Who are Seventh Day Baptists?

If you've never read The Sabbath Recorder before, you might be wondering who Seventh Day Baptists are. Like other Baptists, we believe in:

- salvation by grace through faith in Christ Jesus.
- the Bible as the inspired word of God. The Bible is our authority for our faith and daily conduct.
- baptism of believers, by immersion, witnessing to our acceptance of Christ as Savior and Lord.
- freedom of thought under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.
- the congregational form of church government.

Every church member has the right to participate in the decision-making process of the church.

My Journey to the Sabbath
How one pastor came to a new conviction

by David Johnson
Flowery Branch, Ga.

David Johnson is pastor of Sabbath Chapel in Flowery Branch, Georgia, a branch church of the Metro Atlanta Seventh Day Baptist Church. A retired teacher, coach, and former pastor of a Southern Baptist Church, Pastor David became a Seventh Day Baptist when he joined the Metro Atlanta church in 2010.

In February of 2014 he was ordained as a Seventh Day Baptist minister during a ceremony held in Flowery Branch, Georgia. The following is his story of how he came to a Sabbath conviction. —Jeff Hargett, Co-chair, SR Committee

While at seminary, I learned to study the Bible with an open mind and listen to the leading of the Holy Spirit. One of my assignments in second semester Greek class was to translate Matthew 5:17-19. As I meditated on each Greek word and searched for the best English equivalent, the Holy Spirit convicted me of the need to keep the Sabbath holy.

The Bible states that Jesus said, “Do not think that I came to abolish the Law or the Prophets: I did not come to abolish but to fulfill. For truly I say to you, until heaven and earth pass away, not the smallest letter or stroke shall pass from the Law until all is accomplished. Whoever then annuls one of the least of these commandments, and teaches others to do the same, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven; but whoever keeps and teaches them, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven” (Matthew 5:17-19).

After reading these verses, I realized that Jesus said nothing would pass from the Law until all was fulfilled, and all has not been fulfilled yet. Therefore, I went to the Ten Commandments to get the correct understanding of at least that portion of the Law. To my surprise I realized that I was not even trying to keep the fourth commandment.

“Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days you shall labor and do all your work, but the seventh day is a Sabbath of the Lord your God; in it you shall not do any work... For in six days the Lord made the heavens and the earth, the sea and all that is in them, and rested on the seventh; therefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and made it holy” (Exodus 20:8-11).

The one commandment that stated “Remember.” I had forgotten! God made the seventh day holy and commanded us to keep it holy.

Before the Law was given, God taught His people to keep the Sabbath by how the manna was given to them. “Six days you shall gather it, but on the seventh day, the Sabbath, there will be none” (Exodus 16:26). When the Law was given, God’s chosen people were already keeping the Sabbath by not having any manna to collect on the Sabbath.

Since I had been taught all my life to keep the first day of the week holy, I searched the New Testament to see where the switch was made from seventh to first. To my astonishment, there was no command found to make the switch, or evidence in the Bible that the switch was made by the early Church.

The Bible supports the fact that Jesus kept the Sabbath holy. “And He was saying to them, ‘The Son of Man is Lord of the Sabbath’ ” women obeying after Jesus’ crucifixion when “on the Sabbath they rested according to the commandment” (Luke 23:56b)?

The evidence supports the conclusion that believers in Jesus Christ were keeping the fourth Commandment at the time of His crucifixion. Obviously, the fourth Commandment was not anulled in the Gospels, but what about in the book of Acts?

Further evidence of Sabbath-keeping is found throughout Acts. “As Paul and Barnabas were going out, the people kept begging that these things might be spoken to them the next Sabbath” (Acts 13:42). “The next Sabbath nearly the whole city assembled to hear the word of the Lord” (Acts 13:44). “And on the Sabbath day we went outside the gate to a riverside, where we were supposing that there would be a place of prayer; and we sat down and began speaking to the women who had assembled” (Acts 16:13).

Maybe each of these services was purely Jewish and Jesus was not mentioned. “And according to Paul’s custom, he went to them, and for three Sabbaths reasoned with them from the Scriptures, explaining and giving evidence that the Christ had to suffer and rise again from the dead, and saying, “This Jesus whom I am proclaiming to you is the Christ”” (Acts 17:2-3). In this passage it is clear that Jesus was proclaimed on the Sabbath during regularly scheduled worship services.

The next Scripture identifies who was present to hear the Gospel of Jesus Christ preached on the Sabbath. “And he was reasoning in the synagogue every Sabbath and trying to persuade Jews and Greeks” (Acts 18:4). So far the evidence is overwhelming in favor of keeping the Sabbath holy on the seventh day of the week.

There is no evidence that the first day of the week is called the Sabbath in the Bible; however, there is a mention of a meeting taking place on the first day. “On the first day of the week, when we were gathered together to break bread, Paul began talking to them, intending to leave the next day, and he prolonged his message until midnight” (Acts 20:7).

This verse is often used as proof of the first day being the regular meeting time for the New Testament church to worship, but the Bible clearly states that the purpose of the meeting was to break bread. Breaking bread is defined in Acts 2:46 as “…breaking bread from house to house they were taking their meals together with gladness.”

Why so few Sabbatarians?

by Rev. Madison Harry Edited by Kevin Butler

“Why so few Sabbatarians?”
As a newcomer to Seventh Day Baptists, Rev. Madison Harry asked this question in 1890. Harry went on to pose more questions and posit even more answers and theories.

His article, “Why has not God blessed Sabbath-keeping Christians more?” appeared in The Sabbath Recorder on August 28, 1890. A revised version became a separate American Sabbath Tract Society booklet in 1894. The following is from his introduction:

“Why has not God blessed Sabbath-keeping Christians more?”

This is both a perplexing and painful question to all who “delight in the law of God, after the inward man.” The meager success of Sabbatarians deters many from joining with us, though convinced of the scripturalness of our position, and not a few have abandoned our cause on that account. This is a sad and depressing fact. Why is it? Is it God’s will it should be so? How much of our little success is necessary or unavoidable, and how much is due to our insufficiency as an aggressive power and evangelizing agency? This is a practical question. If it is due to the first cause wholly, then we are blameless. If in any degree to the latter, then “sin lieth at the door.” We surely, if possible, should know how this matter stands. How much of our meager success is necessary and unavoidable?

