Let us ask these questions:

1. When persuasion fails do we turn to legislation? It is manifestly the responsibility of the church to teach and preach its doctrines with conviction. We could wish that the church were more successful in this great task of bringing Christian training to the people in the pews. The observance of Sunday is variously regarded by the several denominations in their official statements. Some appear to attach the same authority as that given to the seventh-day Sabbath in the Scriptures, while others do not claim any relationship between the first day and the seventh.

Christian leaders have often lamented that the official position of their church is not regarded by the general membership when it comes to the observance of Sunday as sacred time. The preaching and teaching ministry of the church has not been convincing at this point. Now, is it not the duty of the church to ask where it could not persuade? All the first day and the seventh.

2. Do American Christians want business to cease on Sunday? The answer to the question would appear to be no. It is not even certain that ministers and councils of churches actually represent their people on this issue. If all church-going people ceased Sunday shopping the problem would not exist for the churches. The fact seems to be that an increase in business is often noted immediately after the church hour of worship. That simple fact cannot be ignored in the discussion of blue laws.

3. Is there any place to stop with Sunday legislation? The nature of business and commerce is such that the problem of regulating some businesses and not others is very complex. For example, what about drugstores which sell a remarkable variety of merchandise? What about grocery stores that are almost department stores? Competition overlaps considerably from one type of business to another. When Sunday closing is mandatory some businesses will be discriminated against. Blue laws have always created more unfairness in the business world than they have ever alleviated.

From time to time Congressional committees have considered whether Sunday legislation is right and proper. The following is an adequate defense of the position of most Sabbathkeeping Christians and is in complete harmony with the position of the Seventh Day Baptist General Conference:

The proper object of government is to protect all persons in the enjoyment of their religious as well as civil rights, and not to determine for any whether they shall esteem one day above another, or esteem all days alike holy. We are aware that a variety of sentiment exists among the good citizens of this nation on the subject of the Sabbath; and our Government is designed for the protection of one, as much as another... One denomination of Christians justly celebrated for their piety, and certainly as good citizens as any other class; agree with the Jews in the moral obligation of the Sabbath and observe the same day... It is not the legitimate province of the Legislature to determine what religion is true, or what is false... It is a right reserved to each citizen; and certainly as good citizens as any other class, agree with the Jews in the moral obligation of the Sabbath, and observe the same day... Is it not the legitimate province of the Legislature to determine what religion is true, or what is false... It is a right reserved to each citizen; and while he respects the equal rights of others, he cannot be held amenable to any humbler tribunal for his conclusions. Extensive religious combinations to effect a political object are, in the opinion of the committee, always dangerous.

All religious despotism commences by combination and influence; and when that influence begins to operate upon the political institutions of a country, the civil power soon bends under it; and the catastrophe of other nations furnishes an awful warning of the consequence.

The Heavens Speak

In ancient days the Psalmist who had seen only the handiwork of God in the heavens and none of the handiwork of men wrote of speeches in the heavens which declared the glory of God. He completed the first verse of Psalm 19 with that beautiful parallel. And the firmament shows this handiwork.

Today we can accept those poetic words, in all the fullness of their original meaning, and perhaps with the added luster that comes from our less contemplative experiences. David, with upturned face, went on to sing of the day uttering speech and of a line "gone out through all the earth." We cannot match his expression or comprehension with what we see and hear from our sunlit sky above and of the moon and stars. He saw them from the earth as it ran its daily course in the heavens which God, in His Spirit, sent unerringly from that ancient plane and its occupants or to earth, was indeed to give Himself for the sins of all man.

Voices from the heavens are glorious, but the real story of heaven come down to earth, which was glimpsed by David and the prophets, came to realization when the Creator revealed Himself to the creatures able to appreciate His love and redemption. This revelation was by Him who was the agent of creation and was willing, and able, to give Himself for the sins of the world, Jesus Christ the Lord. He who now sits at the right hand of the Father speaks to us from heaven and His Spirit "witnesseth" to each of us, telling us who have believed that we are the children of God.

New Jobs Needed

The work force in the United States continues to be in need of workers. It is estimated that between now and 1970, when the work force will reach 87,000,000, there will need to be found a million new jobs a year. The church membership is for church membership to increase much more rapidly than the population. Do these figures mean that churches, too, must put to work a proportionate amount of the 8 to 10 million members who may be expected to be added to their total membership?

