Entered as Second-Class mail matter at the Plainfield, N. J., Post-office, March 13.

Every great preacher, in the message he delivers to men, translates the truth of God from his own heart experience. Anything less than this is comparatively dull and unmeaning, and little understood. Hearts understand the language of other hearts. Love has an universal language; and when any phase of divine love has become a part of one's life, he can translate it to another life in some way that will be appreciated. This translation is often less in the words used than in the subtle meaning which comes with the words, and which cannot be confined to them. The soul of the speaker often has greater power than his words. The secret of success in preaching is far more through soul experience, and therefore soul expression, than through any or all attainments in literature or oratory. If you would preach so that men will feel what you say, you must know and feel that of which you preach.

A story is told of a boy seven years old who listened to the preaching of a much-talked-of minister. This boy had been told by his mother to listen carefully, and report all he could remember. The boy replied, "Oh, yes, mother." "Well, what did you hear?" The boy replied, looking grave and earnest, "Well, mother, every time the preacher said I, I drew one of these marks, and there are just one hundred and ten of them." It is not difficult to understand why he was a much-talked-of minister. It would not be easy to write a more cutting criticism upon his preaching than the boy of seven years did when he reported the number of marks which made up his notes.

Our Chicago friends will be pleased when we say that, noisy and windy as that city is, few people appreciate how great its business enterprises are. It is said that an Eastern firm once gave a Chicago factory an order for 200 automobile carriages. There is no reason to doubt but that Chicago is to be the greatest manufacturing city on the continent. The waters of Lake Superior wait to float untold millions of tons of iron ore to Chicago. The almost endless prairies, west, northwest and southwest, wait to flood it with countless millions of bushels of grain. We only hope that its greatness in material things will be supplemented, finally, by its greatness in all that makes for nobility, purity and Christ-likeness among men.

In the tide of exports from the United States, coal has come to be a great factor. It is said that the annual output of coal in this country now exceeds that of Great Britain. In 1899 we exported 244,000,000 tons, while Great Britain exported about 10,000,000 tons. One hundred of coal has been more than doubled in the last fifteen years. In 1880 it was less than half the amount of the output in Great Britain. A London tradejournal lately pointed to the fact that the Paris, Lyon & Mediterranean Railway Co. had ordered 75,000 tons of American coal; and suggested that the export of American coal might become as important as are the cereals and cotton. It is said that this coal has been delivered at Mediterranean ports at six or eight shillings per ton less than Cardiff coal. One American company has recently chartered fourteen steamships to carry coal to European and African ports. It has gained acknowledged supremacy in the matter of iron and steel, and if her supremacy in coal becomes correspondingly great, it promises commercial influence to a degree hitherto unknown.

Phonetie spelling, like other changes-reformatory or otherwise—does not find a road wholly easy. According to the New York Tribune, "The Massachusetts House has voted for a bill to rework the us or reformed spelling in public documents bi a large majority." This bit of sarcasm is a little overdrawn, but we confess to hoping that phonetic spelling and in a moderate degree, will be adopted at an early day, in all English literature. Some forms of spelling which are now orthodox can be caricatured into a picture quite as unseemly as the above from the bonk, and while we could not desire to see the reform carried as far as the following specimen indicates, we still hope for its success, within limits.

The Christian Advocate is responsible for this specimen of phonetic spelling and in a postscript, as follows: "Plez ekakus mi spilln. I spil bi ere, but I sing bi not."

FROM A FRIEND OF THE RECORDER.

We venture to give below the main contents of a letter lately received, thinking that the writer will not object to sharing what we were pleased to read.

Our correspondent, who is to be the writer will not object to sharing what we were pleased to read.

A number of letters lately received, thinking that the writer will not object to sharing what we were pleased to read.

The central point in Mr. Sheldon's comparative failure is seen in his inability to grasp the situation as to its breadth, and the greatness of the work he undertook. Too many evidences appear of narrow views concerning political and social questions, with reference to which he attempted to speak. We are glad that the experiment was undertaken, while we regret that the ideal was not more nearly attained. There will be, probably, a temporary refection in the public mind against similar efforts. Nevertheless the effort has stimulated much thought, and out of that stimulated thought good results will gradually come.

WHO LED CHRIST TO THE TEMPTATION IN THE WILDERNESS?

A few days since, a correspondent wrote us a letter concerning a discussion in Bible class as to the Spirit by which Christ was led into the wilderness for his great temptation. The letter is not before us at this moment, but the substance was that some members of the class thought that the spirit of the prophet, while the writer of the note took the ground that he was led by the Spirit of God. A little study of the situation, we think, will lead to the conclusion that the Spirit which descended upon Christ as he came from the baptionsal waters went with him, led him, into that testing struggle with the prince of evil, which we know as the Temptation in the Wilderness. This baptism was an act of recognition which God gave by the descent of the Spirit at that time, to make the opposition of all evil in the spiritual world. Having been accepted by the Father, the Son was not left to this struggle with Satan alone. That such a testing-time must come was inevitable. Evil is always present when any new step is taken in the direction of right. The forces of evil in the universe know full well that the new spiritual notion is opening his work, the kingdom of evil was in danger; hence the simple story of Christ's testing, which, enlarged, might fill volumes. It may be put in this way: Christ, dedicated to his work by baptism, anointed to his work by the descending Spirit, passed directly to the opening conflict which awaited his work. Humanly speaking, everything placed him at disadvantage. He was alone with the tempter. No aids could reach him except that of the Spirit. It was a struggle of life with death, and, so far as the purposes of Satan were concerned, a struggle unto death. Hence the words, "Then he was led by the Spirit into the wilderness." He was tempted by the Spirit, through weary and fainting with hunger, alone and unaided, as to human presence, he went forward to the first victory.

Without this broader view, it is easy to misunderstand how God's Spirit, which, but an hour before, had anointed him, could lead him directly into temptation. The trouble comes partly from our imperfect definitions. Temptation here, as in almost every case, should be rendered testing. It was the first trial of strength, of life against death, in spiritual things. So far as the record shows, the Spirit withdrew after leading him into the battlefield, and yet, it is not possible to suppose that the Redeemer was left without adequate aid.

Selection of most interest to us is not the theological one, as to how, or why, the Spirit of God led Christ into the battlefield of testing; but the lesson to ourselves, that we, whenever tested, and however sorely tried, may find the same victory. This victory with Christ, if we can reason that God leads us in the field of battle. We may always realize this if we are in the path of duty. The path of duty and of obedience is the path of testing; and so surely as God points the path of duty, so surely does the Spirit lead us up to be tested, that we may know our strength, and may prove the weakness of sin when we contend in his name.

To us, the opening verses of the fourth chapter of Matthew are glorious with spiritual life and divine presence. They were not so once when we used to shrink from the idea that the Master of life must be thus tempted, almost to overflowing. Seen in its true light, the picture is radiant with the promise of victory. It is the young warrior led to his first battlefield by the one who knows that victory awaits him. It is the first contest, over which a Father's love watches, having already decided in his heart, that he shall be well pleased shall find abundant victory. It is the scene which is to create a standard of success, below which the Christ will never fail. It is the beginning of the final victory that came when the stone was rolled away and the Risen Christ ascended, and the heavens welcomed the Conqueror.

This experience finds no complete parallel in human history and its counterparts in every Christian experience. Every great opportunity involves the peril which comes with the test of strength and with new demands. Every privilege is liable to the same temptation to abusiveness. The human soul is in danger of being undermined by selfishness. On the other hand, everything good is attained only through possible or actual temptation. Perhaps in the greatest moments of life, tests of strength must be greater power than at any other time. The nobler the purpose, the severer will be the effort of the evil one to break down that purpose. It is hardly wise to ask to be wholly free from temptation. How who seeks opportunities, or finds himself possessed of great strength, must meet corresponding temptation to abuse them. Spiritual safety does not lie in immunity from temptation, but in such direction that temptation is harmless, or, at least, overcomes it. An army is not strong because it is protected by great intrenchments; but in the open field where the battle rages most fiercely, when the men must stand as one great mass, bound and guided by one voice, the army is resistant unto victory. Welcome opportunity, strength, privilege, and higher ambition, even though you know that all these will bring struggles. The more the life is the counterpoints of the temptation of Christ in the wilderness. But know that the Spirit which leads you toward higher attainments and presents you with greater opportunities will not desert you in the hour of testing.

LEAFLET FOR PASTORS.

Bro. H. D. Clark, of Iowa, has prepared a leaflet in connection with the distribution of Sabbath tracts. The Publishing House has printed a quantity of these, and has on hand sufficient supply for all orders. The leaflet can be used by any pastor, and with any tract. We reproduce it below.

Those who can make use of the leaflet by drawing a pencil through the signature line. They will be furnished on application to this office, without cost.

Your Attention.

I would like to talk with you as a friend to a friend, about some great truths concerning which many people are indifferent. But this would take more time than you would be willing to meet the moment. Do you know that in this busy, commercial age, great truths are neglected and great errors flourish? Most wish to be honest with God, but they consider themselves too busy to investigate questions outside of their everyday affairs. But truth which concerns our well-being should not be neglected; much more, should not be suppressed. You and I should be actuated by the desire to seek a knowledge of God's will, and not be contented until you know it. A writer has said, "Belief is no good"—"Greatness of centuries, of generations, does not add weight to dogmatic assumption. It is investigation, candid reasoning in the light of history and passing events, that we must look to, to guide us in the true course.

If our belief will not bear investigation, we should know it. Have you ever considered your religious beliefs will bear inspection? Be candid and sincere. If men are thus, they will not be afraid to reason and investigate even where they have been long held and is as dear a life. Permit me to present you these tracts. Please read them. This is the request of a friend, and with a consideration of their needs, and test all things by the Word of God. If you wish further conversation, or reading matter touching the Sabbath question, please call on or address:

UNEARTHING HISTORY.