Some palatable causes for our smallness

Rev. Harry listed the following as “some of the causes that have efficiently retarded our progress.”

I. The advocates of a pure religion have always been few, compared with those who have departed from the simplicity of the faith. This is true of every dispensation.... [He cites Noah and Abraham as examples.]

II. Some reforms must needs be last. They are never complete. They proceed step by step....

III. There are several special reasons why Sabbath reform is slow or last.

Harry noted that Sunday-keeping was, perhaps, the “first violent departure from the plain command of God,” commencing even before infant baptism or effusion (pouring). He also viewed Sunday-keeping as “the point of formal entrance by Satan into the realm of Christianity.”

“The number ten signifies completeness, Harry explained. “The Decalogue (the Ten Words) is the circle of man’s duties. Satan has broken that circle at the Fourth Commandment. He has compelled the Christian world to acknowledge his right at that point.”

God’s will to be small?

“Now having considered some of the principal discouragements in our way,” Harry then inquired “if they are a sufficient account of the small success of Sabbatarians in the world? Has it been God’s will it should be so?”

He answers by pointing out that “the most violent persecutions did not prevent the spread of the Gospel in the early period of the Christian era, nor in later times. Even the Sabbath cause seems to have made progress at different times, especially in England shortly after the Reformation.... Truth must command its own recognition, even by the offering of the blood of its friends if need be.”

What we are doing wrong

In light of the above, Harry asks, “Are we not compelled to believe that there is some other account of the little success of Sabbathkeepers, than the powerful opposition and persecution they have met? Be patient with me brethren, if I now say that this hindering cause lies in the methods and spirit of Sabbatarians. Allow me then to call attention to some discouraging facts that have forced themselves upon my attention in my short experience among them.” (The remainder of this article are Harry’s words; I added the subtitles.—Ed.)

“We have the truth!”

Well, do something with it

1. Christian denominations which are strongly convinced that they have the whole truth are very liable to console themselves with this flattering conviction: “Why, we have the truth, and of course we must succeed,” and because they believe and feel thus, give themselves little concern about spreading the truth.

Because a man has a plow of the most approved pattern is not proof that he will raise a better crop than his neighbor with his wooden mould-board plow. Why? The first admires and boasts of his plow and doesn’t do much else, while the latter makes good use of his.

So brethren, because we know God says: “The Seventh-day is the Sabbath of the Lord,” and keep it, is not the assurance of our success. Nor will publishing tracts and circulating them insure it. The only efficient way to make men consider our claims of truth is to carry it to them not in print merely—but in person....

Truth is a leavening power, an active force, and must find expression or die. The purest water held at rest will stagnate, and if the “whole counsel of God” is to prevail in the world it must be carried through it, and to it, in living vessels.

Our possessing the whole truth will not convert the world; we must use the truth.

The Gospel cannot be sent by carrier doves; somebody must “go.” Let us not be deceived. Our possessing the whole truth will not convert the world; we must use the truth. We must bring it in living vessels to them.

“Sabbath truth cannot prevail!”

Where is your faith?

2. Another source of weakness among Seventh Day Baptists is the conviction that Sabbath truth cannot prevail. Elder A.H. Lewis thinks the majority of them have never yet risen to the conception that our views can prevail.

We have been peculiarly “the sect everywhere spoken against” and so legislated against, hunted, fined, bruised, and peeled incessantly, until at last Sabbatarians were quite willing to hide away in some secluded spot where they might be tolerated and believe and practice according to their convictions, and also quite as willing that the rest of the world should move on in the possession and under the domination of traditions. They have scarcely asked or expected more than that they might enjoy the privilege of keeping God’s Sabbath among themselves.

Now it is evident that if we are not profoundly desirous of success of the whole truth, and have not also a strong faith in the success of the Sabbath, it will never prevail—at least in our hands. “According to your faith be it unto you.”

“Move to a Sabbath church!”

No, move and build one

3. [We] have mainly depended upon the colonization plan for building up in new places. It is our reproach in the eyes of other denominations, and the proof to them of the impracticability of our views.

Is that the way Christianity started in the world? Is it on that plan that any reformation worth naming ever did succeed? Think of Paul taking twenty or thirty Christians from Judea and colonizing them at Phillippi, for instance, in order to establish a church! The Christian body that pursues that policy will never take the world—never.

That policy is the proof that they don’t expect to do so. And therefore few indeed are the Seventh Day Baptist churches that have been built up in new communities by evangelizing them to Christ and the Sabbath.

Our people depend mainly on importation of the Sabbath element into new places to organize and build up new churches. Moreover, our people are unwilling to move into some new places. It does not seem to occur to them to put their letters into the nearest struggling church—they don't know whether it will succeed or not, and they prefer to wait until they perhaps move into the neighborhood of some strong Sabbatarian church.

Now, the moral effect of this spiritual practice is to teach our young people that it is about impossible to keep the Sabbath, here, no doubt, is the secret cause of so much Sabbath defection. Our young people, imbibing this spirit and seeing this policy, naturally conclude that when they move into Sabbathless places, they cannot—need not—keep the Sabbath....

They are taught by the spirit and policy of a denomination that Sabbath-keeping is out of the question except in the presence of a well-established Seventh Day Baptist Church. Two things are wanting here: sacrifice, and faith in the future triumph of all God's law.

“Come to us!”

Go to them!

4. Another serious lack in our spirit, and defect in our method, is the absence of purpose and a plan to evangelize the surrounding neighborhoods and country where our churches are established.

So far as I am able to discover, the custom of our churches is to have one regular preaching service a week, viz.: in the forenoon on Sabbath day. I confess brethren, I was greatly surprised at this. Sixth-day night is usually given to prayer-meeting, and Seventh-day night to a singing or some entertainment. If Sunday churches were to do likewise, that is have preaching services in the forenoon on Sunday, their success in gathering in would perhaps not be more than half what it is....

One instance will illustrate. In less than twenty miles of one of our strongest western churches, a minister of the Gospel had lived for seventeen years in the same county, and had spoken in public in various places in the county, and up to the time of his keeping the Sabbath, some three years ago, had not even heard of said Seventh Day Baptist Church. And yet this is a large and vigorous church, but so far as I know is not regularly holding any missionary post far or near.

