The Millionaire-Minting IPO

How to Retire Rich With the World's Most Anticipated IPO

A company that hopes to be the “Amazon for transportation” has huge IPO plans for 2019.¹

But just how big is this IPO?

Experts suggest that this IPO could be as massive as $100 billion.²

That's bigger than Visa...

Bigger than General Motors...

It's even bigger than Facebook!³

In May, Uber CEO Dara Khosrowshahi told CNBC that a strong balance sheet, impressive profile and revenue growth are just a few stellar factors that have convinced the famed rideshare company to go public.⁴

When Facebook went public in 2012, it was the biggest tech IPO in United States history. More importantly, it ultimately helped those who invested early rake in huge profits. According to Investopedia, people who invested in Facebook in 2012 are now enjoying a 301.33% return on investment.⁵

Maybe you missed out on Facebook back then. But I want to make sure you don't miss out on America's most anticipated IPO ever.

And there is a way you can grab your share... before Uber goes public.

Just a tiny stake today can give you a real shot at a retirement fortune as this company prepares to go public.

How can I say that with such certainty?

Because behind the rideshare IPO hysteria lies a company that's making huge buys. In fact, they currently own a 20% stake in Uber and are the company's largest shareholder.

A Ridesharing Empire

SoftBank Group (OTCBB: SFTBY) is a Japanese technology corporation that should not be overlooked. The tech colossus has a massive portfolio of companies — Uber is only the tip of the iceberg.

SoftBank also owns a 19.6% stake in Cruise Automation as part of a partnership with GM. Forbes reports that the company is also considering investing in WeWork, with a value as high as $40 billion. SoftBank has invested big bucks in dynamite companies but has also paid attention to small startups. It's not a company that misses out on opportunity, and it's proven that it knows it when it sees it.⁶

Not only does SoftBank own a huge chunk of Uber, but it also has stake in other Uber competitor companies around the world, capitalizing on the growing rideshare trend.⁷

By investing in SoftBank, you are in turn getting a stake in Uber before its IPO.

It's a genius move that could get you ahead of the curve and on the fast track to Uber profits.

Recommendation: Buy SoftBank Group Corp. (OTCBB: SFTBY) up to $44.
