Staff of Wind fires wind explosions when fired, (similar to Thundergun), and will instantly kill zombies at point gaps until round 23 and knock any zombies further away. However, the range is not as far as Thundergun, so you will have to be a little closer to destroying zombies with it. After being upgraded to Boreas' Fury, it works the same as the previous version, however its wind has a wider range and range of effects. Players can also hold down the firing button to charge it up, at a cost of more ammunition per shot. When charged and released, it shoots an initial wind, then expands rapidly to form a tornado, attracting any zombies quite close to it and dragging them into the center, instantly killing them. Furthermore, Boreas' Fury has a melee attack involving clawing with spikes on the employee's head. This attack was a kill blow until round 16. If one inch punch is equipped, its melee attack will override the melee attack of its personnel. After the upgrade, it gets a second-level attachment called Sekhmet's Vigor when activated by pressing left on the D-Pad, which will cause the player to flip the employee and use the bottom end. This can be used to revive a player who is shot down by shooting them directly. Vitality is a fast-moving ball that moves in a straight line. You should count your photos, because it is easy to miss with this weapon. How to get [editing | editing source] To get Wind Staff, players must collect three sections of staff and element crystals, as well as gramophone and correct records to access Crazy Place and the lower levels of the excavation site. Staff parts can be found in giant robot heads, each of the three robots holding one. To access the interior, the player must shoot the foot with bright light under it and be entered by it, sent to the robot's head. Note that only one foot is lit every time a robot passes, and it is randomly selected each time. The yellow profile can be found near generator 5. It may appear on the partly broken wall to the right of Stamin-Up, on boxes near the entrance to the Lightning Tunnel or in the Lightning tunnel on the table at the entrance. The gramophone is always born on the floor inside the site excavation, and records for access to lower levels found outside around the excavation site. The element jewel can be found inside Crazy Place, and to access it, the player needs yellow recordings as well as gramophones. The entrance to the Wind Tunnel is located near Generator 4. Once in Crazy Place, there will be a pout that will open with a yellow glow, with the element jewel arising from the inside. Note that the gem can only be picked up if Crazy Place is accessed from the tunnel in accordance with the element of the gem. Once all the parts have been collected, the staff can be built at the lowest level of the excavation site, in yellow pout. After it is built, it can be picked up by any player, and if the employee is transferred to another weapon later or the player keeps it bleeding (or disconnects), the employee will return to its target. First, the player must solve the puzzle located in Crazy Place, located in its Wind section. Above the portal, there are four rounds of consensus with four symbols spread evenly over them. Players must combine the symbols on the upper rings with the symbols on the pillars that the symbols are pointing to by shooting each round with Staff of Wind to rotate it. The symbol is the basis of four representations of numbers, with the number of lines in the first shape being the value for each strength of four (i.e. if there is only one shape in the icon, the value is simply the number of lines present in the shape. If there are two shapes, the value is the number of lines in the first shape for the fourth time, plus the number of lines in the last shape. If there are three shapes, the number is the number of lines in the first shape for the 16th time, plus the number of lines in the fourth second shape, plus the number of lines in the last shape). The symbols on the pillars represent the total that each row of icons in the rings must add up. Since the exact order never changes (although the initial rings are randomly selected), the image below can be used as a reference. An easy way is to go between the rocks to the right of the portal, and match the icons as provided. Once the rings are placed correctly, the inner rings will rotate up, and an audio signal will play. Add a photo to this collection Once the puzzle in Crazy Place has been solved, there will be another photo in the original field. There are three smoking footballs around the dug-out area, located in Generator 4, next to the return path of the tank as well as near Generator 5. The player must shoot the balls with the staff of the wind to steer the smoke excavation site. Balls along the way of the tank were accessed from the church by returning to the path (or by jumping out of the tank if it returned from the tank station) so that smoke could be properly guided. Once all the balls have been fired and smoke is going towards the digsite, a sound cue will play and a beam of light fired up can be seen coming from the excavation site. Next, the player will have to place floating rings inside the lower floors of the Excavation Site so that the lights on the four rings are yellow. The rings can be rotated by pulling levers located around the lower levels, two on the normal aisle and two on wooden scaffolding. Once all the rings' lights are yellow, their inner yellow ores must be fired with the staff. It will glow yellow, and shoot up in the air. Finally, the player must place the staff inside the yellow pout in Crazy Place, and kill about 20 zombies in Crazy Place to collect their souls into the staff. Once it's done, Samantha can talk to players about the power of the wind being available, and the staff icon on HUD now has a red outline. Boreas' fury can now be taken from that swarm. As with the regular employees of Wind, if the employee is lost by any means, it will be returned to its pout in the excavation site, and it does not have to be upgraded again.