Dr. E. J. Banks, of Cambridge, Mass., late United States Consul at Bagdad, is director of an expedition now being formed to excavate the ancient city of Ur, in Chaldea. The work is under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution. The history of Ur must be measured by thousands of years, rather than by any modern chronology. It seems to us a long way back to the time when Abraham came out from Ur, of Chaldea. The beginning of Ur probably lies further back of Abraham than Abraham's time is from 1900 A.D. The proposed excavations will undoubtedly reveal much concerning the early religious life of Chaldea. This will show more clearly than anything has done hitherto, the germinal thoughts out of which the faith of Abraham sprang; for, while the prevailing worship was that of the sun and moon, there must have been under-currents of thought and developments of truth by which Abraham began to be fitted to become the Father of the Faithful. The present appearance of Ur is said to be that of three stories of an ancient temple, rising sixty or seventy feet above the surrounding plain. Around this temple stands the ruins of various places where important ruins are covered. It is estimated that it will require two or three years to complete the excavations, and an appeal is made for fifty thousand dollars for this purpose.

Some important excavations are going forward at Susa, in Persia. These, it is said, indicate more clearly than others have done, the Asiatic origin of Egyptian civilization. The excavations at this point are under the direction of Monsieur Jacques De Morgan, and the patronage of the French Government. On the site of the ancient city of Susa he finds accumulated rubbish, which indicates the various occupants of the city. The character of these remains furnishes abundant indication as to the chronology of the occupation and the grade of civilization represented. It is in this way that evidences accumulate that Egypt borrowed her civilization from Babylon. The pale yellow clay and worked with chopped straw, remains of agricultural utensils such as are found in Egypt, and many other similar proofs are quoted in support of the theory of De Morgan. We have no space to continue details, but every student of Egyptian history will be interested, as the excavations go forward, to know what further may be developed.

Those who believe in the Bible have found that all excavations made in the Eastern world, whether in Egypt, Palestine, Babylon, Persia, or elsewhere, bring abundant support to the correctness of Biblical history. While imperfect tables of chronology are compiled to give way to new discoveries, the ethical teachings of the Book, and the general historical accuracy of the Old Testament, are strengthened by every new discovery. That the soil of the Old World and the ruins of her former glory can be surveyed, with satisfaction and pride such treasures, is one of the best results of this age of investigation.

Dr. Joseph Parker says: "Some men's faith is always sitting in a court and crying foul. Doubt is the name of that influence." Wise men keep out of draughts if they are legible, and strong men are not injured by them.

A Few Extra.

Father used to give good measure. If it was a bushel of apples, he liked to lay a few fair, rosy-cheeked ones on after the measure was full. It was probably a blending of the generous and the artful impulses. He felt well toward his little friends and invited others to; and he did dearly love to see the measure rounded over on top.

Perhaps there is a strain of heredity in this column. Your contributor's engagement with the Tract Society closed with March. We are no longer Western Editor. But, really, there are several things which we have not said yet which have been lying in wait. So forgive the buckster who has been dealing out his wares to you these years, if he slyly lays on top of the basket, already full, a few Baldwins and Bellflowers. They were left lying in the bin, and they won't keep any way.

The Joyful Prayer-meeting.

That is the kind we like to see, and that is the kind that attracts sinners to Christ. It is not a dead Saviour that we meet to celebrate one. He even now stands at the right hand of God and maketh intercession for us. Lift up your heads and rejoice. Let your testimonies ring out with confidence—not in yourselves, but in the God who worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.

Why is it that, before the meeting, and after the meeting, we greet each other with freedom, cordiality and smiles, but when the service begins, a long face must be imported for the occasion? WEEP in solemn, measured, stilted tones. When we gather around the fireside of home with our dear ones, the restraint is gone. Ideas, news, expressions of love, aspirations, desires, flashes of wit, touches of pathos flow freely, accompanied with that deep undertone of earnest endeavor. Why not the same when we gather at our heavenly Father's fireside at the end of the week, as the Sabbath begins? "Day of all the week the best! Let us believe it and act. Think of the Friday night—the joy and cheer upon our faces. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." Be yourselves. If the Lord has given you a gift of quaint wit, use it for him—not to glory yourself, but to help others "in his name."

Out of the experiences and thoughts of the week, the incidents you have noticed, the books and items you have read, the desires which have sprung up in your breast, the longings you have for others and your efforts fit their behalf, out of all this rich fund "bring thy gift to the altar." So shall the Christ in you draw all men unto him.

The Experiment of a Christian Daily Paper.

One reason why many people have been disappointed in Charles M. Sheldon's newspaper, conducted for a week on the principle, "What would Jesus do?" is because they expected too much of the editor and himself promised. The fact is that its type and headline equipments were very similar to those of any other daily. It was printed on similar paper and was mailed through similar combination. The old-time reader clung to the vain idea that the type were to be made of Jasper, and the paper a papyrus scroll; that a winged angel would oversee the printing, and that the edition would be delivered to its readers by doves like that which brought to Noah the first glad sign of a restored earth.

There have been no miracles. The paper was edited by everyday men in much the same everyday way. Naturally enough the management has borne the marks of inexperience. Its tendency was toward the characteristics of a magazine or a weekly like the Christian Herald. But the paper has done much good. That good is suggestive rather than programic (if we be permitted to coin a word). Its influence will be to make men think over the question which its author propounded, "What would Jesus do?" Many editors are already asking that question and, in a quiet way, trying to run their paper in accordance with the answer which their experiences suggest. There would be no need for Mr. Sheldon to found such a paper in many of our Seventh-Day Baptist communities, for he would not be likely to improve on what our own men are already doing.

Mr. Sheldon has wisely announced in positive terms that he will make no further connection with the Topeka Capital nor any other newspaper. His work lies in other lines, and his famous week will be of value chiefly along the lines of stimulation and agitation. How widely reaching may be hinted at is the fact that Oom Paul Kruger is one of the subscribers.

Alfred Student Evangelists.

The Evangelistic Glee Club is holding three meetings during the spring vacation, one at Little Genesee, one at Nile and one at Sco. Other points near by will be visited later in the spring. The club has already sung at Richburg. The program of the meeting includes several songs by the club; an account of last summer's campaign, by Henry Jordan; and a survey of the influence of the general movement upon the denomination, by Walter Greene; an outline of the work proposed for this year, by Alva Davis; and a presentation of the plans for raising money, by Paul Tittsworth. Our readers will be interested to know that Paul Tittsworth is the son of Mr. Tittsworth, a trusted and loved man among us. The pastor of the Alfred church expects to be with the boys in their meetings whenever it is possible without neglecting his regular duties. The club is made up of eight young men, but another quartet is in training and may be ready for the summer campaign.

For a Seventh-day Baptist Northfield.

It is a curious study to observe how an idea germinates and bursts forth simultaneously in independent minds. Guttenberg was not the only man who thought of movable types in the fifteenth century; there are many contemporaries who are investigating the possibilities of the same subtle force. The reformation was in the air when Luther came forth to battle with Rome.

Now for some months there has been quickening in the mind of a kind of Seventh-day Baptist Northfield or Summer School. This should be held at or near the location of the General Conference, immediately preceding or following the session of the General Conference. Such a school should be to confer regarding denominational movements and methods, to give training in personal work, to unify the denominational life by bringing the various lines of opinion together for a better chance to "talk it over" than we now enjoy. A part of each day should be given to recreation.

From different sources several plans have now come to our notice which are variations of the same idea. The conference proposed by the Tract Society for Thousand Island Park just preceding the General Conference is one; the Sabbath Reform Institute which will be in session at Alfred, under the leadership of Dr. Lewis while you are reading these words, is another. Pastor Cottrell has in mind a camp meeting on the fair grounds at Homer,sville about the middle of August, for the presentation and discussion of denominational truths, this meeting to follow a campaign by one of the evangelistic quartets.

Certainly not the least practical of all is the local class idea in process of development at Milton Junction and Nortonville. Pastor Hill's large group of young people studying Bible doctrines will be watched with especial interest.

We are content to listen a littler longer while the ecclesiarchs you may be among their own forms. There is good in them all, and, of course, they all have their limitations. Out of the combined experience valuable plans ought to grow.

Will not pastors Cottrell and Hills give us frequent successive appreciations of their classes? Let Bro. W. D. Burdick, who is largely responsible for the Sabbath Reform Institute in the Western Association, give a discriminating account of its sessions, with hints for the next one. Let Rev. Wm. Crandall, the wide-awaked shephered at Homerville propose his plan more definitely. Let the Tract Board Committee tell us about railroad fares between Adams and Thousand Island Park, and what arrangements can be made for those who wish to camp out and board themselves.

We sincerely trust that out of these plans and their discussion will grow a meeting, denominational in scope, simple and practical in organization, reasonable in expense so as to be within the reach of all, and immensely stimulating and helpful to our work as a people.

THE BROTHERHOOD.

HOW TO TEACH A BIBLE LESSON.

Read before the Sabbath-School Institute at Nile, N. Y., March 14, 1900, by Rev. Wm. C. Whitford, of Alfred.

The art of teaching is one of the finest of the fine arts. To teach is a harder task than to acquire knowledge, difficult as that often seems. A liberal education should include a study of practical psychology and of the science of pedagogy. It is, however, apart from my purpose to give a scientific lecture on the art of teaching. But I would make a few practical suggestions in regard to methods of teaching a Bible lesson in Sabbath-school.

