The sports illustrated swimsuit issue is arguably the most iconic magazine franchise cover of all time - not to mention the sexiest! The first issue of SI Swimsuit was in 1964 - that's right, more than 50 years ago - and featured German-born model Babette March in a white headband top and boyshort stockings. Landing the coverage of the issue has been known to launch the careers of the models or send them to the next stratosphere. Tyra Banks, Christie Brinkley, Paulina Porizkova (who was only 18 for her first cover), Elle MacPherson, Kathy Ireland, Heidi Klum, Rebecca Romijn, Bar Refaeli, Irina Shayk, Kate Upton, Chrissy Teigen and Ashley Graham all showed off their amazing bodies with cut abs, lean legs and toned arms on the cover. Even singer Beyoncé appeared in a 2007 sand shoot. And it can be a positive honor for the body to lay bare all on a tropical beach set. As Upton said on his return to cover in 2017, six years after his debut, I was very excited... to be back in the question. Especially when this year's theme is about every woman of all ages and all body types being accepted. It was inspiring to be asked to be part of that question. The star continued: It's the campaigns I want to do and the career I want to have - to inspire women to love each other. It's a balance between working hard and eating healthily, but also enjoying life and having days and for the emphasis of not being on the perfect ideal body. Looking through decades of blankets, it's also fun to see how swimming fashion has changed. Among the styles Sports Illustrated photographed: string bikinis, one-piece cut-out suits, string bikinis, sarongs, sweaters (yes, check out Cheryl Tiegs in 1970!), sarongs, high legs, plunging tops, topless looks, tankinis, floppy beach hats, monokinis, crop top t-shirts, crocheted look, necklaces like tops, parkas, almost bottomless photos and even just paintless!
