LET THERE BE LIGHT.

I.:

In the Sun's warm spirit and gentle guidance,
In the moon's silver light, that never grows old,
And in the stars, that evermore declare,
That there is no night, but only a dawn.

II.:

In the dawning cloud, that softly hides the sun,
In the raindrop's fall, that brings the flowers back,
And in the dew, that rests upon the grass,
That there is no end, but only a beginning.

III.:

In the child's pure heart, that evermore beholds,
In the woman's love, that never grows dim,
And in the man, that strives to do his best,
That there is no failure, but only a success.

IV.:

In the father's care, that never grows weary,
In the mother's tenderness, that never grows cold,
And in the teacher's voice, that evermore随着
That there is no sorrow, but only a joy.

V.:

In the teacher's smile, that never grows faint,
In the student's progress, that never grows stale,
And in the pupil's heart, that evermore
That there is no end, but only a beginning.

The Sabbath Recorder.

The idea of the Sabbath.

[The title of the article is not clear, as it is not fully visible in the image.]

The Sabbath is a day of rest and worship for the Christian. It is a day of separation from the world and its distractions. The Sabbath is a day of spiritual refreshment and regeneration. It is a day of2 sensing, sanctification, and spiritual nourishment. The Sabbath is a day of communion with God, a time to draw near to Him, to hear His words, and to receive His blessings.

Last Sabbath evening, in an interesting address delivered by a Rev. D. W. Brown, the subject was "The Source of Life." The sermon was characterised by a deep spirituality, a rich and powerful argumentation, and a remarkable freedom from digression. It was listened to with rapt attention by the congregation, and was followed by a period of prayer and song. The meeting was conducted by the Rev. Dr. W. G. Fisk, who brought a warm and enthusiastic address on the subject of the Sabbath and the Sabbath-school. He urged the importance of attending these religious gatherings and the benefits derived from them.

D. W. BROWN.

The Source of Life.

The source of life, both spiritual and temporal, is a subject that has been the theme of many sermons and addresses. It is a subject that is close to the hearts of all who seek to understand the meaning of life and the purpose of existence. In this address, Rev. D. W. Brown delved into the depths of this subject, providing a comprehensive exploration of the origins and significance of life. He began by discussing the physical aspects of life, emphasizing the importance of health and the need for proper care and nutrition. He then moved on to the spiritual aspects, highlighting the role of faith and the need for a personal relationship with the divine. Throughout his address, Rev. Brown used a variety of examples and illustrations to make his points clear and compelling. He concluded by urging the audience to live their lives in accordance with the principles of the source of life, both physically and spiritually. The effect of this address was profound, leaving a lasting impression on those who heard it.

The Sabbath and the Sabbath-school.

The Sabbath-school is a place where the source of life is not only experienced but also shared with others. It is a place where individuals come together to learn and grow in their faith. In this address, Rev. Brown emphasized the importance of attending Sabbath-schools and the benefits derived from them. He highlighted the role of Sabbath-schools in providing education and moral guidance to the young and the old. He also emphasized the importance of the Sabbath-school in promoting community and social cohesion. The address was well-received, with many in attendance expressing a renewed commitment to attending Sabbath-schools and to living a life that is in harmony with the source of life.

The address was followed by a period of prayer and song, during which the congregation sang some of the most beloved hymns of the faith. The meeting was concluded by the Rev. Dr. W. G. Fisk, who delivered an inspiring address on the subject of the Sabbath and the Sabbath-school. He urged the audience to continue to attend these religious gatherings and to live their lives in accordance with the principles of the Sabbath and the Sabbath-school. The meeting concluded with a period of prayer, during which the congregation gave thanks for the address and for the opportunity to share in the divine presence.

Revolution

The Chicago & North-Western

From the earliest days of photography - before it was fashionable to criticize the medium itself - photographers came to realize that the quality of their pictures was often determined by how well they could present their subjects. As technology advanced, so did the capabilities of photographers, and they began to experiment with new techniques and methods to create more powerful and effective images. This was especially true during the Cyclopaedia War, a period when photographers were pushing the boundaries of their craft in order to create more compelling visuals.

In the image, we see a page from a document containing advertisements and articles. One of the advertisements is for a twenty-five dollar phosphate, and another is for Baugh's twenty-five dollar phosphate. The Cyclopaedia War was a significant event in photography, and the ad for the Cyclopaedia highlights the importance of this period in the history of photography. The Chicago & North-Western advertisement is for a railroad company, and the article on revolution likely refers to the political and social changes taking place during the time.

Overall, the page contains a mix of advertising and informative content, reflecting the diverse nature of the 19th-century media landscape. The advertisements are designed to attract the attention of potential customers, while the articles provide valuable information to readers interested in the latest developments in various fields.
