Introduction

One of the challenges of learning to read and write Chinese is knowing how to look up Chinese characters.

When I first arrived in Taiwan I started copying restaurant menu's so that I could learn the characters and their meanings. I had to use a paper dictionary to look up characters.

I either used the radical index or the stroke count index to find the desired characters because I didn't know their pronunciation.

Later on I began copying text from childrens books to help me learn Chinese. With childrens books the advantage was that each character was accompanied by it's zhuyin phonetic meaning that I could also look up the character by its pronunciation.

When I got a computer, I decided to create my own database of characters so that I wouldn't have to keep looking the same characters up. My goal was a tool that allowed me to enter characters (say that I was copying from a book or menu or other resource) and would automatically show me characters that I had already looked up but that would also help me figure out the meanings of character groups based on context.

As I began learning to use Cangjie codes to type Chinese characters, my personal Chinese dictionary became a tool for looking up Cangjie codes. I would type a word using pinyin and then use the dictionary to find the Cangjie code. I'd then practice typing the character using Cangjie to help me remember the code.

The advantages of this system are that it comes built into the Mac operating system software. Also, you don't have to know the sound of the character in order to type it. And it allows you in a lot of cases to touch type Chinese. The exceptions are cases where the same Cangjie code can be used to type more than one Chinese character.

As my dictionary became more comprehensive I tried to figure out ways to turn it into a useful tool for others. So that it was more useful for myself I organized characters by their Cangjie codes. I eventually figured out that organizing characters by their cangjie codes was actually also a good way to look up chinese characters. You don't have to know the characters radical or it's stroke count. You simply need to be able to figure out a characters' initial element. And from there I've grouped characters by their sub elements so that characters are easy (or relatively easy) to find.

As an example, here is one of the sub-groupings for the H element (H is used to type the Bamboo element 竹 or any downward/leftward stroke).

竹
A 笆
節簡
B 筋籐箏筒算篡纂
D 箱籟笨策

E 箔簿
 G 筠等籌
 H 篇篩笑笙
 I 箋箴簾
 J 篋管
 L 簣箏簫笛簍
 M 竺竽竿筑築
 N 第簷笈筵
 O 答笙簫簫符筏筱篠簪
 P 篋筍
 Q 篋箏箏
 S 篋簾簾
 T 箭簣簣
 V 篆
 W 篋簾簾
 Y 簣簾簾簾簾簾

The additional letters show the code for the top-most or left most element below the bamboo element.

The other side benefit of this organization is that it can make it easy to figure out how to type using cangjie codes.

While this dictionary is far from a complete resource, it can be a useful supplement to other dictionaries. Each entry includes the English definition, plus “words” made up of two or more characters. Plus each entry includes the Chinese characters Cangjie Code in letters and symbols, plus the characters radical and stroke count.

It also comes with a phonetic index. The phonetic index includes Zhuyin, Yale and Gwoyeuh Romatzyh as an aid to learning character pronunciation.

- The Gwoyeuh Romatzyh is a toneless writing system that uses spelling to help English speakers pronounce Chinese tones more authentically.
- The Yale system uses tones but the spelling makes it easier to sound authentic than does pinyin spelling.

Cangjie Decomposition

The trick to learning to use this dictionary is learning some basic cangjie decomposition.

Because I’ve sorted the characters based on their sub elements as well as initial elements, it can be pretty easy to see which cangjie codes correspond to what particular elements of a character, but to make it easier to see I’ve created the following simple lessons. Note that these focus on the initial elements of a character, which are of main importance if you want to look up a character.

Making Character Recall Easier

Because I also like to write Chinese characters by hand, I find that typing with this method is actually helpful in helping me to remember characters. I have to remember, or at least be familiar with the shape of the character in order to type it. And that makes it easier to remember how to write it by hand also.

A bonus is that this input method is included in the Mac operating system. And that's one of the reasons that I chose to learn it.

But even if you aren't interested in learning to type Chinese Characters, the Cangjie method offers a simple way of looking up characters and all you have to do is learn the 24 basic character elements and their variations.

A Character Elements (日)

The Sun character component 日 corresponds to the letter a.

