PILSt,
meetings
every evenm
a9'
the result of our difficulties

have bee adjusted,
Illd
brotherly
va gre
t punty of backsliders
are bemg reclaim and muers hope y

up:lb,lr
of the

g

With Sabbath

SUMMARY OF SHOWOERS

IN THE STATES.

TODD'S WORLD, New York, Jan. 1, 1873.

The following is a summary of the showers received during the past year in the United States, compiled from official reports:

The total amount of precipitation was 22.5 inches, with a variation of 10 inches. The eastern states received the greatest amount, while the western states had the least amount. The greatest amount of precipitation was received in the state of New York, while the least amount was received in the state of Wyoming. The average precipitation for the year was 20 inches, with a variation of 15 inches.

The precipitation was distributed throughout the year, with a peak in the month of June. The precipitation was heaviest in the month of July, with a total of 3.5 inches. The precipitation was lightest in the month of December, with a total of 1.5 inches.

The precipitation was distributed throughout the year, with a peak in the month of June. The precipitation was heaviest in the month of July, with a total of 3.5 inches. The precipitation was lightest in the month of December, with a total of 1.5 inches.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

SPECIAL SESSION

The special session of Congress met on January 2, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.

WASHINGTON:

The government of the United States has been in session since January 1, 1873, and has been marked by a spirit of cooperation and progress. The President has been able to give his full attention to the business of the government, and has been successful in carrying out his programs. The Congress has been equally cooperative, and has been able to pass a number of important measures. The Supreme Court has been active, and has rendered many important decisions. The country has been prosperous, and the people are confident of the future.