What is the potential increase of members and workers in the Seventh Day Baptist denomination between now and 1970? Here is indeed a challenge. There was a time when increase in the population of the United States was not so much by birth as by immigration. Then Seventh Day Baptists could not hope for a proportionate increase because most people were not born Seventh Day Baptists. But in the countries from which the immigrants came, there were Seventh Day Baptist churches and had never heard of our people.

We have just passed through a generation that began in a depression. Times were hard; families were small. We are sometimes called "a peculiar people." When that term is used in the sense of 1 Peter 2:9 it is Peter's term. Seventh Day Baptists are not different from others in terms of vital statistics. If families in general are small then Seventh Day Baptist families will show the same tendency. Possibilities for natural growth manifestly are less in such a period. Perhaps we have overlooked that fact when we have tried to find reasons for lack of growth.

On the other hand when the population is increasing rapidly by the expansion of family units our families are larger also. There is no question but that our young people have been marrying young and have been having larger families than a generation ago. Between now and 1970 another and larger generation of young folks of Seventh Day Baptist background will have come to maturity. In this lies a great challenge, and there is some reason to hope that we are going to try hard to meet it.

The obstacles to rearing children in the faith of our people are great but probably not greater than in previous years. If we fail now we may fail into the future. We must make our homes strong, our churches strong. Our churches are, for the most part, filled with growing children. The potential is great. Will our progeny be with us when they marry and start families of their own? For years we have recognized that it depends on natural increase without strenuous efforts at evangelism was bound to mean net losses in our membership. We have hidden our light, using the finery excuse... of emotionalism and the questionable methods of some evangelists.

Now evangelism is again finding favor among us at a time when it and the training of young missionaries provides a glorious opportunity for growth. Will we be satisfied with small growth or will we really shake ourselves like the sleeping giant and take full advantage of this potential? What will our growth be in terms of our logical opportunity among the uncommitted millions recently born and our opportunity to plant seeds of faith in our children and our children's children?

There is before us a future bright with promise: How many new jobs will be needed each year among us?

The Something-for-Nothing Era

With the cancellation of practically every major give-away television program, it is possible that at least one phase of our something-for-nothing era is vanishing. It is another illustration of how quickly something can fade away that seems to have permanence. It was such a very short time ago that all America seemed satisfied with the entertainment offered on the popular Quiz programs that brought such quick wealth to a considerable number of people. But once the era is on its departure, What will become of the uncommitted millions recently born with faith in our children and our opportunity to plant seeds of something-for-nothing era is over? What will become of the uncommitted millions recently born with faith in our children and our opportunity to plant seeds of our society than these tense quiz shows of "unlabeled make-believe." Should we rise up and demand integrity in the whole field of advertising? That is exactly what we are doing in our own field of work—whether the allegation completely false claims of the liquor and tobacco interests on radio and TV are not challenged frequently enough. The subtle advertisements of these products that contribute so directly to personal and social suicide have no inherent right of entrance to the homes of the unsuspecting.

Have Christians lost their crusading spirit? People who long ago, for the future, for the Crusades, historically, showed more zeal than knowledge. Our Lord used a better figure, challenging His disciples to be lights in the world. We are in the world but must be willing to take the somewhat lonely way of living above the carefree world. And of pointing the average man to that same higher pathway, which is not one of unearned money or unlabeled make-believe.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Abolish Leper Colonies

"Unclean, unclean!" has through the ages been the cry required of lepers when approached by those not afflicted with the dread disease. In more recent years Christian missions and other agencies have established leper colonies to give a better environment for the incurables and to provide more treatment for those who could be cured. In such colonies the cry, "Unclean," is not heard. Now a committee of experts of the World Health Organization is recommending the abolishing of all leper colonies. They claim that since the discovery of the drug sulfone, hooded lepers, who constituted the world's 12,000,000 lepers can just as well be treated at home. Leprosy is no more dangerous than other communicable diseases when the drug sulfone is used.

The Bible tells us that sin is like leprosy. No modern discovery of man can eradicate this disease, which afflicts far more than 12 million people. If all sinners were to be treated by this drug it would be a universal cry of "Unclean." With the malady so widespread isolation colonies are out of the question and mass treatment is not effective. Fortunately (if we may use the term), provision has been made to encourage the soul-destroying disease in a personal way. The medicine came from heaven and is heaven-pure. When the 'Balm of Gilead,' Christ the Saviour, is received individually into the heart the uncleanness of sin is taken away.