How can we expect to evangelize the world with such a policy as this, or rather want of any policy? Is it any wonder that other denominations despise us, and consider us clannish? They see us huddling together and trying to own every farm in our immediate neighborhood, or every house and lot on a certain street, or in the vicinity of our church, and get the idea that the only way to be a Sabbatarian is to go and do likewise.

Be salt and light

Now if we are “the light of the world,” let us not put all the light under one bushel; if we are “the salt of the earth,” let us not put all the salt on one piece of meat. The Seventh Day Baptists have both more talent and wealth than I expected to find. And there are thousands of places in the land sadly in need of light and salt.

We never shall, never can, bring the world back to the whole Word of God while we cling to the custom—unwittingly contracted, perhaps—of segregating in a few desirable localities....

And now pardon me if I say we need the spirit of the Scotch preacher who divided “They that turn the world upside down have come hither also” as follows: 1) The world is turned wrong-side up. 2) It must be turned right-side up. 3) And we are the chaps to do it.”

We have a special mission

We must believe that we have a special mission, and that that mission is to the whole world, and not in the exceedingly few localities of our churches. It is futile to wait for the world to “get ready to receive the Sabbath.” “The field is already white unto the harvest.”

“Pray the Lord for laborers.” “Go ye out into the highways and compel them to come in.” Surely we need one huge camp meeting, and to “tarry at Jerusalem until we are endowed with power from on high” that then we may “go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature.”

We lack evangelizing power. We need “power with men and God.” But we surely never will receive it until we rise to the conniption “that every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up,” the Sunday-Sabbath and all.

How many of us are ready to say, “Here am I, Lord, send me.”
Healing Sabbath

by Barb Green, Parish Nurse Milton, Wis.

(Healing Sabbath) by Rev. G. Scott Morris, MD. Found in the Church Health Reader, Fall 2013.)

“Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy” is one of the Ten Commandments. Some are old enough to remember when nothing much happened on Sabbath in observance of this commandment. We did not go shopping or fishing, because even “fun” was off the list.

In those days, the Sabbath may have seemed like a bored-out-of-my-skull idea to young people, but in those days, the thought of not working for an entire day more likely strikes fear in people’s hearts. “Waste” a whole day doing nothing? Shut off all my electronic devices? It’s just not realistic for this day and age. Or so we think.

Exodus 20:8-11 and Deuteronomy 5:12-15 tell us that the promise of rest embedded in the Commandment extends to all people, and their livestock! We need the opportunity to withdraw from work and rest. Exodus also makes the point that God blessed the Sabbath and consecrated it. If God sanctified the day by participating in the first-ever Sabbath, who are we to decide that we do not require this profound manner of rest?

Deuteronomy adds another fascinating perspective. “Remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt and the Lord your God brought you out from there; therefore the Lord your God commanded you to keep the Sabbath day.” We might not have been slaves in Egypt, but how easily we become slaves to technology, busyness and to-do lists. Can we hear the truth that just as God delivered the Israelites from slavery, God wants to deliver us from the form of slavery we embrace?

Sabbath is the method God chooses.

By the time of Jesus, the Sabbath was a set of rules. Jesus challenged this thinking by healing on the Sabbath, saying, “The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath.”

As a physician, I am particularly interested in the link Jesus makes between the Sabbath and healing. The concept of setting aside significant chunks of time for no other purpose than rest of body and spirit produces benefits that medical science can track. Sufficient quantity and quality of rest pays benefits in better memory, healthier immune function, relief for depression and stress, improved energy and decreased inflammation. Getting enough sleep matters. Having down time matters.

Beyond these benefits, let me suggest four ways that practicing the Sabbath brings medical benefits. First, physiological benefits of rest are not limited to the period of time we are resting. Something happens in the body and spirit that carries forward. We do not start the next week tired, disconnected and compounding last week’s demands on our bodies. Sabbath changes our preparedness for the next phase of our work and living, and that supports our overall well-being.

Second, we would see fewer visits to the doctor expecting technology to fix what embracing Sabbath could help prevent. Patients would save time, trouble and money. The health care system would be less strained. In the end, we could save money by working less.

Third, mental and relational health would improve. I am not talking about clinical mental health situations that should be medically treated, but the run-of-the-mill kind of stress that manifests itself bodily in too many ways to list here. Sabbath—unplugging from everything that crowds our days from dawn to midnight—reveals fresh perspectives. If we can just tough it out through the withdrawal period, we’ll discover that we have time to think, to create, to listen, to uncover solutions that were there all along.

Fourth, and perhaps most important, widespread practice of Sabbath has the potential to connect whole communities in healthy ways, thereby multiplying these medical benefits. Think what could happen if an entire congregation committed to a Sabbath experiment, reflected on the impact on health of the people who are part of that church, and then took those benefits into the community they serve.

I am fond of saying that the church is a potential powerhouse of life-giving community. Embracing the benefits of Sabbath for our experience of health and medicine is one more way the church can lead the way.
Hope, Joy and Peace be with you

“I am feeling overwhelmed.” Those were the words I used on this rainy March morning when I spoke with Ron Ochs, our Financial Officer. Ron simply said, “One step at a time.”

Do you ever feel like giving up? Do you feel like your situation is so hopeless that the only thing you can do is get up and leave the situations—to just walk away, head out the door and never have to confront them again?

Yet we often do nothing about it. This “Silent Anxiety” will cause people to just go through the motions of their marriage or job. They will maintain the facade of a relationship with their children or parents, but in reality they have given up. They may have stopped working, stopped fighting, stopped caring, and simply emotionally detach themselves from everyone.

All of us have faced a situation when it seems pointless to keep trying. Some of you are probably facing it now and you might be hiding it well. How do we keep holding on when we feel like giving up? Where does the power come from to keep us going?

Trust in God’s Sovereignty

We need to continually remind ourselves that God is in control! My wife reminds me of that every time I try to take control. No matter how hopeless, how painful, how unpleasant, or how discouraging our circumstances are, God has a purpose for them. The struggle you are going through has meaning and purpose, because God is sovereign and He does everything for a reason. God doesn’t make mistakes and He isn’t surprised by what has happened to you.

Read what Job said to the Lord. “I know that you can do all things; no plan of yours can be thwarted…” Surely I spoke of things I did not understand, things too wonderful for me to know” (Job 42:1-3, NIV). This means that for us Christians, despair is not an option. Despair is not for Believers who live under the constant care of a loving Father.