Before coming to the work of the Sabbath-school hour, or even beginning the work of preparation of the particular lesson for which we have just had such an interesting address, there are three lines of general preparation which ought not to be omitted: 1. A thorough, general knowledge of the Bible. He who applies before a class to teach a lesson from the Bible should know much more than the lesson in hand or its immediate surroundings. He should have his mind stored with a general outline of Biblical history. He should be familiar with the history of the Jews,—political and religious. Particularly should he be familiar with the life and doings of the prophets, especially of the great ones like Isaiah, David, and Christ, during his earthly ministry; and with the narrative of the doings of Paul, and of the other apostles as recorded in the Acts, and as alluded to in the Epistles. In addition to the general outline of history he should have a knowledge of each particular book of the Bible. I do not say that he ought to be able to tell what book of the Old Testament is in his mind at any given moment; but he certainly ought to be able to tell whether a chapter which he hears read belongs; but he certainly ought to be able to tell whether a chapter which he hears read belongs to the Gospel according to John or according to Matthew.

I remember once seeing a picture intending to illustrate the passing of the children of Israel through the Red Sea, in which the Levites were represented as bearing the ark. The artist had forgotten that the ark was not to have been there; for the Israelites had been crossing the Red Sea at Mount Sinai. It is to be hoped that teachers of Biblical truth are, as a rule, better informed than this artist was. This general knowledge of the Bible is not to be used at all times; it should be reserved for force to help the teacher in his special preparation, and to be at hand in ease of an emergency.

2. Another general preparation of still greater importance is an experimental knowledge of God and of his love. No amount of scholarly ability nor of familiarity with the outward form of Holy Scripture can compensate for a lack of personal knowledge of God. We sometimes hear the question asked as to whether an unconverted person should be allowed to teach a class in Sabbath-school. Far better let there be found a place in our public schools for a teacher who thinks that the world is flat.

The Bible is a revelation from God. It is possible to ignore this fact in our study. But if we are examining the facts of history, of geography, of manners and customs of the ancients, and forget to inquire what God is teaching through this record, we are missing no small portion of Bible study. The Bible is a divine as well as a human book. That teacher who has not the ability to look beyond the scenes of this earthly life, who has not felt the love of God, and is not moved by the life of our Saviour, has missed his calling in undertaking to give instruction in regard to the oracles of God.

In reading the history of Isaiah's call and plied to the non-elect. It is a very great advantage to know in regard to their occupations and their home-surroundings. He should know of their temptations and difficulties; their doubts and their ideals. He must know them in order to begin at their limit of knowledge and thus be able to teach them.

With this general preparation, and the careful study of the lesson for the week, the teacher comes before his class. As methods to be employed we notice first that the teacher must have a definite purpose in mind as to what he is about to do. It is not enough to have an indefinite purpose "to teach the lesson." "To teach the lesson" may contain a very different meaning for one than it does for another. There may be some difference of opinion as to precisely what the teacher should undertake to do; but perhaps the most useful phrase to present a plan which expresses what most teachers ought to undertake; to fix the facts of the lesson; to make clear the teachings; to draw out the applications.

The more I have thought about it, the more I am convinced that the chief object of Bible-school teachers should be to let the Bible speak for itself. We should bend our energies to make plain the simple facts of the lesson. Even in classes of advanced students it is not without profit to spend a few minutes in speaking of the statements which lie upon the very surface of the passage read. There is often no waste of time when the questions asked can be answered almost without a thought by one who has read the lesson intelligently. There is an advantage to all in thus refreshing the memory, and there is a very fair chance that some member of the class may learn something that he did not know before.

It is surprising what a misapprehension exists as to the plain statements of Scripture narrative, to say nothing of the more dogmatic portions. For example, a young man once rebuked by his teacher had just that day heard these things they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth," was asked, "How did Stephen's words affect his judges?" Without stopping to think of the symbolic meaning of "gnashing of teeth," he replied at once, "They bit him."

(Concluded next week.)

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The death of Rabbi Wise, of Cincinnati, which occurred March 26, has removed from Judaism one who, in many respects, was its strongest and brightest light. Broad-viewed, scholarly, generous toward those who differed from him in religious faith, Rabbi Wise for half a century has led in the influences which have made for righteousness. He was buried with great ceremony at Cincinnati on March 29. He was an organizer and educator of high rank. His work has created American Judaism on the map.

The strike continues among the various trades unions in Chicago, and threatens serious disorder. Whether the municipal government will be able to control the turbulent elements is yet to be seen. A serious riot which occurred a few years since, remains to be seen.

The death of General Joubert, the Commander-in-Chief of the Boer forces in South Africa, occurred on the 27th of March. Even his enemies being witnesses, General Joubert was a man of great ability, of great personal courage, and a man of great personal integrity and character. His death was due to peritonitis.

Some claimed that he was born in Cape Colony in 1839; others that he was a native of Pennsylvania, and went from America to South Africa, by way of Holland, when he was about 14 years of age. President Krueger takes command of the Boer forces as Commander-in-Chief. The death of General Joubert is a very great loss to the Boers.
Missions.

By O. U. Whitford, Cor. Secretary, Western, R. I.

A MISTAKE was made in publishing the account of the appropriation for the year 1900, for the Storkoe and Holgate field, Ohio, which Pastor A. G. Crofoot, of Jackson Centre, Ohio, visits as missionary. The appropriation is $50, instead of $125, as published. We make this correction, though at a late hour.

EVANGELIST J. G. BURDEK has closed his labors with the Second Brookfield (N. Y.) church. In addition to his last report, four more are to be baptized, and three more will unite with the church by letter and one by testimony. Two families have turned to keep the Sabbath. About twenty-five in all have found Christ.

Mrs. M. G. TOWNSEND, on account of the small-pox cases in Holgate—one case being in the house in which her family lived—did not go to Welton, Iowa, as was expected. She went from Darwin, Iowa, to Chicago, to be in readiness to go to her home, if her children had returned. It is hoped that her absence will escape the terrible scourge and that she will not be obliged to enter Holgate and be quarantined for an indefinite time.

FROM D. H. DAVIS.

To-day is the first day of the Chinese New Year, which completes the twenty-fifth year of the reign of Kung Su. This holiday season does not come with its usual joy to many as it has evidently been a troubler near at hand for this people. How China is to be saved from dissolution is a problem that seems to have no solution. A spirit of hopeless despair and desperation is coming over many of the Chinese.

Many prayers are going up to Almighty God that he will interpose on behalf of this country. The Christian element is a strong factor in the present desire for reform; especially is the missionary looked upon as the friend of the imperial government. I think it is true that missionary work in China is the primary cause of the present desire for reform. Many of the reformers are not Christians, but they have largely received their enlightenment through the channel of missionary work. Mission work has been recasting the Chinese mind, which has led to the present crisis of political affairs. May those who are brought into touch with political life have special wisdom granted them at this time.

I would call attention to a fact well known to many, but, perhaps, not borne in mind by all, that Mrs. Davis and myself have just completed our twentieth year of work as your foreign missionaries. It was on the 29th of this month that we first landed in Shanghai, with Miss Lizzie Nelson and our little daughter Susie.

Arriving at this point in our experience, we can but feel exceedingly thankful to him who has watched over and made it possible to work so many years in the interest of our Mission in China. It is not necessary that I should make any comparison of the condition of the work twenty years ago with the present; but we feel that a good deal, through the help of God, has been done, to whom be all the praise. We have had our difficulties, trials and sorrows, but the Lord has graciously laid under us his everlasting arms and has taken us through it all until the present; and what he has done is the earnest of what he will continue to do for us in the future.

We do not know many more years we may be permitted to labor here. If it should be another term, we hope to see great things accomplished for China. The leaven of Christian truth is certainly working in the great mass, is destined to leaven the whole lump. It would be a great joy if we could live to see China become a Christian nation. It is not impossible that we may see this. We certainly have a right to pray and work for this one grand object.

We crave an interest in the prayers of all the people, that God may grant unto us his continued favor and make us more useful in the future than in the past.

SHANGHAI, China, Jan. 31, 1900.

WILL THE CONFERENCE PAY?

The Financial Committee of the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, to be held in New York, April 20-23, 1900, is endeavoring to raise $40,000 to pay expenses. It is a large sum. The whole West India Mission of the Presbyterian Church takes less than this by about $10,000 each year. Of the twenty-seven missions of the church there are scarcely a half dozen that take more. The writer was asked the other day—and by a very earnest friend of missions—why the money was not spent directly in missionary effort. "Would it not do more good?" It is a legitimate question, Will the Conference pay?

Missionary money goes farther to-day than it ever did. It used to be said that it took one dollar to send one cent to the heathen. This is a matter of fact. A great deal of money that goes abroad for the needs of mission workers hovers in almost all the churches around ninety per cent of the totals. That is, it takes one cent to send nine to the heathen.

Does this mean that this Conference exists for is to make all this money go further still?

For a century and a half women and men have labored in many lands, and with many different methods. Some of these methods have been more economical, but they have not been everywhere adopted. What is needed is to bring these more efficient methods to the knowledge of workers everywhere. The Conference is not a council to lay down laws; but the interchange of ideas and experiences will be a source of great help to all who desire to do the Lord's work well. In so far as the Conference can accomplish this it will do much to pay itself.

The papers of great interest will show what can be done. The first is that of Comity and Co-operation. That is now, owing to denominational rivalry, a serious waste of money year in the mission field, no thoughtful person will deny. The economic value of co-operation is self-evident in the business world; nor is it any less so in the religious world. In the Conference will be representatives from all over the world and from every religious denomination—in itself an object-lesson in Comity of no little value. That the discussions in the Conference on this subject will hasten that perfect unity for which Christ prayed, will be the delight of all good men, and, if done, there can scarcely help but strengthen the purpose of every one in the endeavor to accomplish it.

