CONSERVATION.—By some means a report is in circulation that a meeting of the organization is to be held at the Soldiers' building in Boston. If such is the case, we hope it will be promptly corrected, as no such meeting is contemplated. The Boston organization is under the management of the Boston branch of the organization, which is entirely independent of the national organization, and has no connection with the one referred to in the report.

CONDEMNED NEWS.

GOOD NEWS.

SULPHUR RING. Since the discovery of the sulphur ring we have had but little news; consequently, gardens, orchards, and pastures show its effects in a great variety of ways. The sulphur ring is found in the pastures, where it has revived some things, and where it has killed some others. It is a bad thing, but it is not the end of the world.

The general health of our society is good, and we hope it will continue to improve during the spring.

SABBATH MORNING, Aug. 9th, a fire in Mephisto River burned down two buildings, destroying some property. Some property is insured. About two-thirds of its value.

Sabbath morning, Aug. 9th, the comunity was startled by the announcement of the death of Mr. Mephisto. He has been a valued member of our society for a long time, and will be greatly missed.

A farmer had an old horse that he intended to sell. He was so pleased with the horse's ability and appearance that he asked everyone he met if they knew of anyone who might be interested in buying it. Everyone was impressed and several people expressed interest. One person in particular, a man named Mr. Harris, showed a great deal of interest and even offered to buy the horse immediately.

However, Mr. Harris was known for being a very generous person, and he didn't want to buy the horse for himself. Instead, he wanted to find someone else who could make better use of the horse. He asked the farmer to let him have a few days to find the perfect owner.

Meanwhile, Mr. Harris went around town telling everyone about the horse and promising to make it a very valuable asset to whoever bought it. He said that he would personally oversee the training and care of the horse, and that he would even arrange for a special ceremony to celebrate its new owner's good fortune.

The next day, Mr. Harris met with a group of potential buyers and presented them with the horse. He explained that it was a special animal, and that whoever owned it would be blessed with good luck and prosperity. Everyone who heard this story was convinced that the horse was worth the price Mr. Harris was asking.

Some people even offered to buy the horse for a lower price, but Mr. Harris insisted that it was worth every penny. He said that he had already convinced one person to buy it, and that it would soon be theirs.

The day came when the horse was finally sold. Mr. Harris met with the new owner and presented him with the animal. He told him all about the horse's abilities and potential, and how it would bring him good fortune.

The new owner was overjoyed and thanked Mr. Harris for helping him find such a wonderful horse. He promised to take good care of the animal and to use it to its fullest potential.

Mr. Harris smiled and said that he was glad to have helped. He said that he believed in giving back to the community, and that he was happy to have been able to do so.

And so, the horse was sold, and Mr. Harris continued to live in the community, known for his generosity and kindness.