Despair is for people who live in an ever-expanding impulsive universe, where bad things happen for no reason. Despair is for people who live at the mercy of “karma” and luck. Despair is for people who live in a world in which there is no God, where no one is in control.

Trust in God’s Power

God can make a way! When we see no escape from our situation, and it seems impossible that our circumstances will change for the better, God can make a way. Our God specializes in all kinds of resurrections!

He can bring life to dead relationships. He can cause loving feelings and attitudes to be created out of nothing. He can renovate people and situations in ways that we are unable to see.

Jeremiah put it this way in chapter 32, verse 17: “Ah, Sovereign Lord, you have made the heavens and the earth by your great power and outstretched arm. Nothing is too hard for you.” God can make a way! God is able to do whatever it takes to fulfill His plan for you! Place Your Hope in Christ “May the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace as you trust in him, so that you may overflow with hope by the power of the Holy Spirit” (Romans 15:13).

Whether or not God chooses to change our “hopeless” circumstances, ultimately our “hope” is not in what He is going to do for us in this life. Our “true hope” is in Jesus Christ! Our “true hope” is eternal life that comes from our faith in the Savior. Even with our anxiety, this should put everything into the correct perspective.

As Romans 15:13 (above) tells us, when we place our trust in God, we get Hope, Joy, and Peace.

I am not feeling overwhelmed anymore!}

10  The SR
Jesus answered, “Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again, but whoever drinks the water I give them will never thirst. The water I give them will become in them a spring of water welling up to eternal life.” (John 4:13-14 NIV)

The story of the woman at the well is a popular passage. Typically when I’ve heard this elaborated on, or thought about it myself, it is portrayed as an encounter demonstrating the inclusiveness of Christ’s ministry, and a confirmation of his character as the Messiah.

In my limited experience, this story might as well have been titled ‘Jesus at the well’ because his role is key to the story. The woman typically is portrayed as an ignorant prostitute in a conversation beyond her limited understanding. A message I recently heard added a dimension to the story.

This woman was not a follower of Christ, nor was she Jewish. However, assuming her to be ignorant of Jesus’ spiritual part of the conversation does not pass a close scrutiny of her response. Samaritans were Jewish cousins who practiced differently from the Jews but used many of the same texts. When he begins speaking spiritually, she follows. They are at Jacob’s Well, which has great spiritual significance for the Samaritans. The woman knows it and calls Jesus out, asking if he is “greater than our father Jacob.”

Jesus replies that he is greater than Jacob and can offer eternal life. The woman then asks for the water. Many people interpret this as a physical request, but what if it was also spiritual? Their conversation has become spiritual, why diverge now?

It’s at this point we find out she’s been married five times and is now living with a man because her only other choice was homelessness or death. Either way, this woman has probably been coming to draw water from this well for decades, and despite that she is spiritually parched. Jacob’s water cannot satisfy her thirst.

I’d always imagined Jesus reply about her husband in a snarky manner, but knowing Jesus it was delivered in a much gentler tone. He’s not trying to drive her to realization but draw her to one. She’s been drawing water from the wrong well! Whether it was Jacob’s Well or the well of men in her life, she’s not been truly satisfied. Jesus promises to satisfy her need in such a way that she will never be thirsty again.

So why am I thirsty? I think—like the woman—I’m drawing from the wrong well. I use work, family, friends, myself to validate my life. I act like Jesus is my Savior and that’s the end of it, but that isn’t the way it works. A spring, even one of eternal life, still needs to be fed from somewhere, and that somewhere is Jesus.

Once is not enough. We need prayer, Bible study, the fellowship of believers, and most of all a continuing relationship with Jesus. We also need to stop drawing from other sources (like the opposite gender or occupation) because it is so easy to begin drawing exclusively from those wells that pollute and dry us out.

I get parched because I don’t take myself to Jesus; then I wonder why life seems so difficult. Jesus is the only well of life, and on my journey I’m slowly learning I need to draw life exclusively from him.

In Joshua 24:22, after you and I make the choice to serve the Lord, we need to give our choice a voice, just as God’s people did. Let’s explore the whole context of this memory verse, from v. 14 through v. 28.

A Voice of Responsibility

Leaders go first. I don’t mean in the food line at our fellowship meals, or having the “best seats in the house,” but when it comes to making course-changing, sometimes difficult, choices. Leaders have the responsibility to “know the way, show the way and go the way.” By the way, all of us have influence and an impact upon the lives of others. All of us should take responsibility in making the choice and giving it a voice.

A Voice of Reason(s)

The people followed Joshua’s lead and voiced their choice as well. As they did so, they conveyed their reasons for choosing God—because of what He had done (and would continue to do) for them, we will do for Him.

This was a common mindset back then: If we scratch the backs of our gods, they will scratch ours. How often do we do the same? How often do we feel, if not vocalize, the sentiment: “God, we’ve done/are doing for You and therefore hope that You will do for us”?

Most pastors would love to hear their people make such a commitment of choosing and serving God! Yet Joshua cuts them to the core of their hearts and motives. While choosing God for what He has done has huge merit and motivation, it isn’t enough in the long run.

Joshua conveys that if their choice is based solely on what God has done, then they can’t really choose and serve God. There has to be a higher motivation (like, God is holy and jealous).

What are your reasons for choosing God? Is there “something in it” for you or is it solely because of Who God is?

A Voice of Response-ability

The people then respond even more with their ability to choose God. God wants us to know what we’re getting into. Hence Jesus making sure that the crowds knew what it meant to follow Him. (Mark 8:34-38; 10:44-45). There is no fine print with God. He’s very clear—sometimes painfully clear—as to what it means to love Him, serve Him, follow Him... to choose Him.

Having considered Who God is, the people respond strongly that they have the ability to choose God. Period. How about you?

A Voice of Relationship

Joshua says that to choose God involves giving Him their hearts. That’s what God desires most of all—our hearts of love for Him above all others. When we love God (and others) with our hearts, that then impacts our “hands” (our actions) and our “heads” (our attitudes). Are you choosing God because you love Him?

A Voice of Remembrance

Lastly, Joshua brings in the dynamic of accountability: that the people have given a voice to their choice, and that they are “witnesses” against themselves that they have done so. They were to hold one another accountable for their choice.

