The Sabbath Recorder.

Volume XXVIII. No. 32.

WESTERN, N. Y., SEP'T. 3, 1873.

Whole No. 153.

The Church of Christ is today, as ever, the great moral and religious agency in the world. All the blessings that flow from it, and through it, are such as are calculated to promote the highest good of society. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual. The Church is the visible, external expression of the invisible, spiritual power of God. It is the instrument by which He manifests His will and旨意 to the world. It is the organ through which He speaks to men, and by which He guides and governs them. It is the visible manifestation of the invisible, the material symbol of the spiritual.