The other topic is that of Self-Support. Many mission churches are already working actively in this direction, and have done much. Money that is used to support native pastors, build churches and carry on schools, hospitals, dispensaries and proses is now to be used in models for the further spreading of the Gospel. Many missions, however, still regard self-support as a sort of impractical ideal. If the stories of what has been done in other lands show that it is very practical, and if the methods there successfully employed can be adapted
DELEGATES FROM ABROAD.

The delegates from abroad to the coming Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, to be held in New York in April, will form a group of the Society's active in foreign mission work. Each denominational union will send over its oldest representatives, both lay and ministerial.

Among Baptists, one of the foremost will be Mr. Charles Williams, of Accrington, one time President of the Baptist Missionary Union of Great Britain and Ireland. Mr. Williams has always been an advocate of the principle of liberty and an open communion, and now at the age of eighty-one, is one of the most prominent figures in the Free Churches of England. Other Baptists will be the Rev. and Mrs. George Kerry, both of whom have labored for many years in Calcutta, India.

One of the most notable figures among the Methodists will be the Rev. James C. Breweit, President of the United Methodist Free Churches of England, in which office he has practically the leader of his denomination. Mr. Breweit has been elected to many offices by his colleagues, and has been chairman of the London Missionary Society, the Rev. Henry T. Chapman, the General Secretary of the United Methodist Free Churches of England. Mr. Chapman's duties require him to keep in close touch with the work of the mission. The Wesleyan Methodist Church of England will be represented by the Rev. John Price, who has labored so long and successfully in the West Indies.

The Congregationalists will be represented by the Rev. W. E. Cousins, long identified with the work of the London Missionary Society in Madagascar, and especially with the work of Bible translation; the Rev. Richard Lovett, M. A., Secretary of the Religious Tract Society; the Rev. George Owen, of China, an earnest advocate of Romanized Chinese; and the Rev. R. Wardlaw Thompson, Secretary of the London Missionary Society, a man widely known and greatly honored. Mr. Thompson is Chairman of the British Committee on the Conference. It was hoped that Dr. Griffith John, of China, would come, but, after opposing higher education for many years, he was unable to do so. He is still working to the organization of a theological school.

Among the Presbyterians from England will be the Rev. William Dale, who, back in the seventies, had charge of the Presbyterian congregation in Singapore. The United Presbyterian Church of Scotland will be represented by the Rev. George Robson, D. D. He is editor of the large monthly periodical, the Missionary Record, but is best known as the author of the history of the Hanima Mission, which has had such a large sale. The most distinguished representative of the Free Church of Scotland will be the Rev. Professor Thomas Smith, D. D., of Edinburgh, the only survivor of Dr. Bannatyne. Though now past his eightieth year, he is still a commanding figure. Another worker in Calcutta for the Free Church of Scotland is the Rev. Kenneth S. Macdonald, D. D., now in his thirty-fifth year, and senior missionary of all denominations in his field. From the Presbyteran Church in Ireland will come David G. Barlick, LL. D., who served the English Government for many years in both administrative and judicial capacities in the Punjab.

The Church of England will have a particularly able representation at the Conference.

SHUT-IN.

Shut in, shut in from the ceaseless din
Of the world, and its many duties, and strife,
Shut in from the sorrowing, the joyless, the sad.
And all the world's endless round of life.

Shut in with tears that are spent in vain,
With the dull companionship of pain.
Shut in with days of washing and cooking,
And days of sun and toil, and toil and cooking.

Shut in with the thought of the members lost,
With the bitter knowledge of failing powers.
Shut in with the days of dreams gone by,
And days of hope and fear and joy.

Shut in with love's sorrows, the longing of heart,
And the promise of the present to come.
Shut in with the world's hopes and its fears,
And the knowledge of its endless cares.

Shut in with the thought of the coming of Christ,
And the knowledge of the world's need.
Shut in with the world's troubles and its toils,
And the thought of the world's ends.

May our missionaries and teachers in home and foreign fields see the absolute necessity for personal consecration, and the experience of a direct and supreme work of the Holy Spirit in their own lives.

The Father, we pray that into each of our lives may enter the knowledge of the blessedness of service for thee; that our hearts may be so filled with thy love that we may fully consecrate ourselves and our means to thee, and thus thou mayest use us to send thy light and thy truth abroad in the world.

From West Virginia.

Perhaps you were led to hear a few words from West Virginia. We are looking forward to the Association that will be held with the Lost Creek church, in May, with a great deal of anticipation, and hope that much good will result from it.

The Aid Society has planned to repair the inside of the church, and have raised by subscription and the society funds nearly $70 for this purpose. We have paid $10 to the Woman's Board on our pledge for this year, and will write them later in the season. We want to do all we can for the mission work. Requests have come to us from three members that their names be dropped from our roll, that they may join at Salem. We were sorry to take their names from our list, but feel that it is right and best to do so.

We have word from the women of the little church at Roanoke that they will raise something for the Woman's Board, but could not state how much. Many of the small churches would do much if they were struggling, with help from the Missionary Society, to keep a missionary pastor on the field, and feel they are doing all they can.

We have a very encouraging letter from the society at Salem, in which they speak of some new plans that have been successful. One was the appointing of a Board of Directors, consisting of three members, their duties being those usually assigned to the president. They have received two new members into their ranks this year. Another plan, that might be helpful in other societies, was to divide the society into divisions, the chairman of each division making it a point to look after the work in that section. They have occasional socials, the divisions taking turns in holding their meeting, and have pledged $25 to the Woman's Board this year. They had pledged $100 toward the new church, and have raised nearly $75 on that pledge this year. We trust these items will prove that we are not sound asleep, and that we are interested in the business of your Board.

Thanking the Heavenly Father for past blessings, and trusting him for future needs, we are yours for the Master.

SECRETARY SOUTH-EASTERN ASSOCIATION.

THE CHRISTMAS BOX.

All readers of the Recorder who are interested in the Christmas Box will be glad to learn that the box sent by the steamship "Indrapura," on the 26th of October, 1896, reached its destination in January; and, after a few days’ delay in getting it through the Custom House, was joyfully received by our people.

Members of the Woman’s Board who attended the Conference last August will recall the informal discussion upon this branch of work, and the final decision to have the Box Committee form. Several articles had been received by them together with any goods which Mr. and Mrs. Crofoot wished to send from New York. Mr. Crofoot’s purchases were delivered to the Committee, after which it was not difficult to have a box of the proper size made to hold all the things, when they were packed ready for shipping.

The China and Japan Trading Company, Limited, which has shipped our goods so many years, has been very careful to send all out side freight, so we were obliged to look up some other company; but, through the courtesy of a gentleman in the China and Japan Company’s office, we were kindly referred to other parties; and the letters which reached us from shipping brokers and shipping companies, offering to carry anything from a five pound package to a ship-load, at attractive figures, made it appear that China was not very far away, and that the loss of our old friends, the China and Japan Company, was not so serious as at first appeared. With less difficulty than was anticipated, arrangements were perfected with the “United States and China-Japan Steamship Line” to carry our goods.

After Mr. Crofoot reached Ohio, he wrote to the Committee, asking that some maps be purchased for Miss Burdick’s school, so as to be sent in the box, she having written to buy them, but the letters reached him after he had passed through New York. Happily, the Committee found what seemed to be an ideal set (we trust they may prove such), at a trifling cost, and with much satisfaction we saw the covering of the box fastened down, ready for shipment.

The money in the hands of the Committee was now exhausted, but some dear women in Plainfield and Wesleyan forwarded what would be needful to cover the expense of marine insurance and freight to destination. A good friend in New York sent the box to Brooklyn for us free of charge, from which it carried through the rest of the goods. One or two other things were tried without success, with much dissatisfaction we saw the covering of the box fastened down, ready for shipment.

A good friend in New York sent the box to Brooklyn for us free of charge, from which it carried through the rest of the goods.

After three months, buffeted by winds and waves, the "Indrapura" steamed into port; and the long journey of our precious box came to an end. What happened it then can be better told by an eye-witness, and we therefore transcribe the main part of Mrs. Davis’ letter received only a few days ago.

Mrs. Ballington Booth says that one day when she was feeling keenly her failures and discouragements, and wondering if she really was worth anything in her Father’s vineyard, her little boy came in from a walk in the City Park. Seeing her face was lighted, he put into her lap a little handful of wilted chickweed. She picked up the withered weeds with a very grateful heart, and gave them all to the little hand which had brought them to her. They were in themselves of absolutely no account, but they were all there! Her little boy’s loving thought and plan to bring mamma his only bouquet lifted the burden from her heart. “Oh!” she said, “shall not my Father take my little service, which oftentimes seems so worthless and unavailing, and count it precious, because in my heart I longed to do something for him?” — Missionary Review.

The International Missionary Conference, to be held in New York City from April 21 to May 1, 1900, will be the third World’s Conference of Missionaries. It will be as far as any international gathering held in America. It will be the privilege of a life-time to attend this gathering of foreign missionaries from all parts of the world. Comparatively few will enjoy this privilege, but all earnest, devoted, souls will participate in its spirit. The Conference Committee send far and wide the following message: “If the Conference is to carry the church for the new century in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ,” it must itself be lifted and carried through, and the spirit of service that shall lead us to call upon the church to pray—"to pray not our words, but the words of the whole church shall with one accord wait on God for the outpouring of his Spirit upon this Conference.” — The Helping Hand.
FROM OUR SOUTHERN FIELD.

"The field is the world, and the whole world is going into the Church. The victory that overcomes the world is our faith. But what is the world which we are to overcome? It is not that which God made by his creative fiat and molding hand," says Meyer, "but the shows, fashions and pursuits of men. It is that world which the devil took Jesus into, and an exceeding high mountain, and showed him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, and said, 'It is given unto thee, and to whosoever I will, I give it.' That world, then, that Satan has corrupted, and sown with seeds of evil, that world, wherever it be, where sin is, and where men are being lost because of sin. It is the will of our Father who is in heaven that the good seed of the kingdom of heaven should be sown there. He wishes to bring all of his estate into cultivation, that there be no corner of it that will not yield him fruits.