We still need sin colonies — that is, colonies for the rehabilitation of cured sinners where they may be fed the "milk of the Word and the strong meat, too." We call these colonies churches. In them we should learn how to go forth individually in an organized way to extend this gracious gift of life which we have found.

Stop Praying or Stop Smoking?

Mothers, if you are expecting and are also smoking you should either stop praying for a strong-hearted, healthy baby or you should stop smoking. Don't sabotage your own prayers by adding nicotine to the bloodstream of your unborn infant. Dr. M. F. Ashley, one of our most brilliant medical experts, states that smoking mothers are undoubtedly responsible for the increase in cardiac trouble. He goes on to say that a single puff of cigarette smoke inhaled by a pregnant woman increases the heartbeat of a seven-month fetus from 140 to 179 times a minute. Dr. Ashley, who is a popular women's writer, goes on to say in no uncertain terms what the American Medical Society has said about cigarettes and their danger to the future health of their children.

An Explanation

In our advance publicity of the November special issue of the Recorder and particularly in the issue of November 2 we advertised an article, "A Catholic President, Pro and Con." Due to space limitations that developed in arranging the passages this article of the editor, Kenneth Smith, had to be omitted. It is hoped that readers of our weekly will get an opportunity a little later to consider the pros and cons of this question.

THE SABBATH RECORDER

President's Message

PASTOR — PEOPLE RELATIONSHIPS

In these months, while we think together of the giving of self for Jesus' sake, we are in particular need of social and emotional development. The Development Program offers us. One of these areas of emphasis which we need to examine truthfully is personal relationships within the church.

These relationships involve the pastor and his people. Then the reverse is true: they involve the people and their pastor. In our local churches how much we need to establish that two-way free flow of comment and criticism between pastor and people, that seems to have distinguished the Christianity of the early years. How much we need a spirit of Christian com­ raderie that will enable us to speak freely on any subject and to exchange ideas with­ out rancor. How much we need a unity of purpose and vision that can be established by frankness in discussion and meekness of heart and common faith, and by these things only.

These relationships involve the individual members of the church in their contacts with one another. What a detri­ mental and false witness to the power of God in human life today is that offered in Jesus Christ, when those who are called His are not united in personal faith in Christ? Are we truly bound together in the bonds of Christian love?

We are! We are so far as we have given ourselves for Jesus' sake. Pride and selfishness in all their innumerable forms are conquered only by personal commit­ ment to Him who is our Lord and only as His likeness grows "The fellowship of the Saints" becomes an integral and formative part of life when we give ourselves "for Jesus' sake."
The Rev. Rene Mauch is pictured here painting the name "Messenger" on the side of his 24-foot boat in which he is about to embark for British Guiana, S. A., where he will use it in his evangelistic work along the numerous rivers of that country. The inset shows the missionary looking out of the opening in the stern through which he can service the outboard motor attached to a bracket welded to the stern. Note provision for an auxiliary motor on the bracket in case the larger motor fails. These two pictures appeared separately in the Sunday edition of a Montreal French newspaper (350,000 circulation) which told the story of Mr. Mauch and his boat and identified his work as "Contributed," Nappanee, Ind.; Sunday, 27, N. 10, 1959.

John Soper, superintendent of the local Sabbath School, Mrs. Orvis Chapman led the song service.

Delegates and friends gathered around the picnic tables in nearby Sycomore Grove for noon lunch, then returned to the church for a "hymn sing." The young people's service opened with a vocal duet and a trumpet solo. Using the music "Youthful Laborers," four young people showed through prepared talks how the lives of John, Timothy, Mark, and Mary were dedicated to serving Christ.

In the evening a consecration service was held for Miss Sarah Becker. A talk entitled, "Ambassadors," was given by Mrs. Francis Saunders who planned the service. Following this talk, Dr. George Thorngate, former missionary and co-worker of Miss Becker on the China field, gave the consecrating prayer, preceded by a short reminiscence of the time spent with her on the field and a commendation of her to the people. As a part of the consecrating prayer, and with great reverence, the combined Riverside-Los Angeles Choir under the direction of Miss Lois Wells sang a beautiful and thrilling arrangement of the hymn, "Lard, Speak to Me, that I May Speak," which became a consecration not only of Miss Becker but of all who sat in the service.

