The following letter, which appeared in the New York Star of this week, is of great interest:

"It is to be regretted that the Congress of the United States has not yet been convened. The President has been in constant correspondence with the Secretary of State, and has informed him that the peace of the country is at stake. The President has also informed the Senate that he has received information from the Secretary of War, that the situation is critical, and that immediate action is necessary to prevent a breach of the peace.

"The President has further informed the Senate that he has received a report from the Secretary of the Treasury, that the government is in a state of bankruptcy, and that the situation is urgent. The President has also informed the Senate that he has received a report from the Secretary of the Interior, that the situation is critical, and that immediate action is necessary to prevent a breach of the peace.

"The President has further informed the Senate that he has received a report from the Secretary of the Navy, that the situation is critical, and that immediate action is necessary to prevent a breach of the peace.