Of the Church of Christ; it is said: "Ye are God's husbandry." The evident meaning of this expression is: Ye are God's tilled ground, his cultivated field, upon which great labor and much expense have been bestowed; you have been redeemed and instructed in all things concerning the Lord; now go and cultivate and bring into cultivation all the barren and waste places of the earth, "for the earth is the Lord's and the glory thereof, the world and they that dwell therein."

We cannot say of any part of the world, our labor here is tentative, this field is an experiment. This is contrary to the commission which we have received from heaven: "Go ye into all the world, and disciple all nations." But some one will say: There are jungles and deserts, and much that beareth only thorns. This is true! "but an enemy has done this." The promise is, "the desert shall blossom as the rose." It is promised to the redeemed ones, who arise and shine when their light is coming as glory of the Lord is shined upon them. "Although darkness had covered the earth, and gross darkness the people, the Lord shall arise upon them, and his glory shall be seen upon them. And they shall go forth as doings of light, and their right hand as a river of righteousness. Lift up thine eyes round about and see; all they gather themselves together, they come to thee; thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then thou shalt see and be glad, and thy heart shall fear and be enlarged, because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee; the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. The multitude of camels shall cover the dromedaries of Nilotes and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold and incense; and they shall bring forth the praises of the Lord. The people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land forever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands, that I may be glorified. A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation; I, the Lord, will hasten its time." What are we therefore about such a cause, one so devoutly to be wished? Sow the seed by all waters. Cultivate the barren and waste places. Results are with God. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

What about the Southern field? Speaking as a Seventh-day Baptist, the field is large, and heretofore not all that is in the field is brought in? Yes; it promises as much as any field on earth, for the seed which has been sown and for the labor that has been expended upon it. Circumstances are exceedingly favorable for Seventh-day Baptist work. There are certain fundamental principles of the Bible which are almost universally by the people of this section, which justifies the above statement. The people believe in a true and living God as Maker and Creator of all things; in the Bible as the inspired Word of God; in the Divinity and pre-existence of Jesus Christ; in man as a sinner, fallen, depraved and lost, without a Saviour. What is best of all, they almost universally believe the Word of God to be the all-sufficient rule of faith and practice, and in the integrity of the Decalogue. Agnosticism is rare, and scarcely respected. The reason for this is that those ecclesiastical bodies which teach contrary to the above-mentioned principles have not occupied this field. It is, therefore, yet primitive in its faith.

[Here follows extracts from the Christian Index, of Atlanta, referring to the work of Dr. Broughton and Dr. Pierson, in Brooklyn, N.Y., and concluding that the "orthodox" preaching of these men, which clashed with the "liberal" sentiment in Brooklyn, is welcomed and applauded in the South. We omit the extracts, since the Southern people, religious and political, gave considerable attention to the case, and the facts are yet fresh in the minds of our readers. Having given the extracts, Bro. Ashurst continues as follows:]

Dr. Broughton is a typical Southern preacher, and pastor of one of the Atlanta Baptist churches. What he preached in New York and Brooklyn will be received as fundamental truth throughout the entire South, by salt and sinner. Now, this is my conclusion: If the fundamental principles of Seventh-day Baptists can be accepted as truth, in any locality, such territory must be favorable for the spread of Seventh-day Baptist teachings. But it will be said, they misapply these principles. Yes; and we need to point out the inconsistency and error of this work, under God and his Holy Spirit, to remove the prejudice over which they stumble and to make plain paths for the feet of them who publish peace.

In regard to the integrity of the moral law, and especially of the Fourth Commandment of that law, we need have but little fear of B. A. Torrey’s booklet, "Ought Christians to Keep the Sabbath?" being accepted, when he concludes that "the commandment that Jesus Christ left us is not that we keep the Sabbath, but that we love one another." It will be seen readily that Mr. Torrey misapprehends the greater truth taught by the Apostle Paul, that love to God and man is the fulfilling of the law. Walking according to the royal law is the highest expression of love to God and love to one another. What God has joined together let no man put asunder; "love is the fulfillment of the law." On the above points, the opinions of G. Campbell Morgan will be most hearty endorsed by nearly every Christian. Speaking of the commandments, he says: "They were ten sides of the one law of God. The teaching of Jesus reveals the fact that these commandments are so inter-related that if a man offend in one point he breaks the unity of the commandment, and thereby the whole law." The same is true in our case, and the same is true in every Christian community. If any ten commandments were to command us not to eat, and one of us should eat, he is against all ten. May God save us from such a strange condition.

There is a magnificence in truth that can trust God to preserve it, though it steps from the mountain brow to thin air. Be mine the faith only to challenge God, I put to you to exhibit my strength or courage or loyalty. Not to call on him to show me a foe worthy of my steel. Not to ask him to place hard conditions of life before me. Not to tell him to take me for a hero and give me great pain to bear, that I may show how strong I am. No, none of these. Be mine the faith that leans on the Almighty arm of God. Let him be the hero of my faith, the bearer of my cup of sorrow, the one who has triumphed over hard conditions of life. Yes, be mine the faith that believes on him as having overcome my greatest foe. Oh, thou, Blessed Christ, be thou the Overcomer, the victor, in the strife. Let me be the believer, the worshipping, the worker in thy field of labor! Lord, be thou the dominion, the power, the glory, forever and ever! Let me be the bond-servant of Jesus Christ.

But, if I be a laborer in God's field, a bond-servant of Jesus Christ, and witness of Satan falling as lightning from heaven, I must be sure that I have his image and superposition upon me. If he is, it is to us, and we will be true workers for the Lord that we are out of focus, an instrument out of the path of the notes and teaching of our vision is distorted. "We have not the Holy Spirit because Jesus has not yet been glorified" in our life and work.

But this will ever be true in the age of seed-sowing: "the kingdom of God cometh not with observation." Who can estimate his work? The angels are the reapers. The time of harvest the end of the age. Oh, what indescribable sensations of joy will be ours when the King shall say to us: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." A. P. ASHURST.

FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

To the Editor of the Sabbath Recorder:

The question of the expenses of those in attendance at our Anniversaries seems not to be settled to the satisfaction of all. I would suggest that the question be brought up in each of the Associations in their next sessions, and that each be brought before a committee at the next Conference. This would result in an expression of opinion of nearly all of the people interested in the matter.

Young People's Work

By EDWIN SHAW, MILTON, WIS.

The following is an extract from an address by Prof. W. A. Rogers, a specialist of no ordinary attainments; yet notice, please, his words of caution about the following the work of a specialist in choosing a vocation for life:

While I hold strongly to the utilitarian view in the choice of subjects for special investigation, I desire to offer a word of caution in two directions: First, that it does not necessarily follow that the specialist who undertakes investigation would add very much to our present knowledge of any given subject beyond results obtained by other investigators. I still hold that it is better to make choice of subjects which have effect and present interest than of those in which he will thereby come into touch with more vital interests than those involved in an investigation undertaken along lines which are solely theoretical. Secondly, it is well to point out the danger of entering upon the life of a specialist at all. It is undeniable the fact that the tendency of the life of concentrated attention to any given subject involves some elements of danger. The question to be considered is, is it safe to attempt to gain all one's knowledge upon any given subject rather than to obtain a general knowledge of a great many subjects. The tendency of specialization is, undoubtedly, in the direction of concentration of one's powers and attentions in one direction to the exclusion of vital interests socially and intellectually. I pity a society made up exclusively of specialists. And again, when a man has confined his attention to a given subject for a long time, he loses the power of giving his attention to an entirely general subject. He even loses this power of thought and expression upon general subjects. The tendency of specialization is to contract, rather than to expand, his mental vision; he is less interested in the social affairs of life which contribute so much to the happiness of families and friends and neighbors.

What can protect one from these dangers, when one loves and chooses the work of a specialist? What is the outlet now for this peril? With what may one be inoculated whereby to mitigate or prevent the danger, and thus encounter it, as Prof. Rogers did, with impunity? Listen: A liberal college education.

THE TWO BOXES.

By LILLIAN V. BARCOCK.

One bright, beautiful day Man was born, and as he journeyed through a dreamily fair country, called Childhood, an angel came to him and gave into his keeping two boxes, one containing joys, the other sorrows. The box containing joys was almost full, but the other was nearly empty. These boxes he was bid den to open and examine every morning. He soon found that each day a new sorrow was put into his box, and he would have thrown it away, but it and the box of joys were bound to him by a slender, beautiful chain called life, which he could not break without causing his death.

As Man journeyed on through this delightful land he seldom thought of the future; he was contented to go on and on always just as he was then. But as he grew older and traveled farther, there came to him longings, vague and indistinct, to reach the country of Manhood toward which he was journeying; and he pictured to himself the great things he would do when he arrived there, and when the dreamy vagueness of childhood land grew into the clear distinctness of manhood land he was able to say that he had a heart, for his sorrows were as yet few and his joys many.

At first many flowers appeared along his path, and green fields and shady woods were about him, but as he journeyed on the beauty of the country these became fewer and fewer until grim, stern rocks stood all about him.

Each day he opened his boxes, and the joys and sorrows fluttered out, sometimes few, often many. Some were so transient they floated quickly away and were lost in the sky above; but some clung to him always. Among the joys was a hope which he remembered as coming from the box of joys, Manhood, and which had ever hovered near him. It was the blessing of a God. As he grew older this joy became dearer and dearer to him, although at times he almost forgot it. In the midst of some great sorrow it would become so indistinct to him that he would be about to break the chain of life, but it never wholly faded from his vision. One day, when he had become weary of the land of Manhood, and would have been glad to turn and go back, he found that he could not, for a great wall of years stood between him and the land of childhood; and then a joy which had always been with him, but unnoticed, came nearer, the joy of memory. Sometimes these blessings took human shape and talked to him. One day wisdom came in the form of an old man and asked him whither he was going.