Social activities for the young people included a social at the home of Mrs. Elizbeth Bonhill, Sunday night after the evening service and a "pancake breakfast" the following morning.

Sunday morning, Miss Becker was in charge of the devotional period, and Mrs. Gleason Curtis led us in our song service. Three phases of "Lay Development" discussion were planned by Philip Lewis, a member of Commission. Workshops were led by Miss Geri Hargis, Albyn Maclin- tosh, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bonhill. Summaries of the thoughts expressed in the groups were brought back to the assembly.

The business session ended the Semi-Annual Association fall meeting and we were adjourned by our president, Jack Gregory.

Ambassadors

By Lila Saunders

(A talk given at the Sarah Becker dedication service during the Pacific Coast Assn. meetings.)

To aspire to the office of an ambassador is to desire the highest diplomatic office any country has to offer. There are many lesser posts which may be held, but it takes special training and special dedication to be an ambassador.

Tonight we honor one who has given herself to be an ambassador for Christ in the far-off country of Africa. As we think on this let us consider for a few moments some of the peculiar qualifications which must be met in order to fill this very high office.

Citizenship

No matter what training one has had for the post of a diplomat, he must be a citizen of his country in order to represent officially the country for which he works. No foreign person or alien may be an official representative of any country.

Where is our citizenship? Philippians says in chapter 4, verse 3, "... whose names are written in the book of life." This was undoubtedly drawn from the registration of the tribes of Israel which speaks of being "written in the writing of the house of Israel" (Ezek. 13: 9). To be written into the house of Israel was a high honor, indeed, but how much more to be written in the book of life. Where is our citizenship? We look to heaven. Jesus Christ says in chapter 4, verse 13: "I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which neither you nor your friends nor your fathers knew." So our ambassador has her message given to her: "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." (Acts 1:8). This is the message given and as Paul said later, "I am determined to know nothing among you but Jesus Christ and him crucified." This corresponds to what Jesus said, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations" (Matt. 24:14).

An ambassador must be completely dedicated to his work.

It is a full-time job. He must give himself wholly to it, not just a part of himself. Let me illustrate this sort of dedication. Years ago, a plain Methodist minister fell in love with the world's unlovely. In his very own picturesque phrase, he came to where he actually hungered for hell. He pushed out into the midst of the East End of London. For days he stood in those seething streets, muddy with men and women. He drank it all in, and loved it because of the souls he saw. One night he went home and said to his wife, "Darling, we'll never have it. I have given you and the children, to the service of those sick souls." She smiled, and took his hand, and together they knelt and prayed. That was the beginning of the Salvation Army, and of the great work of William Booth.

Yes, a true ambassador must be completely dedicated to the work to which he is called, and certainly one can see that sort of spiritual dedication in Miss Becker who will serve as our ambassador.

An ambassador is sent to a foreign country.

He must learn the language of the people, speak in their way of life, mingle with them, and find for himself the way in which he can best represent to them the country from which he is sent. A special ambassador for Christ going to a foreign country often fills a place which no other can. Christ gave the command to "heal the sick." The one whom we dedicate to her work tonight will go with a full and complete knowledge of the duties entrusted to her, healing the sick bodies of people whom at this time she knows not, learning their ways and their language, and through these things reach their sin-sick souls.

At times, an ambassador may be called upon to suffer indignities at the hands of those whom he tries to serve. He is often spurned, must give up his home, friends, and family, to spend time in a place far different from the way of life which he has always known. But for Christian ambassadors, the command still remains, Jerusalem, Judea, the uttermost parts of the earth. And, praise God, those who aspire to the office are willing to give up the comforts of home, the friends who mean the world to them, even their families from which they are forced to be parted, to spend years in a different land, with other customs, perhaps to suffer hardship for their Christ.

Sometimes, because of changing conditions and needs, an ambassador is recalled from one work to take up work in another place. In this case he is retained, given instruction in the new work and new place to which he will go, and sent, perhaps to a completely different type of situation in a completely different part of the world.