This is similar to how we include in our church covenants wording about watching over one another for good and convey the dynamic of holding one another accountable for the covenant we are making.

The occasion of giving a voice to their choice was also marked by writing down the people’s choice and the words of their voice, and having a visual reminder of the occasion as well (a rock under an oak tree).

Perhaps we, too, when making direction-changing choices as God’s people, should lovingly hold one another accountable, as well as mark out the occasion in special, memorable ways.

If you are choosing the Lord, what’s the voice behind your choice? That too... is your choice. $S_R$

I read with great interest the April articles on Camp Harley Sutton and Jersey Oaks Camp with very different points of view. I vaguely remember my dad’s involvement in the founding of Camp Harley; conversely, I have had a relationship with Jersey Oaks for the past 40 years. I was surprised, however, to note that Lyle Sutton did not mention that Camp Harley was named for his own father!

I do know that Rev. Harley Sutton was a strong influence on my dad (Don Sanford) and am only beginning to realize the impact of Dad’s ministry and writing. Similarly, my father-in-law (Charles Bond) continues to influence many through Jersey Oaks Camp, which was “his baby” in the 1960s.

I was impressed and emotionally impacted by Renee Sanford’s “Party Crasher” in the March issue.

When circumstances put me in charge of a program at a Sunday church, I asked a friend to personify the Holy Spirit while I attempted to imitate Renee’s pleading for pity and then reminiscence of the “essence of Doug.” This little mini-skit plus a letter-sized family portrait brought comments such as, “I feel like I know them,” “Appreciate your husband while you still have him,” and “She got the family writing gene even though she’s not a blood relative.”

Thank you, Sabbath Recorder, for providing this outlet to share with non-SDBs as well as our own people. Meanwhile, I hereby vow to let Renee know that I am thinking of Doug on May 16!

Expected Conduct at General Conference

This must be read, then noted on-line or at the end of the paper form on p. 16

We desire to maintain our witness for Christ. Part of this witness is our ability to live as a community that recognizes the responsibility to think of others. One such responsibility is a demonstration of respect for those who need a good night’s sleep. We also want to spare our people from social pressures that might encourage inappropriate activity.

1. Local rules of the school and facility are binding on all who attend Conference unless changed by the Host Committee or the General Council.
2. All socializing between males and females (except husband and wife) shall be limited to public areas, or personal rooms (except during quiet hours) in which the doors are completely open.
3. Quiet hours are from 12 midnight to 6 a.m. each night of Conference. During quiet hours no excessive noise will be permitted. No talking will be allowed in hallways, and no music (such as instrumental, vocal, or from a stereo) will be permitted except where used with personal headphones. Quiet talking will be permitted in lounges, or in personal rooms with the doors closed (same gender only and spouses).
4. A Disciplinary Council shall be established before Conference convenes.
5. The Disciplinary Council shall meet at the call of the chairman to deal with infractions of these conduct guidelines. Discussion shall be confidential and shall include input from the person(s) involved.
   • A first offense of the rules will result in a written notice of warning. In the case of a youth being in violation, copies of the warning shall be delivered to both the youth and sponsor.
   • A second offense of the rules will require that a violator (and sponsor, if appropriate) meet with the Disciplinary Council to work out an agreement of what type of service or restitution would be an appropriate consequence for the violation. In the case of youth offenders, the sponsor will also monitor the service of the youth.
   • A third offense is punishable by a fine of $50. In the case of a youth offender who is unable to pay, the youth’s sponsor will be responsible for the fine.
   • If the offense warrants, the violator will be sent home at their own expense (or the sponsor’s expense in the case of a youth).
6. All unmarried young people under 18 years of age will need to have their own parents, or a sponsor over 25 years of age, attend the Conference. ALL YOUNG PEOPLE will be assigned to rooms on the same floor of the same dorm as their sponsors.
7. Parents or sponsors assume full responsibility for the conduct and discipline of the young people whose sponsorship they accept. Such responsibility does not extend to direct supervision when youth are engaged in a scheduled Conference activity.

Correcting Mistakes—Part 2

by Oscar Burdick

Note from Nick: This is the second of three articles begun last month correcting significant errors published about English SDB history found in Seventh Day Baptists in Europe and America, Volume 1 and 2, which was published by the General Conference in 1910.

We remind you that a document containing corrections (listed by page numbers) is available on the Historical Society’s website: www.sdbhistory.org. These corrections spring from Oscar Burdick’s extensive work on this subject over many years as he has researched to write an authoritative work on English SDBs.

• About the assertion that John Traske was a Seventh Day Baptist in 1617, and started the Mill Yard SDB church (an assertion which has been frequently repeated in sources beyond SDBs in Europe and America):

John Traske kept the Seventh Day Sabbath only briefly; his only publication about it was his recantation (published in 1620). He was not a Baptist. There is no Traske organic or personal connection with Seventh Day Baptists.

The incorrect connection of Traske to “Mill Yard” came through two men with the surname Coppinger, one of whom was supposed to have been a follower of Traske, and then another who was subsequently a member at “Mill Yard” in the 1650s. Subsequent investigation has proven that these were actually two men with different first names, neither of whom was ever associated with Traske or his followers.

Edmund Coppinger’s name appears very near Traske’s in a book by Ephraim Pagitt (Heresiography, published in 1662), which led some to falsely conclude there was a connection between the two, though Edmund died in 1591 in prison. Matthew Coppinger was a Sabbath-keeper who participated in a public debate about the Sabbath along with two prominent SDBs in 1659.

With this information—that Traske was never a Baptist, and that the supposed connection between Traske and “Mill Yard” through Coppinger does not exist—the only conclusion is that the 1617 date for the founding of the Mill Yard, London, congregation is also not correct. It is likely that the proper date of the “Mill Yard” congregation would be 1657 or before.

• About the end of the Traske movement:

According to a 26 December 1634 letter, “only two or three women do now uphold” Traske’s teachings; two of them being Mrs. Traske and her nurse...¹ As of 1635 of his four “messengers” or leaders, “three are now dead, the fourth hath renounced these things.”² Mrs. Traske, a Sabbath-keeper, died in prison about 1643 or 1644.

It was reported in 1662, “So there is the end of her Sect, in less than half a generation, ‘tis true, it begins of late to be revived again; but yet faintly; the progress it makes is not observed to be much....”³ This later comment seems to reflect the Seventh Day Baptist movement in the 1650s.