"I am traveling toward Eternity, and some day I shall arrive there.

"And where is Eternity?" the old man asked.

"I know not except that it is beyond the land of Oldage."

Then the old man said, "Who goes into Eternity comes not back. That is why so little is known about it."

And of all his blessings Man valued most the blessings of God and wisdom.

As Man journeyed on he came to the country of Oldage. This was a peaceful land somewhat like that of Childhood, still for some reason he seemed not to care to linger there long. His hair was white, his mind grew dimmer, his steps were lighter, and easier he moved and his form grew lighter and easier to bear, for so many of them had proven to be blessings. Now among the sorrows which he feared most was death. Often he gazed at the box sadly, knowing that when he opened the lid death would flutter out. One morning as he awoke in the dim early dawn, he found that he had come to the border of Eternity, and as he lifted himself upon his elbow to open the box, he saw that the box of sorrows was empty and from the box of blessings out fluttered death. This last joy came in the form of a beautiful maiden who pointed into Eternity and said: "Fear not, I am but your guide. And taking him by the hand she raised him up, and he stood upon his feet at all the dark, damp mists and clouds that hung about the hills of Eternity rolled away, and Man saw that which filled his face with a new glory, and he turned to his guide and said, "Now I understand why thou art my last and greatest blessing, for thou givest me that which I vainly sought all my journey through the lands of Childhood, Manhood and Oldage, and thou, who I thought was my greatest sorrow, hast proved my richest blessing."

Then came a great flourishing of wings and the sound of music, wondrous sweet, swelling about them; for one moment he caught a glimpse of all the lands through which he had passed, but he passed this new one so much more that he wondered how he could have cared to stay upon the place called Earth. Then another glorious chord of music bore him on to heaven's gate, where rapturous music that those who had known him in the lands below heard and marvelled.

MILTON JUNCTION.

The Milton Junction Y. P. S. E. C. is trying to do a good work under the leadership of the following officers and chairman of committees:

Fay Coon, President; R. A. Frink, Vice-President; Mercy Garthwaites, Recording Secretary; Lula Davis, Treasurer; T. C. Monroe, Corresponding Secretary; N. M. West, Lookout; Rev. G. J. Crandall, Missionary; P. H. Coon, Temperance; D. T. Dicknor, Sabbath-school; Mrs. R. A. Frink, Relief; Mrs. Emerson, Music; Beulah Burdick, Social; Emory Ticknor, Auditor. Miss Laura Burdick is Superintendent, and Miss Emma Ticknor, Assistant Superintendent of the Junior Society, which numbers about forty members.

The Sabbath-school Committee is trying to secure the interest and attendance of the Sabbath-school by the following plan: Make all invitations cards, given out personally to those who do not habitually attend.

The Lookout Committee keeps in touch with the absent members by correspondence with them.

The Missionary Committee, in co-operation with the Ladies' Aid Society, gave an entertainment at the church the evening after the Sabbath, March 17. The program presented was as follows:

Paper, "History of Missionary Work.

Song, "Little Givers," Leora Price and Linda Buten.

Recitation, "The Penny Ye Meant to G.," Anna West.

Song, "This Letter is for my Papa," Helen and Howard Cotterill.

Solo, "Nearer my God to Thee," Mrs. C. A. Emerson.

Solo, "Just Sing that Song Again," Mrs. O. Cotterill.

Paper, "The China Mission."

Mrs. A. S. Maxson.

The papers were interesting and instructive and the music entertaining. It is hoped that the efforts of the evening have awakened at least a little more interest in the cause of missions.

The class for the study of the Sabbath Question still meets every week, under the direction of the pastor, and is attended by others besides the young people. The sacred knowledge of the Sabbath has been brought out by these studies as never before realized by some of the class.

Two or three of our members are expecting to move to Chicago soon. We feel that the loss to our Society will be great, but what is our loss here will be gain to our church in Chicago.

TEXT is more Catarh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be a pest. After a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and pronounced surgical and medical remedies as failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Man tried to cure with constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Family Pills, manufactured by F. J. Sheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only conservative cure on the market. It is taken internally, in doses from 10 drops to four grains, as a tonic. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred and fifty cases in this form. Address: GRENERY & CO., Toledo, O., Hall's Family Pills are the best.

LITTLE JEN.

"When little Jen was first brought here," said the head nurse of St. Mary's Hospital, "it was in a carriage with liveried servants. His father was a mil man in Pennsylvania, and Jen was an only child.

"When the boy's knee became affected the physicians advised his father to bring him here to be treated, on account of the skilled nursing and appliances. He had the largest room in the private ward.

"His parents brought the boy fruit, flowers or books every day.

"'Please take them to that cripple in the next room, and to the children in the free wards, with my love—little Jen Bruce's love,' he would say, raising himself in bed with flushed cheeks and shining eyes.

"In two months he recovered and went away. But two years afterward Mrs. Bruce brought him back. She was dressed in black and asked for a cheap room. Mr. Bruce, I heard, was dead and had left his widow in moderate circumstances.

"Jen's knee was worse than ever. But what a cheery, happy fellow he was!

"He soon learned the story of all the patients in the neighboring rooms, as he had done before, and, when his mother brought him a bunch of pinka or a basket of apples would eagerly divide them and send them out with his own hands.

"'Maybe they will make some one feel happier just for a minute,' he would say, with his rare smile.

"Then I lost sight of Jen for three or four years. Last winter he applied for admission to the free ward. His mother was dead. The disease had appeared in the other leg some months before. Jen had been supporting himself by typewriting, but was now no longer able to work.

"He met me as if I had been his old, dear friend—as indeed I was—and then hobbled around the wards to see if he knew any of the patients, stopping to laugh and joke and say some kind word at each bed.

"The doctors amputated his other leg that day. It was the only chance for his life. But in a week they knew that it had failed.

"'Make the boy comfortable,' the surgeon said to me; 'it is all that can be done for him now.'

"Jen knew the truth from the first. But he never lost courage. This was his bed—pointing to the middle one of a long row of white in the great ward. He learned to know all the men and women the keenest interest in each case.

"When Johnny Boyle died Jen took out the few dollars remaining in his pocket and gave them to me. 'They're for his children,' he whispered. 'They have nothing.' And when old Peter was discharged cured he came to Jen's bed to say good-bye as he bade his brother. Jen wrung his hand and said: 'Take my overcoat, Peter, yours is gone, and—'I'll never need mine again.' He waved his hand, and even cheered feebly as Peter went away.

"He had nothing left to give now—I think that cut him sharply. But one day he began to sing. He had a remarkable voice, clear and tender; it would force the tears to your eyes. Every head in the ward was turned to listen. They were surprised Jen. 'I can sing for them occasionally,' he said, 'if the doctors will allow it.'

"So whenever it was possible Jen's sweet voice would be heard, sometimes in humorous song, sometimes in a hymn. I used to think he was standing at heaven's gate when he sang those hymns. But one morning his voice was gone, and before night every one in the ward knew that he was dying. The patients of him whom he had loved. 'I can sing for them occasionally,' he said, 'if the doctors will allow it.'

"When Jen had his appointment Jen's/steam heated and boiling.

"'Give them,' he whispered, then stopped, remembering, poor child, that he had nothing to give. Then he said suddenly, aloud, his eyes brightening, 'Give them my love—Jen Bruce's love.'—The Household.

OUR IOWA LETTER.

Iowa and Florida were admitted into the Union by one act, March 3, 1845; Iowa was numbered the thirty-sixth, and Florida the twenty-ninth. These states should call themselves twin sisters, though their climates differ widely, and their shape is very unlike. Iowa has 55,045 square miles, equal to 30,238 Connecticut; New York and New Jersey. The great seal is written, "Our liberties we prize, and our rights we will maintain." The people thought they had the right to enact and maintain a prohibition law; the rum-sellers thought they had a right to sell alcohol, which they distributed in state for the expenses of young manhood. They have thus far the advantage over the people. Iowa has the distinction of having two great laws at once antagonistic to each other: Prohibition and more. Sabbath-breaking is very numerous in Iowa, although a missionary here at present would find them located at over twenty different points, in fourteen counties. The Seventh-day Adventists, of whom we will sometimes write, are much more numerous. Our Disciple friends, commonly called "Campbellites," claim over 5,600 in the state. Their state paper is the Christian Index, published at Des Moines, and the chief editor is pastor of their church in Des Moines, with whom he has a number of pleasant relations. Last year they raised $153,000 in this country for missions, and have started to raise $200,000 this year. They have 239 missionaries in foreign lands, 25 more than a year ago. In Iowa they employ five "Revivalists." A Disciple recently said he once attended a Methodist Camp-meeting, and on Sunday the preacher called for a liberal collection, saying, "for we have the work of the devil and the task of the Campbellites to contend against." Probably the Disciples were too much for them on the question of baptism.

A little newspaper war has been going on in Des Moines between the Union Evangelist, Manhall, and Rabbi S. H. Soussan. Mr. Manhall is quoted as saying that "Jacob was a rascal of the first water, a rascally Jew, that's what he was. Now a rascally Jew is no worse than a rascally American, 'youth a needle bit schmarter,' is all. Well, Jacob stole everything that was movable, and married everything that was unmarried. He makes the evangelist if his language is worthy of an evangelist. Is it becoming a refined Christian gentleman to stop for mockery and clown-like pranks. "The truth is," says Rabbi Soussan, "that in the person of Jacob it cannot be denied he was no rascally Jew. The truth is he did not steal everything movable. He only took what he belonged to him according to the laws and usages which were the 'ethical code' of those primitive days. You, the reverential reader of the Bible, know too well that the Prophet [Hosea] has rebuked Jacob for his short comings, but he never called him a rascally Jew, and never indulged in speaking with piercing words which he did when speaking of Israel: "Jacob—my servant, and Israel—mine elect. Do you think the prophet lied?"