So it is with our ambassador — she spent some years in China, and then, due to conditions far beyond her own control, was recalled by her Lord to reach a new field of endeavor, and having been trained anew for her work, will be sent far to the other end of the world, into a completely new situation with new problems, new faces, to represent her Kingdom in a new way, and yet with the same message: "God loves you — God sent His Son to be your Savior — God will forgive you if you are truly sorry for your sin.

An ambassador may spend his whole life in the service of his country.

He may start out to give only a short period of service, but his love of country becomes so great that his entire working life is spent in some civic task. So, too, Christ's ambassadors! So do we see one, who, after one term on the mission field, has lost interest in the work. Always there is a task, to spend more time in the service of the King. Many of them, after long years in foreign lands speaking for their Christ, long to return even when physical strength no longer allows, her the love of the Holy Spirit is so instilled in their lives that they long to be "out on the field" as before. And so it is with the one whom we honor tonight; her thoughts of returning to her Lord's field of service when opportunity presented itself have never been dimmed. She has been ready to go anywhere, any time.

An ambassador does not go without the blessing of his government.

He is given "diplomatic immunity" to the law of the foreign nation; he is given protection; he is given funds with which to work. How unthinkably a nation sends one to represent the spiritual thought and life of her people without these things!

How can our ambassador be pledged these things? This is our duty, citizen. of the Kingdom of God! Yes, there is always an “our part” from which we cannot run away, cannot hide. We must pay our “taxes” if we are to be good citizens of our heavenly Kingdom, just as it is through the support of our government by her people that our ambassadors can be cared for.

What, then, is our part?

In Colossians 4: 13, we read: "Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ,グルdathe you, always laboring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God." The word in the Greek which here is translated "laboring fervently" literally means to wrestle, to agonize. Have you ever noticed wrestlers — how the muscles strain, how the brow is wet with perspiration, how the labor so hard? Have you ever labored that hard in prayer for God's ambassadors? Will you 'agonize' in prayer for the one whom we dedicate tonight?

Christ, in giving instructions to the first-century Christians, said, "He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. So that he that soweth sparingly of the seed shall reap also sparingly of the crop, and he that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully." (2 Corinthians 9: 6-7)

Concerning Miss Becker, Mr. Crandall said that she was not a new employee of the board, having served in China as a missionary nurse. The records show that the Missionary Board granted Miss Becker a leave of absence, continuing to hope and expect to return her to China some day. At the April 27, 1958, meeting of the board, action was taken to call Miss Becker into active service, this time to assist at Makapua Mission, Nyasaland, as our medical missionary.

There were nineteen friends and members of the families gathered at the airport in San Francisco October 24, 1959. The purpose of this meeting was to honor four outgoing missionaries and to bid them Godspeed, as they were about to go to their fields of service.

Brief messages expressing purposes and plans for missionary service were given by the Rev. and Mrs. Rene Mauch of Quebec, Canada, who will be leaving soon for British Guiana, S. A., and by Miss Sarah Becker of Los Angeles and Miss Barbara Bivins of Holland, Michigan. Miss Becker and Barbara Bivins as they go forth to represent the Kingdom of Christ, our Kingdom, to the Fairview, to go with prayer as you do that work to the fullest? The laborer who is told His disciples that the one whom we dedicate tonight?

The nurses met with our English brethren on Thursday evening and then went over to Holland on Friday. From Holland they were scheduled to go to Germany and then on to Blantyre, Nyasaland, where we may expect that Dr. and Mrs. Victor Burdick and Miss Joan Clement will be awaiting their arrival.

We will not soon forget the light of faith shining from the eyes and the air of confidence and hope in the face and carriage of these two nurses as they left the group and walked down the ramp to the plane. We who were left behind were humbly proud to be associated with people of such devotion to the cause of our Lord. We gathered on the observation deck and watched until the plane was air-borne and on the horizon of the dawn just breaking into the night sky. Our prayers went with them. We turned toward home with the quiet resolve to work harder and try to deserve such confidence and faith as shown by these missionaries to Nyasaland.

There were nineteen friends and members of the families gathered at the airport to bid them farewell. We sensed a feeling of sorrow in our hearts, yet there was also present a deep sense of satisfaction and a quiet joy as we saw these two loved ones leaving for their appointed field of service.