Any character with this character component in the top, left or top left part of a character can be found in the A section of the cangjie index.

It is also the first code element in more complex elements like: 巴 (au), 艮 (av), 門 (an).

A: 日 陽 盟 匙 日 巴 眉
即 門

B Character Elements (月)

The Moon character element 月 corresponds to the letter b.

Note the variations 冂 冃 冄 冂 冃 冄 and the following examples:

骨 (bbb), 丹 (by), 凸 (bss), 目 (bu), 貝 (buc), 見 (buhu), 且 (bm).

B: 月 炙 妥 豺 冥 骨 丹 罔 凸
目 瞿 貝 見 且

C Character Elements (金)

The Metal character element 金 corresponds to the letter c.

It can also be used to represent two “outward” or “inward” slashes 丿.

Note that this element can be confused with variations of the 人 character element (letter o).

It can also be confused with variations of the 火 character element. However, the f element represents three strokes 丿 at the top of a character or character element, not two 丿.

Examples: 兮 (cmvs), 谷 (cor), 丫 (cl)

C: 金兮谷 丫

D Character Elements (木)

The Wood character element 木 corresponds to the letter d. It is also used to represent some “cross-shaped” elements with hooks at the end of the horizontal stroke or hooks at the bottom of the vertical stroke.

i.e. 才 (dh), 韋 (dmrq), 皮 (dhe)···note that this code, dhe, also represents the character 板.

D: 木桿想焚鬱 東刺才
韋 皮

E Character Elements (水)

The Water character element 水 corresponds to the letter e. As a radical it is usually written as three dots to the left of the character i.e. 汨 (ea), 鯨 (ehnwf).

It is also used to represent this element: 叉 (ei).

E: 水汨鯨 叉

F Character Elements (火)

The Fire character element 火 corresponds to the letter F. As a radical it is usually written as four dots 丶 at the bottom of a character element. It is also used to represent three dots at the top of an element (丿, 丿).

e.g. 少 (fh), 半 (fq), 光 (fmu), 肖 (fb), 敝 or 敞 (fbok), 脊 fbc, 眷 (fqbu) 米 (fd), 鄰 (fqnl).

Note that for left most (or top most) elements only the first and last elements are used in the characters overall code. So for the left part of 鄰 the full code would be fdniq, but since it is the left part of a character only the first and last elements are used, namely f and q.

F: 火 焊 榮 榮 少 半 光 肖 賞 敞
脊 眷 米 鄰

G Character Elements (土)

The character element for Ground 土 corresponds to the letter g. As part of other characters, the character for soldier or scholar 士 is also represent by the letter g. 去 (gi), 勢 (giks), 赤 (glnc), 幸 (gtj), 毒 (gwj), 敖 (gsok), 壺 or 甗 (gblm), 冉 (gb)

G: 土 去 圭 勢 垚 赤 走 幸
毒 敖 吉 彭 烹 馨 賣 款 壺 穀

H Character Elements (竹)

The character element for Bamboo 竹 corresponds to the letter H.

In general the bamboo element represents any downwards and leftwards stroke (丿 or ㇏).

e.g. 得 (hoami), 八 (ho), 戶 or 𠂇 or 𠂇 (hs), 印 (hvsl) 留 (hhw).

Note that for 𠂇, the code “os” can also be used.

H: 竹 得 八 𠂇 冬
反 斤 戶 爪 盾 氏
印 留 印 段 臼 鼠 覺 朵 几 風
向 舟 囟 烏 歸 白 島 自 鼻
身 血 卑 千 升 毛 拜
垂 重 熏 天 禾 香 愁 秉 乎 壬
禹 告 先 失 朱 牛 生

I Character Elements (戈)

The character element for Spear 戈 and/or Dot 丶 (the hole created by a spear) or 广 is represented by the letter i.

Note the variations: 戈 (i), 廁 (ibcn), 良 (iav), 禍 (ifbbr), 之 (ino), 凋 (imbgr), 州 (ilil), 能 (ibpp).

I: 戈 戊 弋 犬 尢 廁 鹿 麻 良
禍 之 凋 次 州 能
