THE SABBATH RECORDER, APRIL 24, 1879.

THE SABBATH.—April 24, 1879.

An unusual circumstance has arisen in the course of the present week, which I have not been able to report, because of the extraordinary congestion of business that has been pressed upon me, and the consequent lack of leisure for preparing a Sabbath sermon. The subject was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.

The subject, as I said, was one of the most important and timely of the kind that occurs to the mind of a preacher, and the circumstances under which it occurred were such as to make it urgent and imperative that it should be brought before the people at once. I have therefore determined to give a brief sketch of the subject, and to leave the full development of the matter for another time.