Those who were in the farewell party were: Secretary and Mrs. Leon M. Malaby, Pastor and Mrs. John Smidt, Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Unland and son, Mrs. Nellie M. Bivins, Mrs. Colwell Hoffman, Mrs. Sarah B. Hand, Dr. James A. Bivins, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Coon, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ayars, Mr. and Mrs. Loren G. Osborn, and Secretary and Mrs. Everett T. Harris.

It is the straightedge of the Law that shows us how crooked we are. — J. B. Phillips.
Due to the death of the mother of the executive secretary, the last program workshop at the Salem Church was led by Pastor Clifford Hansen on October 29. Work with the churches at Lost Creek and Roanoke was postponed. Workshops were held at Middle Island and Berea as scheduled.

Baptist Jubilee Advance

The question has been asked, "What is the occasion being celebrated during the final year (1964) of the Baptist Jubilee Advance?" The answer is "the 130th anniversary of the beginning of organized Baptist work in America."

Five years ago, Dr. C. C. Warren, then president of the Southern Baptist Convention, visited the American Baptist Convention being held in Atlantic City, and suggested that there be a great evangelistic thrust and an anniversary celebration in 1964. The American Baptists voted to cooperate in the plans. Dr. Warren called a meeting in 1955, inviting representatives from all of the Baptist bodies to meet for the purpose of planning what might be done. A program was worked out and the group met again in 1956. In view of the fact that we have various ways of doing things in the various conventions, it was decided to have certain emphases each year which each convention body would carry out in its own way. It was decided that various parts of the denominational work be emphasized beginning with evangelism in 1959 and going on through to 1964 for the Jubilee. In 1960 the emphasis is on evangelism through teaching and training; in 1961 it is evangelism through stewardship and enlistment; in 1962 it is evangelism through church extension; in 1963 it is evangelism through world missions, and in 1964, the Baptist Jubilee.

Our office still has a few complete kits for Youth Week for sale at $1.00 per kit. The first week in February is a long way off, but Youth Fellowships will want to plan early!

SABBATH SCHOOL LESSON

November 28, 1959

Confronted by Christ
The Bread of Life

I am the living bread which came down from heaven ... the bread which I shall give for the life of the world is my flesh. John 6:51 (RSV).

Meditation:

John was an old man when out of the rich experience of years of faithful service he wrote his famous words, "And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us. . . ."

Later he uses the words of Jesus Himself to testify to His humanity: "I am the living bread which came down from heaven: and the bread which came down from heaven: to testify to His humanity: . . ."

Publishing House News

This is an opportune time to mention again the new Heidelberg cylinder printing press that has not been in operation very long. There are now two identical German presses that operate very efficiently and take up very little floor space in comparison with the machines they replaced.

Having two similar presses made it possible to run different parts of the special issue Sabbath Recorder simultaneously and to meet the deadline for getting it into the hands of regular subscribers and those who had sent in special orders. The presses were running for approximately two days. After the printing was completed other departments worked the major portions of the issue, paste, trim, and package the largest number of copies sent out in recent years.

Seventh Day Baptists can be thankful that we have modern equipment and skilled employees in a well-ordered shop under a management with long experience who are used by Him to help feed spiritually hungry men and women. The world is hungry for something more than material things. Even Christian people have often been content to share only things with others and have not realized that having satisfied physical needs, they have by no means fulfilled Christ's commands.

It is not here that Christ needs the help of consecrated men and women who, themselves being fed with the bread which satisfies, will share with a broken world the living bread which means life eternal?

Prayer:

Heavenly Father, in this season when we give thanks for countless blessings and look forward to the joys of the Christmas time, prepare our hearts to understand the full meaning of Christ's birth. Forgive our blindness and selfishness. Cleanse and purify us. Make us quick to perceive the spiritual hunger in another and know to share the living bread. Give us of Thy strength and wisdom, we pray. Amen.

A Deaconess States Her Faith

By Helen Acker Ogden

I come before you with happiness. When I look to Alfred eleven years ago I knew no one here but God was close.

The person I met first was Mrs. George B. Shaw. She made me welcome. Yes, God was very close.

I am not Seventh Day Baptist, but because of early training and personal convictions I knew Jesus, the Christ, as my Teacher and Redeemer, and I had been a church member for a number of years. I believed then and reaffirm now that the first word was spoken by God and that no matter what happens the last word will also belong to God. I believe that all things come through God, the Creator and Sustainer of the Universe; that all things in life have meaning; that the personality that is MAN comes from God. He follows man to the highest hopes and to the lowest despair, always with love.

