of the science department. Dr. Mabel Rogers showed herself to be a person of high ideals and the possessor of the qualities of true greatness. She had faith, faith in God and in her fellow man; she was kind, gentle, and understanding always, but never would countenance work of an inferior quality. Her personality was enhanced by a delightful, "quiet" sense of humor and a loyalty that endeared her to everyone who knew her.

Her love of the out-of-doors was so great that it spilled over into the lives of her students, her associates, and into the life of the community itself. A charter member and officer of the Georgia Ornithological Society and the Milledgeville Audubon Society, she was never happier than when leading a birdwalk, at dawn, at dusk, in valley and little hills that never had names until she drew names upon them: Jack Oak Ridge, Honey-suckle Bower, Violet Hill, Rainy Creek, Squirrel Hollow, and many a name of the old South.

For many years Miss Rogers taught a Sunday School class at the Georgia Training School for Boys and served as a counselor for the Boy Scouts of America. From more than fifty national and island groups, and other Georgia community groups on the conservation of wild life. Her penetrative understanding and her enthusiasm will live on in her friends, her students, and her students' students. In her passing, we, the faculty of the Georgia State College for Women, have lost a beloved colleague and friend.

"In as much as Miss Rogers was an honored and a respected member of the staff of this College and retains a revered and warm spot in our memory, be it resolved that this expression of appreciation for her character and service be spread upon the minutes of the College and that a copy be sent to the local newspaper and to her family."
THE SABBATH RECORDER

generally assisting in the work of the church. Although we are few in number, we have been able to make an impact in the work of the World Mission, have started working toward installing running water in the church, and have a fund started toward the purchase of a new organ.

Recently a monthly series of lessons on Sabbath School work and teacher training was started under the direction of Miss Ellen Swinney and will continue for 8 months. We feel we were greatly blessed in many ways during 1957, and pray that we may do even more for the Lord during 1958. — Correspondent.

SECOND HOPKINTON, R.I. — Though our active members are very few, our church paid its regular expenses this year and one half the expense of its pastor to Conference in Milton, Wis., besides sending $276 to Our World Mission. For our blessings we are thankful.

As Pastor Mills was busy as camp leader our Sabbath service on July 13 was omitted and for a few weeks. Pastor and Mrs. Mills attended the meeting at Ashawog School at Covina, the proposed site for the American Bible Society's Christian Endeavor Rally. Another issue of Eternal Life was sent to Mrs. Roy (Vida) Harris of Anchorage, Alaska.

By Letter:

Bond — A son, David Leon, to Allen and Katy Bond of Marion, Iowa, on Dec. 9, 1957.

Tiefenthal — A daughter, Carol Aaurand, to Dr. and Mrs. Harlan (Marguerite Aaurand) Tiefenthal of Pittsburgh, Pa., on Dec. 10, 1957.

Plus to twenty. Mrs. Robert Henry served effectively as narrator.

Five colored spotlights of variable intensity were used to produce truly arresting effects, especially during the tableaux. Nancy Withrow made a particularly convincing angel; Clarence Boatman and Marjorie Lewis held the crowd's attention at the christening of the infant Christ.

On Christmas Sabbath, December 7, with a fitting sermon, "We Believe in the Bible." A special offering was designated for the American Bible Society.

Universal Bible School was observed December 7, with a fitting sermon, "We Believe in the Bible." A special offering was designated for the American Bible Society.

The final sermon of the closing year was "Our Belief in Eternal Life." The old year dies but we hold our deathless hope of eternal life in Christ. A special offering was taken up in Sabbath School toward the purchase of a mission car for Jamaica.

Sunday, December 28, was another high day for the young people of the Riverside and Los Angeles Churches. Pacific Pines Camp teemed with life and enthusiasm from the hours of 9:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. "Walking in the Light" was the theme, with Miss Betty Lewis in charge. The brand new movie in the new lodge was used for the first time. Next day was Junior Snow Day at Pacific Pines from 10:30 to 3:30 with Pastor Wheeler and Mrs. Rex Brewer as sponsors. — Correspondent.