Oscar Burdick is an ordained Seventh Day Baptist minister and a member of the Bay Area, California, Seventh Day Baptist Church. He is retired as Librarian for Collection Development of the Graduate Theological Union Library in Berkeley and 2007 recipient of the Seventh Day Baptist Historical Society’s Gold Headed Cane award.

In Mark 7:14-16, Jesus taught that uncleanness comes from inside, not outside a person.

He explained in verses 20-23, “What comes out of a man is what makes him ‘unclean.’ For from within, out of men’s hearts, come evil thoughts, sexual immorality, theft, murder, adultery, greed, malice, deceit, lewdness, envy, slander, arrogance and folly. All these evils come from inside and make a man ‘unclean’.” (NIV)

Jesus was not teaching anything new. Jeremiah had said something similar. “The heart is deceitful above all things and beyond cure. Who can understand it?”

Beyond cure is also translated as “desperately sick” (ESV, NASB) and “desperately wicked” (KJV, NKJV, NLT). Saint Paul struggled with this issue and spoke of it in Romans 7:7-25.

This side of heaven we all struggle with sin. One of the reasons that it is almost impossible to become a mature believer by ourselves is that we need our brothers and sisters to hold us accountable. From time to time we need to be asked how we are doing in our relationship with the Lord and how we can be prayed for or helped.

Parents should hold their children accountable for their words and actions. As believers we each need someone who will “speak the truth in love” so that we are challenged to deal with issues we would rather sidestep or ignore. Sometimes this person is our spouse; sometimes it needs to be someone else.

The internet is a place where temptation is high and accountability is low, and at times non-existent. A person with a shopping problem can go wild sitting at home using their computer and credit card or PayPal. Pictures in poor taste or ones that wrongly entice are prevalent online. How do we deal with this?

It is easy to say, “I don’t have a problem.” Some people who say that are truthful. What about the rest of us? We can say, “God sees all, so that is a deterrent.” That is true. However if we are honest, we all must admit with Paul: “I do not do the thing I want, but I do the very thing I hate” (Rom 7:15, ESV).

Some know they have a problem. Others know they can be tempted from time to time. Still others want to remove any question from their reputation in this area. There is software that can be helpful to all three of these groups. There are various options available for online accountability. One of them, “Covenant Eyes” software, provides internet accountability which tracks websites you visit on your computers, smart phones, and tablets, and sends an easy-to-read report to someone you trust. This makes it easy to talk about the temptations you face online.

The SDB Center on Ministry has created a group with Covenant Eyes that ministers can join. The cost is $24 for 12 months and the pastor gets to choose an Accountability Partner to whom their reports are sent. This Accountability Partner is to review the report and even when it consistently says “looks good,” should touch base and see how things are going.

Eight of our pastors are using the COM group with Covenant Eyes. I have spoken with at least one other who is using a different service. It is possible that some are hesitant to spend the $24 per year. You might ask your pastor if he would participate if you or your church were to provide these funds. This doesn’t guarantee that there will not be temptation or yielding to temptation, but it does provide a tool for nipping issues in the bud.

...as we forgive others

by Seth Osborn
Boulder, Colo.

I’ve never thought of forgiveness as an especially difficult thing to do. Someone does something wrong, they realize it, they say they’re sorry, and the people that were harmed forgive them.

Yes, there are times where the offending party does something particularly awful (some of these cases involving illegal acts), and forgiveness can be very difficult. We should still forgive them—and we can with God’s help—but it will be hard.

Outside of those, though, forgiveness shouldn’t be too hard, right? You may need some time away to gather your thoughts (for short periods; preferably not stretching into days and beyond). You should be able to bring yourself to forgive this person if they’re genuinely repentant for what they did, just as God and probably countless other people have forgiven you.

If you look at it this way and allow God to help you when you’re struggling a bit, then I find forgiveness to be a pretty simple thing to grasp.

Let’s crack open the Bible and look at some verses on the topic. Ephesians 4:31-32 has a command for us: “Get rid of all bitterness, rage, and anger, brawling and slander, along with every form of malice. Be kind and compassionate to one another, forgiving each other, just as in Christ God forgave you.”

There it is, right there! God forgave us, so we shouldn’t be stingy with our own forgiveness, even if it means forgiving the same person multiple times.

Matthew 18:22 shows us that when asked if there was a limit to how many times we should forgive the same person (seven times?), Jesus answered, “I tell you, not seven times, but seventy-seven times.” This wasn’t to say that the 78th time we need to forgive someone it’s okay if we don’t! Jesus was trying to get the point across that you should forgive so many times that you lose count, then keep forgiving past that.

But wait... Do you notice something in those verses that contradicts my notion of forgiveness? I’ll give you a hint: here are the verses from Ephesians rewritten to fit my earlier formula. “Get rid of all bitterness, rage, and anger, brawling and slander, along with every form of malice. Be kind and compassionate to one another, forgiving each other, just as in Christ God forgave you. But you only have to do this if the person that you’re forgiving is sorry about what they did.”

People won’t always be sorry. And even if they are sorry, they might not always make that known. Some people might not even realize they’ve done anything to hurt you. We still need to forgive.

The second and third situations are pretty simple to resolve. If this is a serious issue, bring it up with them. Don’t attack them for what they did, but get to where you’re able to keep yourself collected and talk to them about it. Explain how you were hurt by what they did, and they’ll probably apologize. I realize this is easier said than done for some (like me), but it’s not as difficult as forgiving someone who’s not apologetic. Not by a long shot.

Here’s my advice: Pray. Not for them to realize their own error, but for you to be able to forgive them regardless of whether or not they feel guilty about what they did. If they did do something wrong, it’s their issue. Your only concern should be letting go of all of the negative feelings you hold toward them.

It’s hard to do this on our own. Sometimes it’s hard even when they do ask for forgiveness, so really the only thing to do here is let God help you (which is really a good plan for everything in life). Letting go of anger will let you be happier and feel free. And, most importantly, it’s what God wants you to do.

Again, it will be tough. But it will also be worth it.
“Using the dead as our seeds will not yield life.” This was the message I took away from listening to speakers at the 100th Anniversary celebration meetings of Seventh Day Baptists in Guyana, South America.