I believe that God's messengers went forth, and that they were several, but that Jesus, the Christ, was and is the Revelation of God to man.

He taught me that man is from God, that God expects certain things of me, and that many times Jesus taught that love is the fulfilling of the law of God, the new commandment for keeping all old commandments, and that because God first loved me, I love; I love God; I love all men.

"Everyone who loveth is born of God" — this I believe. All things I am, can do, or be are through the Holy Spirit, the creature that is in me. This I must share with others.

I believe in the sacraments of this Christian Church. I believe in baptism and feel in need of and refreshed by the communion at the Lord's Table. I believe in the forgiveness of sins through repentance.

I hold the Bible as the true guide for faith and life and prayer as intimate communion with God. He knows my every need and is my help in every trial. He knows my every happiness and is my joy in every gladness. This I believe.

May I read a quotation from a precious book? "Prayer at its best is revealed when a man enjoys God and prays out of sheer love for Him."

I believe in the Second Coming of Jesus, the Christ, and I believe in the Sabbath of the Bible. How I spend these happy hours of the Sabbath is, I believe, a measure of my love to God.

I am glad that I am a member of this church, this denomination, and a co-worker in the great Church of God. I want to be not just an admirer but a follower of its founder and best Jesus the Christ. I now renew my vows with God, with praise and thanksgiving, and with the members of this church.

"Spirit of the living God, Fall afresh on me. . . ."

Melt me, mold me, fill me, use me — Spirit of the living God Fall afresh on me, I pray.

ECUMENICAL NEWS

The World Council of Churches has made it plain once again that equal status is a principle upon which it would insist before it participated in any ecumenical council embracing all of Christendom (referred to as the Pope's call for union and a council of Roman Catholic bishops).

The general secretary of the WCC reiterated this stance non before the 90-member Central Committee of the WCC meeting on the Greek island of Rhodes. Dr. Visser 't Hooft indicated his belief that Pope John XXIII's suggestion for an ecumenical council in early 1960 or 1961 rejected the principle of equality and that the Vatican's position was that Protestant churches participating in such a measure would be petitioners seeking to return to the fold.

Church membership in the United States now stands at a record-breaking 109,557,- 741 persons according to new statistics published in National Council's 1960 Yearbook of American Churches. The figure represents 63 percent of the country's estimated population of 173,374,000 — the highest ratio of church membership in U.S. history. It is a gain of 5,368,065 persons in 1958 or a rise of five percent as compared to a population increase during the same period of 1.7 percent. Of the new total 61,504,660 are Protestants; 39,509,508 are Roman Catholics; 5,500,000 are Jews; and 2,545,318 are Eastern Orthodox. The total increase of Protestant bodies during the year was reported at 2.8 percent. The figures on Protestant membership based on statistics filed by 224 churches, show the Methodist Church is the largest Protestant denomination with 9,670,690 members. Second is the Southern Baptist Convention with 9,202,205, and third is the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc., with 5,000,000 members.

LOST CREEK, W. Va. — Our Southeastern Association Co-Ordinating Council is seeking to compile a list of names and addresses of all people in the Association area (from Central Pennsylvania and Ohio southward) who are Seventh Day Baptist members, lone Sabbathkeeping folk, or interested in our cause. If you have relatives or friends that should be included, be sure to let your pastor know.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Our church is endeavoring to cooperate in the Lay Development Program as suggested by the General Conference. In September a retreat was planned to be held at Camp Hoston but because of inclement weather the program was carried out at the church. Laymen's Sabbath was observed on October 31 with laymen in complete charge of the Sabbath morning service.

The Sabbath School is encouraging increased attendance with the "Each one bring one" plan. A program of Bible memorization has been set up by the Religious Education Committee for the children's and young people's departments and more social fellowship is being carried out through class parties and suppers. Seven of our people are attending the Leadership Training School being held in the First Baptist Church this fall.

Thirty-one from our church attended the Northern Association meetings held in White Cloud October 16-18.

Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, two of our faithful members, celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary with an open house in the church social rooms the afternoon of September 6. Honoring their parents the children and grandchildren presented an informal musical which was much enjoyed... [Could such a notice appear in the bulletin of your church? You need a Tract Committee.]
