(iStock) KADImages According to a tweet sent by the Friends of CAIC Twitter page, a non-profit organization supporting the Colorado Avalanche Information Center, the avalanche risk in Colorado has reached an extreme level in four of the 10 backcountment areas. This is the first time this has happened since the adoption of the 10-zone forecast format. Their advice for the hinterland is simply not to enter the hinterland at all. They even use the hashtag #dontgo to end their tweeted risk announcement, as seen below. This is the first time that four backcountment areas have gone to EXTREME (5 of 5) Avalanche Danger since the beginning of the 10-zone forecast format. It is not recommended to travel in front, near or below the avalanche terrain. Keep it simple and just avoid the hinterland. #Dontgo #COavysafety pic.twitter.com/wpietr3Q2J — Friends of the CAIC (@friendsofCAIC) March 7, 2019 The dangers of the avalanche are extremely high in Colorado at this time, with concerns related to avalanches that close a resort, several highways and prompting a travel warning. The official warning lasts until 8 a.m. tomorrow morning. In the meantime, it is best to avoid areas at risk if possible. Check out the current avalanche risks directly on the CAIC website.