The closing Sabbath service at the Bona Ventura SDB Church on the Pomeroon River brought in delegates from across Georgetown and up and down the river. A significant portion of the service was spent looking back at the past 100 years, but the point was brought back repeatedly that we cannot rest or even tarry long on the achievements of the past.

I felt compelled to echo this sentiment, but as a visitor I was reluctant to diminish the sacrifices of those who built the Guyana SDB Conference. Though I saw new faces and new families, many in attendance were part of generations of ministry history. Some had done extensive research and shared the history of those who came before us. It was in one of those looks backward that I was freed to speak about learning from the past, with a focus on the future.

After introducing myself, I shared reasons that Guyana is a particularly special place for me. For one, the first time I ever packed my bags to work with a missions ministry was five years ago when I joined an SDB team to Guyana. I helped for a couple weeks in constructing a men’s camp dormitory. Another reason was that the SDB Missionary Society, where I am currently the executive director, has decades of partnership in ministry with the Guyana Conference. And then I discovered I had family history, as well.

One of the speakers mentioned a relative of mine among the early contributors to the Guyana mission. Wardner and Bertha Fitz-Randolph had been active in the work in Jamaica, and later Wardner came to help minister in Guyana. Wardner was one of my great-grandfathers. He died 10 years before I was born and I knew very little about him or the work he had done.

However, Wardner Fitz-Randolph’s importance that day was how I could speak of setting aside our families’ achievements and look toward the future. They agreed with me that if we build on anything but Jesus, our work is in vain. This included building on the fallen bodies of those coming before us. Only Christ and his work through them and us was what mattered.

They were lost sinners, too. In many ways our predecessors had given their lives for others, which there is no greater love. But we have to keep in mind that none of their works counted toward their salvation, nor towards ours. Only by the grace of God are we all not cast out.

It is with this message we have to turn toward the next hundred years, or the next year, or especially this next day. It is in this next day that we join God in starting a new church plant, in discipling a brother or sister, in showing the love of Christ to someone not yet part of the Church. Introducing Jesus to a new believer today inspires a celebration in heaven.
Winning at losing (my head)

In Psalm 139:14, King David wrote, “I praise you [God] because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know that full well” (NIV).

Commenting on this verse, S. Michael Houdman [founder, president, and CEO of Got Questions Ministries] wrote, “The context of this verse is the incredible nature of our physical bodies. The human body is the most complex and unique organism in the world, and that complexity and uniqueness speaks volumes about the mind of its Creator.”

The human head contains the human brain, which is the most important part of our physical bodies.

Like many older people, I tend to misplace or totally lose things. I am, after all, an imperfect Child of God. However, I’ve been “accidentally abandoning” things, hither and yon, most of my life.

One of my earliest memories is of my mother towering over me and saying—with more than a hint of frustration in her voice—“Leanne, it’s a good thing your head’s attached.”

When you’re a kid, that statement can be very confusing, especially if you take your parents’ proclamations literally.

Isn’t everyone’s head attached? I thought. Are there thousands of headless people wandering around, bumping into other people? How do people lose their heads in the first place? And, if they’re truly headless, how in the world can they find anything, including their heads?

At the time, those puzzling questions were way over my head.

Fortunately, I usually end up recovering most of my lost items, either through my own efforts or those of others.

When I play euchre with a circle of friends twice a month, I inevitably leave something at the host home. (In the winter, it’s usually a sweater or a pair of gloves.) Everyone, rightly so, assumes those wayward items belong to me, so I eventually get them back. But that doesn’t always happen.

Several years ago, I wore a favorite suit jacket to a healthcare center in Edgerton, Wis., while singing with a group from the Milton SDB Church. Just before starting our musical program, I removed my jacket. When we headed back to the church, I inadvertently left that jacket behind, and I haven’t seen it since.

I’ve also lost a favorite, suede-like, long-sleeved tan shirt. I still have a matching green one, but I have absolutely no idea where the tan one is. I assume it’s somewhere in the United States; then, again, I’ve been to Canada and on a Caribbean cruise ship. Wherever it is, I hope it’s happy keeping someone else warm.

Commenting on my tendency to leave things where I don’t want to leave them, an acquaintance recently joked, “Yes, that’s Leanne’s head over there. She should be back next week, with the rest of her body, to pick it up.”

I laughed, but on the inside, I wanted to cry. It’s not fun to lose your head, under any circumstances. First off, I’ve grown very fond of my head, and I want to keep it. Second, headless people tend to really “gross out” people who still have their heads.

So, what am I to do? What brilliant strategies do I have in mind to put an end to my innate talent of misplacing my possessions?

I figure if I didn’t have any arms—and thus, no hands—I would stop leaving things behind, simply because it would be extremely difficult to pick up things and misplace them in the first place. However, that would involve extensive surgery. Besides, I’ve grown very fond of my arms and hands.

Oh, well... To quote that famous philosopher, Popeye the Sailor, I guess I’ll just have to live with the fact that, “I yam what I yam.”

judge in regard to food or drink or in respect to a festival or a new moon or a Sabbath day—things which are a mere shadow of what is to come; but the substance belongs to Christ” (Colossians 2:16-17). This Scripture is used against Sabbath-keeping, but that was not the intent. The word “mere” was added to this translation but was not in the Greek manuscripts. What this passage does is name the days set aside for worship. The Sabbath was mentioned but the Lord’s day was not, nor was the first day of the week.

This Scripture states that no one is to be your judge in regard to how you worship on the days mentioned. Our Sabbath worship is a shadow of what it will be like when Christ returns.

Paul also wrote, “Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I directed the churches of Galatia, so do you also. On the first day of every week each one of you is to put aside and save, as he may prosper, so that no collections be made when I come” (1 Corinthians 16:1-2). Since there was only one church in Corinth (1 Cor. 1:2 and 2 Cor. 1:1) “each one of you” could not refer to churches. “Each one of you” refers to individuals in the church who were prospering financially on the first day of the week because it was a workday. They were instructed to set that money aside for the saints in Jerusalem.

The next passages are taken out of the context of eternal rest, but they are also a call to Sabbath worship. “For He has said somewhere concerning the seventh day: ‘And God rested on the seventh day from all His works’” (Hebrews 4:4). “So there remains a Sabbath rest for the people of God” (Hebrews 4:9). In this chapter of Hebrews the word “rest” refers to eternal rest, but the word “Sabbath” refers to the seventh day of the week which remains a day of rest and worship for the people of God.

