Mr. Cooper’s wife died in 1869, after which he raised the last of his two children, one on May 18, 1870. His family took part in the development of the Cooper Brothers’ Trust and the Bank of New York. Mr. Cooper was a member of the Board of Directors of several companies, and he also served on the boards of other organizations.

In the late 1800s, Mr. Cooper was a prominent figure in the business community of New York City. He was known for his philanthropic work and his dedication to the improvement of the community. He was also a respected member of the local chapter of the American Civil War Veterans.

Although his name is not as well-known today as it was in his lifetime, Mr. Cooper remains an important figure in the history of New York City. His legacy lives on through his contributions to the city and his philanthropic efforts.

Education.

"Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding."

-Colossians 3:16

BY J. H. BURTON.

If you turn to an old edition of Webster's Dictionary, you will find under the word "prudent" a definition which reads: "possessing a prudent faculty;" and that is the word used in the King James version of the Bible in Micah 6:8, "He will judge wisely in the court of his land." The word "prudent" comes from the Latin word "prudentia," which means "knowledge, understanding, wisdom."

The concept of wisdom is important in education because it is the foundation upon which all learning is built. Without wisdom, we cannot make informed decisions or understand the world around us.

The purpose of education is not just to acquire knowledge, but to develop wisdom. This involves not only learning facts and figures, but also learning how to think critically and analyze information. It is through this process of learning and applying knowledge that we develop the wisdom that is necessary for making informed decisions.

The education system must therefore be designed to foster this kind of learning. This means providing students with the tools and resources they need to think critically, ask questions, and explore different ideas. It also means encouraging them to apply what they have learned in real-world situations.

In conclusion, education is not just about acquiring knowledge. It is about developing wisdom, which is the ability to make informed decisions and understand the world around us. The education system must therefore be designed to foster this kind of learning.
The Sabrett Benedict, April 19, 1888.

REV. J. A. FLAHERTY

RECENT cabinet photographs of Rev. Charles M. Lewis are now on view by John Shelly & Son, 16 N. Main St., and by T., photographer. By mail will be promptly fulfilled.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of the members of the Catholic University of the City, the friends of religious orders, and the general public to the rare and valuable collection of photographs of the Jesuits in our country, which was arranged in the late Rev. Fr. John Baptist's time. The collection is now in the hands of the new archbishop of the city, and is on view for inspection. The photographs are of great value, and are very much sought after by those who are interested in the history of the Jesuits in the United States. The collection is now in the hands of the new archbishop of the city, and is on view for inspection.