The Rabbi thinks that fanning fanaticism, nursing prejudice, calling names and sowing hatred is an ill-advised method of evangelism. To the, the evangelist thinks it is the work of the Rabbi insolent and impertinent, and demands an apology! Unprejudiced readers will see more Christianity in the Rabbi's language and spirit than in the modern evangelist who rages against the old harpies and the new, the rabbi. Defending the evangelist, the Christian Index says, "This is a lesson to us to preach fearlessly the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation to every one—Jew and Gentile who believes." Perhaps the son of Abraham will be converted (?) by that kind of a gospel.

Traveling about the state and not interfering with his pastoral work, the writer has put up to this date assisted twenty-eight orphans in finding homes, temporary or permanent. Over 3,000 homeless ones have been placed in Iowa by the New York Children's Aid Society, alone, since its organization. Other societies also operate in the state. At present the writer has met the children than he can supply. God bless the people whose contributions make possible this work. Many precious youth are thus saved from poverty and crime.

One subject of legislation attracting great attention in our state, just now, is the care of insane persons. The present number of insane in Iowa is about 4,700. That means that one person in 400 is insane. These are distributed in state hospitals (2,759), county poor-houses (1,147) and in private asylums. Over 3,000 hospital patients have been placed in Iowa by the New York Children's Aid Society, alone, since its organization. Other societies also operate in the state. At present the writer has met the children than he can supply. God bless the people whose contributions make possible this work. Many precious youth are thus saved from poverty and crime.

The state has three fine hospitals, at Mount Pleasant, Independence and Carroll, and a new one is being built at Cherokee, which will cost $900,000. The state spends annually, about $600,000 for the care of its insane. This will greatly increase as insanity increases. Iowa's liquor bill would pay all this and leave fortunes for other good purposes. The state has enforced the 18th Amendment, and the burden of insane and the state would need not more than one hospital. But we must have the revenue! and then pay $20 to take care of each $1 of it.

The United Brethren are now holding their State Conference. It is expected that they will show an increase this year. From the previous minutes we notice reports of 44 churches in the state, with a membership of 6,109. Seventeen churches reported an increase of 101, and 56 churches reported a decrease of 296. Total decrease, 12. The largest church had 288 members, and the smallest 36. The largest salary paid to a pastor was $1,200 by a church of 181 members. The average salary is $506. It is interesting to notice that with a membership of 6,109, only 570 copies of their denominational organ, The Telescope, were taken. One church of 79 members reported only 2 copies taken, another of 55 only 2. Two churches reported 40 copies taken by each; one with 288 members, the other 262. These were the largest number taken by any one church. This shows that Seventh-day Baptists are not the only people asleep on the question of supporting a denominational organ. Misyia loves company. This Conference raised $1,953.75 for missions. Of this, the Woman’s Society raised $485. Each church is assessed $1.00 for its missionary support. This was collected by Conference for Presiding Elder’s salary, the Bishop’s salary, Church School’s Preacher’s Aid, Sunday-school General Fund, United Brethren Seminary, Educational Beneficiaries, and College Endowment. How would this plan work among Seventh-day Baptists? Candidates for the ministry, before admission, passage examination before four committees. One, the first year in a course of readings, one each the second and third years, and finally before the Committee on “Elder’s Orders.” This committee is located in Toledo, Iowa; and the Conference is pleading for more students and the cancellation of its indebtedness.

We will close this first letter from Iowa by stating the view of the United Brethren Conference on the Sabbath. “The principle underlyng the Fourth Commandment, ‘Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy,’ has the same binding force to-day as when it was first written by the finger of God on a table of stone. It passed away and it will never pass away. This principle is seen not so much in the letter as in the spirit. It enjoins the sacred day of rest from the grinding toil of our daily work, abstinence from labors of all kinds, freedom from work in the home church, and from everything else that is worldly. It is a principle which, if followed, will yield pure and ennobling thoughts and sincere and invigorating worship. The obligation to observe this day according to its spirit is founded, as Dean Stanley says, not on the law of Moses, but on the law of God in nature, and the obligation of rest and of worship will remain as long as human nature remains what it is, as long as things which are temporal and passing away are unknown. Therefore, as members of this Conference and as representatives of the church of Christ, we will seek to promote everywhere a consistent observance of God’s holy day. It is not a question of mere observance. Perhaps Secretary Lewis will tell us what they mean by ‘the law of Moses, and the law of God in nature’ on which the Sabbath is or is not based. We must remember that our minds and experience cannot calculate the greatness of divine designs, nor even understand the larger ideas of men instructed men.”—Spurgeon.

Our Reading Room.

“In every place where opportunity occurs to us be working for what is good, towards all, especially towards the family of the faith. But to do good to men and to communicate, forget not.”—13: 16.

NILE, N. Y.—Rev. I. L. Cottrell, of the Sabbath School Board, conducted a very profitable Sabbath School Institute at Nile, March 13 and 14. The program, as printed in the Recorder for March 5, was carried out, with the exception of the response to the address of welcome which was given by Elder M. Hone, of Richburg. Bro. Cottrell prepared a complete program, the whole of which paper was assigned heartily into the work and made each session very interesting and instructive. The addresses, papers and discussions were worthy of a larger gathering than we had, but we trust that each of the schools represented at the Institute will be benefited by the many helpful suggestions and plans given for Sabbath-school work. No one could listen to these talks on Bible study sitting a literary man and a thorough student of the Bible, and the plans for teaching the lessons and increasing interest in Sabbath-school work could not but result in good to all. We would be glad to have the Institute every year.

Since the Institute closed, Bro. Cottrell has been with us most of the time, preaching every evening and making calls during the day. God is blessing his good preaching and his consecrated service, and our spiritual life is being quickened and the hearts of the unseen touched. The meetings are steadily growing in interest, and we hope for much good to come from them. The Sabbath Recorder is a regular and welcome visitor in many of our homes. Those who do not take it are denying themselves a great religious help, which they and their children cannot afford to lose. With each succeeding number of the paper we are made more deeply conscious of the great work God has entrusted to us. Are we not signs of men and women in our denomination who, if they do not feel called to teach or preach the gospel, are willing to be led by the Holy Spirit to support one or more missionaries in this or other lands, or if they feel called to be a faithful Christian business man, a supporter in the home church, and working through a substitute in Africa or any other of the needy fields? May God help us all to be faithful workers in his harvest-field.

March 22, 1900.

FROM a private letter to Dr. Main, the Recorder is permitted to glean the fact that the work of Mrs. G. H. F. Randolph, at Fouke, Ark., in the Home Department Work of the Sabbath-school, is progressing finely. She reports sixteen members, and expects to have others at the beginning of the second quarter. She speaks also of the enjoyment which scattered Sabbath-keepers in that section find in reading the Recorder. Mr. Randolph is at present living in the church at Eagle Lake, and Sabbath-keepers at other points. To us in the farther North, the closing sentence of the letter is suggestive of things yet to come, wherein Mrs. Randolph remarks: “May our hope be in the home, and the boys and I are gardening.”

In Memoriam.

LENA TOMLINSON.

The writer feels a special interest in the subject of this sketch because of his intimate friendship with her gifted father, the Rev. Geo. E. Tomlinson, who entered into heavenly rest in 1876. In early young manhood he was a flowing teacher, and wise counsellor; in later life a brother minister and warm friend, and closely associated with some of the most sacred experiences of my life. He was scholarly, eloquent, rich in human sympathies, and a patron of recognized and marked ability. And, next to my honored College President, no man had more influence over my course of thought and action, in those earlier years, than he.

It was his privilege to baptize, with many others, his daughter, Lena, when thirteen years of age, at Westerly, R. I. Her church membership was successively in the Seventh-day Baptist church at Westerly, at Adams Centre, N. Y., and at Plainfield, where she was a valued Christian worker. She was a pupil in the Westerly public school, and a graduate of the Collegiate Institute at Adams, N. Y.; and afterwards a teacher at Holyoke, Mass., Wallingford, Conn., Westerly, R. I.; and Plainfield, N. J., with sweet and sober character, she is said to have been intelligent, earnest and faithful; and her last principal speaks of the warm and growing attachment between her and her pupils. Her most important, and a successful literary venture, was “The Triangle,” a thoroughly-interesting and wholesome book for girls, and for every other reader, too. The publishers wanted another book from her pen; and it was her praise-worthy, though disappointed, ambition to do further work in this line, for which she certainly had good and promising gifts. But, in the better life beyond, hopes do not wither and expectations are not blasted. Strength of will, perseverance, the intention to see and show the bright side of things, were prominent characteristics; and she taught her classes, and rendered other ministries in church and society, under circumstances of bodily pain, and endured sufferings and suffering with wonderful bravery. Prayers for her recovery or comfort, are of the kind that is answered. Her sickness was marked by strong hope, and most sublime patience and trust,” and one said he had formed a new conception of the power of the Christian religion, because of this.

The funeral services were conducted March 6, 1900, by the pastor, and her former pastor, Dr. A. H. Lewis, with singing and costly floral offerings; and the remains were taken to River Bend Cemetery, Westerly, R. I., where, years ago, we placed the body of her father.

No sin, no grief, no pain, Statesmen, statesmen, Statemen, statesmen.

I may rest my feet, and my doubts all slain, My hour of triumph is come.

There why do you fear you run down, Why your hearts so sorely riven, For never green in a sorrowed crown, And another soul in heaven?”—Parton Main.