Jesus claimed that the religious establishment of His day was following the traditions of men rather than the commands of God. He said to them, “Neglecting the commandment of God, you hold to the tradition of men.’ He was also saying to them, ‘You are experts at setting aside the commandment of God in order to keep your tradition’” (Mark 7:8-9).

When I realized that the religious establishment of our day was doing the same thing in regard to the Sabbath, I decided to keep the Sabbath according to the commands of God. Now there is a much better connection between the Old and New Testaments.

Pastor David Johnson
Celebrating 25 Years of Service in Miami

by Theo-Nathan Wilson
Miami, Fla.

In the summer of 1988, a young man was called to take on the leadership role as Senior Pastor of the Miami, Fla., Seventh Day Baptist church. Twenty-five years later—after 106 baby dedications, 99 baptisms, 86 weddings, 47 funerals, and extending the right hand of fellowship to 163 members—the need to honor a man of God who has given himself wholeheartedly as a servant-leader to the Miami SDB Church was quite necessary.

On Sabbath September 28, 2013, church leaders and congregation members, family and friends traveled from various parts of the world to join Pastor Andrew Samuels and his wife Kay in celebrating their 25 years of pastoral service. The service was enhanced with music from the Miami SDB praise team, dance ministry, and a combined ensemble which included members of both the Miami and Ft. Lauderdale churches. It was a Sabbath evening to remember.

Pastors Noel Campbell and Ericessen Cooper shared the leadership responsibilities for the evening, and guest speaker Pastor Whaid Rose, President of the Church Of God Seventh Day Denver Conference (a school colleague of Pastor Samuels’ wife Kay), delivered the message. “It’s All About People” was inspired by Romans 16:1-16, 21-27.

Pastor Rose, along with other ministries throughout the evening, brought a few main points to the forefront: 1) The service to God through service to people, 2) The partnership of ministry colleagues over the past 25 years, and 3) The Faithfulness of God.

Pastor Andrew has demonstrated throughout the past quarter-century that he is a prime example of a servant-leader. During his tenure, 66 pastors have shared the Word at the pulpit. He has also reciprocated this act at various churches in the United States, in the Caribbean, Europe, Africa, and South America.

He is always willing to serve in ways that are beneficial to others. Additionally, he is known for demonstrating extreme acts of kindness, and a high commitment level to whatever he lends his service.

The aforementioned comments were conveyed by many friends, including a Sunday morning soccer club in which he participates, as well as alumni from his high school in Jamaica, Wolmer’s Boys School. These words of appreciation were delivered to Pastor Andrew during an “open floor” segment of the program, filled with lots of humor and heartfelt appreciation.

The service closed with Pastor Andrew expressing his gratitude to everyone in attendance. After his closing statements, all pastors who were present laid hands on both Pastor Andrew and Sister Kay, thanking God for the last 25 years and asking for His direction and blessing on the years ahead.

In true SDB fashion, the celebration continued with refreshments and fellowship afterwards.

The following sums up Pastor Andrew as the strong leader he has been: “Whatever your career may be, true leadership means to receive power from God and use it under God’s rule to serve people in God’s way.” – Leighton Ford

We extend a special thank you to all those who travelled from various parts of Florida, Georgia, New York, Wisconsin, and Jamaica to celebrate with Pastor Samuels.

Thankful, or Taken for granted?

As the calendar pages flip quickly toward the end of June, I’ve received a number of notes and e-mails thanking me for serving as editor. Many have said that they will miss reading this page.

I’ve been humbled by how these words have made an impact. Some readers have used these “Korners” as devotionals at local gatherings and Bible studies, others have been collected and re-read, and one “clever” person even snuck some of my just-published words into a prayer at a family dinner—where I was a guest.

Speaking of prayer, mine is one of thanksgiving to God for this ministry opportunity and platform. May the ongoing words shared in the Recorder continue to minister far beyond our denomination and years.

Here’s a Korner from a dozen years ago. The title is not about me, but the Sabbath.

Receiving a thank-you note in the mail always gives me a boost. It’s a thoughtful gesture from a grateful person.

During this spring’s Resurrection season, I had the opportunity to do a dramatic reading at the Milton church. One church member was so moved emotionally and spiritually that he sent me a thank-you card to express those feelings. I was encourgaged to know that the Lord had provided a blessing through my efforts.

I got two more cards this week. One was a belated thanks for a Christmas gift. (Hey, I just mailed a similar note of my own a couple of weeks ago.)

The other expression came in the form of a “store-bought” card, all the way from Arizona. I had called an older gentleman who winters there after hearing that his usual springtime return to Wisconsin had to be postponed due to a diabetes-related operation.

Our phone conversation lasted less than 10 minutes, but when I opened that lovely American Greetings card, you would have thought that I had spent several days in person at his bedside. He and his wife were so grateful and thankful to hear from a friend.

God “wrote” into Creation a wondrous, weekly gift: the Sabbath. Do we express our thanks for His faithfulness? Or are we more like what Philip Yancey wrote in Christianity Today several years ago:

“I remember my first visit to Old Faithful in Yale-lowstone National Park. Rings of Japanese and German tourists surrounded the geyser, their video cameras trained like weapons on the famous hole in the ground. A large, digital clock stood beside the spot, predicting 24 minutes until the next eruption.

“My wife and I passed the countdown in the dining room of Old Faithful Inn overlooking the geyser.

When the digital clock reached one minute, we, along with every other diner, left our seats and rushed to the windows to see the big, wet event.

“I noticed that immediately, as if on signal, a crew of busboys and waiters descended on the tables to refill water glasses and clear away dirty dishes. When the geyser went off, we tourists oohed and aahed and clicked our cameras; a few spontaneously applauded.

“But, glancing back over my shoulder, I saw that not a single waiter or busboy—not even those who had finished their chores—looked out the huge windows. Old Faithful, grown entirely too familiar, had lost its power to impress them.”

Are we taking God’s weekly gift for granted?

We can accurately predict—to the minute—what time Sabbath begins. Just like Old Faithful, we know it will come.

God’s faithfulness and love deserves a response. Let’s be thoughtful and grateful, and send Him a thank-you with
our untiring praise,
wonner, and obedience.
