The growth of Big South football has been exceptional since its inception 17 seasons ago. The formidable years of 2002-05 included great feats -- including the league's first win over the nation's No. 1 team in 2005 -- that set the tone for the future. The Big South's first true breakthrough onto the national landscape occurred in 2006 when league champion Coastal Carolina became the first football member to advance to the postseason when the Chanticleers received an at-large berth in the 16-team NCAA Division I Football Championship.

At that same time, the league progressed closer to cementing its status as a viable football conference as well as the coveted automatic bid to the NCAA postseason. Big South administrators earned appointments to national NCAA committees starting in 2006, membership growth in 2008 featured Presbyterian College (full member), Stony Brook (associate member) and Gardner-Webb's addition as a full member, plus consistent nationally-ranked programs, notable non-conference victories, national award finalists and the league's first-ever NFL Draft picks (2007 and 2008). All the efforts came to fruition in the spring of 2008 when the NCAA announced the expansion of the FCS Playoffs from 16 to 20 teams in 2010, and granted the Big South an automatic bid starting that year -- boosting the conference into a new stratosphere.

Big South Conference football came into existence in the Fall of 2002 after a long and arduous process. Football had always been a long range goal of the conference. In the early 1990s, football seemed on the horizon in the Big South, as Charleston Southern fielded its first team in 1991 and the conference added Liberty, which was already playing on the gridiron, as a new member. However, football never got off the ground in the early part of the decade as other issues came to the forefront, including the Big South's emergence as a basketball conference. The league was awarded its first automatic bid to the NCAA men's basketball championship in 1992 and football was put on the back burner while basketball began to flourish.

The idea was revived in 1997 when Elon joined the Big South. That gave the conference three full-time members with football programs -- half the number needed to be recognized as a conference by the NCAA. Two years later on Nov. 10, 1999, Coastal Carolina announced it would add football by the Fall of 2003. The wheels were set in motion to establish a conference home for the league's football-playing members.

After attempts to form a joint football conference with the ASUN Conference failed, the Big South began recruiting more members to join its fledgling football league. On May 23, 2001, the original dream became a reality when the Big South's Council of Chief Executive Officers voted unanimously to add football as the conference's 18th championship sport.

Shortly after the approval of football, the Big South's recruiting efforts paid off, as the addition of Gardner-Webb as an associate football member was announced on June 20, 2001. There were hopes that a four-team league could begin play later that Fall, but scheduling conflicts could not be worked out and the Fall of 2002 was designated as the kickoff for Big South Football. The Big South continued to look for additional members, with a goal of eventually having seven or eight playing members. On Dec. 10, 2001, one of the oldest programs in the state of Virginia -- Virginia Military Institute, announced it would join the Big South in all sports in 2003 and maintain the conference's football membership at five following Elon's departure.

While the inevitable trickle-down impact of conference realignment has reached the Big South in recent years, the league continues to prosper with the recent additions of Monmouth and start-up program Kennesaw State, plus Campbell's membership beginning this season.

In 2016, the Big South and ASUN created a partnership that guarantees a football "home" within the Big South Conference for ASUN members that play scholarship football, and that collaboration has led to the addition of North Alabama in 2019 -- allowing the Big South to remain poised for future expansion. In November 2017, the Big South added Hampton University as a full member, and the Pirates will be official football members in 2019.

With its seismic growth and consistent multiple playoff-caliber programs, the Big South continues to be a major national competitor in FCS football with an everlasting eye on the ultimate prize -- a National Championship.

BIG SOUTH FCS PLAYOFF HISTORY

The Big South Conference made its first appearance in the FCS Playoffs in 2006 when Coastal Carolina received an at-large bid into the 16-team field. The Big South has received multiple bids four times in the eight years as an AQ conference, has earned two national seeds and associated byes, and has advanced in the postseason eight times in its 13 total appearances. As part of the Big South's 30th Anniversary celebration in 2013-14, the conference announced its first-ever All-Decade Teams to recognize the student-athletes and coaches who excelled in their respective sport since the conference's founding in 1983. A committee of Big South Conference administrators served as the official voting panel to determine the All-Decade Teams, with fan voting comprising 20 percent of the overall total.

Football All-Decade Team candidates were determined based on being at least one of the following: 1) Was a multiple All-Conference honoree; 2) Was named an All-American; 3) Is a member of the Big South Conference Hall of Fame; 4) Student-athletes must be a college graduate or left their respective institution in good academic standing; 5) and won a Conference Championship as a coach and/or was voted Conference Coach of the Year. Candidates that participated in two different decades were placed in a specific decade based on consultation from member institutions. Member institutions also had final determination in regards to inclusion of student-athletes and coaches.

The next Football All-Decade Team will cover 2010-19 and will be announced following the 2019 season.