PRAYER FOR WISDOM.
BY ANNA C. MENGEBEREN.

Teach me, Lord, To do thy will And thy commands obey.
Then, when I have filled me with love each day, Give me a kind, forgiving heart; Lord, teach me how to pray. And do that blessed will, dear Lord, And holy be, each day.

To keep me from sin's snares, Help, strength and grace bestow;
May light shine upon me from above, And set my heart aglow.

Fill me with wisely zeal and power To fear thy sacred name.
That I may, from this very hour, This present day begin;
That I may always do thine will, Whatever may betide.
Teach me to work, teach me to pray, And teach me how to love,
That I may gladly, day by day, A strict account then give.

CONFERENCE OF CHRISTIAN SABBATH-KEEPERS.
LONDON, ENGLAND.
BY REV. W. T. W. EXCLAMATION.

The readers of the Sabbath will, doubtless, be glad to know of the great amount of apathy which prevails with us. In the London, there are some who are eager to work for the Lord when he has only thought well to entrust them with that which is his. But the Conference con-

The Editor of the Recorder was asked at the late General Conference, "Is this great interest simply an illusion of feeling?" He answered, "No, it is a growth in spiritual interest and spiritual advancement. In it we get inspiration for denominational life and mission work. Through it we are bound together in Christian fellowship. We are not just thinking of the individual. The pastors share largely in anxious desire for the conversion of sinners. No wonder that the brethren in Chicago were aroused as they looked on the fields already white for the harvest.

The Recorder holds its meetings at a coffee tavern at Finchley, a northern suburb of London, and for want of a distinctive name I call it the Finchley Church. The principal church of the Seventh-day Adventists is known as the Duncombe Road church.

On several occasions I have endeavored to get the Seventh-day Adventists to join with the Mill Yard church in holding a joint assembly or conference on the Sabbath question, but with no success. Again I summed the attack, and this time laid my plan before the leader of the Finchley church. He took up the idea warmly; so then I adjusted the Seventh-day Adventists, but could only form a joint action without success. However, Mr. S. M. Brown, of the Finchley church, urged that we should not wait for the Adventists, but go ahead, and hope that they may join in when they see that we are going to carry it out in any case. We, there-

REV. W. TUNNER.

Rev. Joshua Clarke died in Verona, Oneida Co., N. Y., Feb. 9, 1895. He was born Nov. 22, 1818. The town of Upson, Y. was the birthplace of this great child of Ethan, and Maria Spencer Clarke, and spent his boyhood there and in Linclena, N. Y. When sixteen years old, he united on bapism with the Seventh-day Baptist church at Adams Centre, N. Y., and a year later with theWatson Seventh-day Baptist church, which licensed him to preach when he was only eighteen years of age. He was married Sept. 11, 1842, to Miss Esther Lanphere, of Plainfield, N. Y., who, for nearly fifty years, shared with him the labors of the gospel ministry. In the spring following his marriage he began his studies in DeRuyter Institute, where he remained two years, preaching, as opportunity offered, in Otsego or Cayser Hill and elsewhere. He was licensed for ministry January 14, 1844 by the church at Otsecilic. From this time until his death he served as pastor in our churches as follows: Linclena, three years; Preston, three years; Seneca Brookfield, eleven years; East Hoo-kinton, six years; Albion, six years; DeRuyter, sixteen years; Rockville, a few months; Albion again a few months; Andover and Wellsville, about six years; and First and Second, Verona, nearly a year. He was a member of the Board of Managers of the Mis-

DEBUTER, N. Y., March 13, 1899.

We intend this to be an Annual Conference, and a business meeting will be held at 6 P. M., to form some kind of constitution and appoint a committee to make the necessary arrangements for the Second Conference in 1901.

The Committee has decided that the Conference shall be an annual meeting of Christian Sabbath-keepers of all denominations who observe the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment, commonly called Saturday. The objects of the conference shall be to spread the knowledge of the Sabbath of the Lord (Exodus 20: 10), and to devise the best means to that end. The Christian Sabbath-keepers present at the Conference shall be deemed "members." All others are "visitors."

Popular Science.

As the finer qualities of lumber for building purposes are growing scarce in the Northern and Western States, and in consequence of the great amount of younger trees being ground into pulp for paper, it is evident that the demand will increase and the supply will decrease, so far as we can see, for all future time. Already large quantities of the Southern pine are being obtained and used in the Middle and Eastern States, for flooring, wainscoting and other purposes, and for finishing wood; but, in consequence of the pitch it contains, it is not suitable for outside work, where the heat from the sun can reach it, or the necessity exists for capping paint.

Our attention has been called to the large abundance of red cypress growing in the low lands in the Southern States.

We are assured that the red cypress is well adapted to house-building, for both inside and outside finishings. It is as a wood, for natural beauty and appearance, is especially suitable, and is sought for and used by manufacturers for cisterns, tanks, tubs and similar articles.

We have known, for a long time, that carpenters have used the cypress for enclosing their box and general work, and that cypress is a durable wood, and the holding paint much better than white pine, since it is free from pitch or gum, and for this reason it is superior to pine for outside covering for buildings. It is more durable than any other wood in use, and, therefore, more valuable for columns, porch-floors, step-planks, eave-gutters, etc., etc.

Cypress has already found its way to the North and East in the manufactured articles of shingles, but for general use has not as yet been adopted. We know no why cypress lumber might not become of general use to a large extent, and thus supply the wants of the people.

A TEST OF OPPORTUNITY

The opportunities of life are not to be measured simply by the facilities they offer for making money or attaining knowledge or reaching position. They are also to be estimated by the avenues they open for self-expression. Each of us has his own undertakings, ideas and personal force. We do not realize the best ideal of life unless there is opportunity for us to exert these powers and to create our impression upon the world, and do our own work in the world through them. We know a college professor who made a fortune in five years. He deliberately turned his back on his opportunity of adding largely to it, and gave up his business career to take a college position on a small salary. The reason was that he did not believe that his money-making faculty was his highest endowment. He felt that he had a capacity for investigation and for teaching that should have expression. Already his name is quoted as one of the principal authorities in his department. That is an extreme case, but it illustrates the truth that the opportunity that gives you a chance for doing the particular work that you are best fitted to do, and to exert your personal force upon the world through it, may be a choice opening than that one that seems to carry with it the prizes of money and position that men so greatly prize. A man is never happier or more useful than when he is fulfilling his distinctive mission through the exercise of his distinctive powers.

"There," said the tired author, with a sigh, "you'll have to economize. We can't expect any returns from my last book now." "Why," exclaimed his wife, "what has happened?" "The critics have all pronounced it a good, clean, wholesome story, and, of course, after that, nobody will buy it."
Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

The Royal is made from the most highly refined and wholesome ingredients, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is cheaper at its price than any similar article.

Samples of mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous and forbidden, and in many cities their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a corrosive poison, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

DEATHS.

WARRER.—At New Market, N. J., March 23, 1900, of complication of diseases, Edison Warner, aged nearly 79 years. He was born at Bernadonau, Mass., April 18, 1821. In 1837 he moved with his parents to Northern Pennsylvania. He was a regent of Shingle House for 55 years. He was married three times, the last wife, Mrs. Catherine Rogers Warner, surviving him. He was the father of nine children. He was a strong, industrious and kind-hearted man, and during many years of his residence near Shingle House was familiarly known as "Uncle Ed." Many a minister had been sheltered and fed at his hospitable home as they came to work in his neighborhood for the salvation of souls. In 1862 he removed, with his wife, to New Market, N. J., where he has since lived, having been sickly for the last five or six years of his life. In a note prepared by the relatives, to be read at the funeral service, were these words: "He lived a Christian life and had an abiding hope in Jesus." M. S.

McClure's Magazine for April.

In surmise and variety of attraction, it would be hard to surpass McClure's Magazine for April. The account of the interior of China, especially with reference to the rich promises as a market for Americans, written by Mr. W. B. Parsons, Chief Engineer of the American-China Development Company, from observations made on his own journeys, and illustrated very fully from photographs taken by him; the account of Professor Huxley's life in London between his twenty-sixth and thirtieth year, when he was having a terrific struggle to maintain himself by purely scientific work, with its self-reveling passages from his unpublished correspondence and its new portrait of him; the account of the Russian ship "Emmack," the marvelous new ice-breaker that promises of being able to cut a passage for herself to the Pole,—these are all in thesurvivors' ways articles of the strongest interest and the highest value. And just as much may be said for Mr. Walter Welman's "An Arctic Day and Night"—a chapter from his own experience in house-building, house-keeping, and daily work and travel, including some thrilling near-encounters, on near the North Pole. The S. B. McClure Co., 141-151 E. 20th Street, New York City.

As a story Mr. Miles' book has no great merit, and must upon the whole be made up upon the evidence of a most arbitrary point of view. Its most objectionable feature, however, is in representing the church as a whole as being essentially as bad as certain specific cases which are noticed. That Protestant churches lack in spirituality is true; and that not a few practices by way of amusement and otherwise obtain which are reprehensible and wholly to be condemned is also true; but any wholesale representation of these churches as it appears is Mr. Miles' book is unjust. Nevertheless, the account of some value in spite of its crudities, in awakening thought concerning the evils of which he speaks. Counterirritants have a remedial value.

ARE OUR MINISTERS IDIOTS?

Ian Macdonald is going to answer the question, "Is the Minister an Idiot?" in the May Ladies' Home Journal. This is a sort of companion article to "Should the Old Clergyman be Shot?" which he wrote some time ago, and in which he advocated a more humane disposition of aged clergymen. It is more than likely that he will be able to find some idiots in the pulpit, but it may be set down with certainty that he will be able to establish as a fact that ministers as a class are among the busiest of professional men.
