From historic Churchill Downs and our unique neighborhoods to our thriving arts and music scene to our internationally renowned cuisine, there’s a lot that makes Louisville, Louisville.

The City of Louisville maintains its dominant share of the region’s population and is Kentucky’s largest city, ranking 28th nationally.

We do things our own way, with our own brand of Southern-ness, which has made us who we are today and why Travel & Leisure named us, “One of the Friendliest Cities in America.”

We’re far from ordinary, but close enough you can get here in no time. And because our city is in the midst of a $1 billion transformation, there’s always something new and different going on here. Which is probably why we were voted one of the “Best Places to Travel” by Travel & Leisure too.

Explore Louisville and see why your every day here will be anything but everyday.
Louisville is a fan-friendly city that is well-known for its hospitality worldwide. Over 17,000 rooms in more than 100 hotels and motels are available for visitors within the Louisville metropolitan area. The Fourth Street Live! entertainment district in downtown Louisville is a prime spot for visitors along with multiple attractions, featuring Louisville Slugger Museum, Kentucky Derby Museum, Muhammad Ali Center, Louisville Science Center, Speed Art Museum and Frazier History Museum.

Sports, including UofL athletics, are an important facet of life in the Louisville area and Louisville embraces big events. Churchill Downs has hosted four Breeders’ Cups and continues its traditional Run For The Roses – the Kentucky Derby – the first Saturday each May, drawing over 160,000. The 1996, 2000 and 2014 PGA Championships were staged at Valhalla Golf Course in eastern Jefferson County, which was also the site of the 2008 Ryder Cup international competition. The Louisville Bats, the triple-A baseball team of the Cincinnati Reds, have drawn over 1 million fans to games in a single season, with new Slugger Field stationed on the downtown riverfront.

Louisville is home to some of the most unique festivals and eclectic events in the country. Here’s just a few of the sights and sounds that make every day different.

75+ bands every year perform at Forecastle, Louisville’s biggest music festival. Founded in 2002, it has grown from a neighborhood event into one of the country’s most anticipated summer festivals. This year’s notable artists include; LCD Soundsystem, Weezer, Odesza, Cage the Elephant, PJ Harvey, Run the Jewels and more.

5 amazing Waterfront Wednesday concerts, on the last Wednesday of April through September, hosted by legendary radio station WFPK. Each concert routinely attracts thousands to the Waterfront to mingle, dance and enjoy the river. And, it’s free.

250 concerts over 5 days that will have you discovering or rediscovering your inner Beatle at the world’s largest Beatles-inspired music festival. This annual event takes place over Memorial Day Weekend.

$400 whether you’re betting on the favorite or the long shot, nothing beats the majesty of the first Saturday in May at Churchill Downs. The Kentucky Derby is racing’s premier event, dating back to 1875. Even if you can’t make it for Derby Day, the two weeks leading up to it keep this town buzzing with parades, food and music festivals and celebrity sightings all around town.

56th season of Kentucky Shakespeare Festival in Central Park. Located steps from U of L, this free festival draws more than 80,000 audience members every year. The season runs this year from June 1 to August 7 and features “Much Ado About Nothing,” “Richard II” and “Julius Caesar.”

22,000 seats make up The KFC YUM! Center. Since it opened its’ doors in 2010, the YUM! Center has hosted artists that include; Taylor Swift, Beyonce, Jimmy Buffett, Cher, Motley Crue, Katy Perry, Luke Bryan, Justin Timberlake, Lionel Richie, Maroon 5 and many, many more. It’s also home to the UofL Men and Women’s basketball teams.
I had the pleasure of visiting Louisville for the first time for the Pitt vs. UofL football game. Not knowing what to expect from a visiting stadium’s fans can always be a strain on the nerves. However, this trip was without a doubt the most enjoyable I have ever experienced. The entire city and the UofL fans were a class act and more than welcoming. The Louisville fans showed us the model of what true fans should be: passionate but respectful. As for me, you are welcome at my tailgate anytime.

—JASON HOMINSKY, PITTSBURGH

Louisville is the perfect place for students to attend college and start their careers. In fact, Glassdoor named us a Top 10 “City for Jobs.” And, we were recently named a “Top Digital City” by eRepublic’s Center for Digital Government, in large part because of companies like Indatus and Code Louisville—a free coding and technology training program offered by KentuckianaWorks. There’s a lot to love about Louisville, with even more on the way.

Fortune 500 Companies call Louisville home—Humana, YUM! Brands, Brown Forman and UPS. We’re also home to Papa John’s corporate headquarters, two Ford assembly plants and General Electric’s Appliance Park.

In the last decade, UofL has hosted more NCAA championships than any other university.

6 rounds in the NCAA Men’s Basketball Championship, mostly recently hosting the 2016 South Regional at the KFC Yum! Center. The eventual National Champions have played in the KFC Yum! Center in each of the arena’s six seasons in existence.

7 years that UofL has hosted NCAA Cross Country events including Regional in 2006, 2007, 2009 and 2010. Following the 2012 meet, the Cardinals will host the National Championships for a second time in November 2017.

6 rounds in the NCAA Women’s Basketball Championship including 1st and 2nd rounds in 2013 and 2016 along with a Regional in 2014.

5 Field Hockey National Championships have been held at Trager Stadium (2002, 2005, 2008, 2011 and 2012).

4 regional rounds of softball have been hosted by UofL in 2009, 2011, 2012 and 2013.

4 rounds of Men’s Tennis have been held at the Bass-Rudd Tennis Center. The 1st and 2nd rounds were both held in 2006 and 2010.

Rounds have been played in Louisville by Men’s Soccer teams hoping to win the College Cup from 2007-2016 (3 1st rounds, 5 2nd rounds, 4 Sweet Sixteens and 3 Elite Eights).

2009 was the year that UofL hosted the Outdoor Track & Field regional at Cardinal Park.

#3 World Ranking for UofL’s choral group: The Cardinal Singers

Belknap Campus
Change is here at the University of Louisville. In the last half-decade, UofL’s change can rightly be called a transformation. Scholarship, standards, buildings, research, campus environment, athletics, advising and student health services — they have literally grown up around the people who matriculated and then matured in the backyard of their alma mater.

Ambition backed by vision has helped the university evolve from a private, liberal arts college, to a public, urban research institution, to an aspiring global higher education community with significant international reach.

INTELLECTUAL TRANSFORMATION

A vital university draws nourishment from both strategic and organic change. Nowhere is that more true than in the College of Arts and Sciences, where record numbers of post-graduate scholarships and soaring graduation rates have shown the promise of policies enacted on students’ behalf. Some examples:

- Ensuring that every academic major offered continues through at least the master’s level
- Tripling the number of student advisers available for tutoring and academic and career development
- Expanding the college’s honors program so talented students can attend smaller and more-intensive classes to slake their thirst for learning
- Adding 50 full-time faculty positions to keep pace with benchmark universities and rely less on part-time teachers to lead crucial foundation courses
- Developing long-range plans for every department in the college, aligned with both A&S’s vision for the future and the university’s greater goals

PHYSICAL TRANSFORMATION

Among the eye-popping changes that have reshaped UofL’s campus profile in the past few years, including a variety of new athletic complexes and student housing sites, perhaps the most surprising addition has been the planting and preservation of trees. UofL recently was named a Tree Campus USA, a national designation awarded to colleges that practice good management of urban forests. The university developed a care plan for the more than 1,100 trees on its 309-acre Belknap Campus and is spending upwards of $200,000 a year to maintain them.
HEALTH SCIENCES CAMPUS

Cardiovascular Innovation Institute
Creating the world’s first Total Bioficial Replacement Heart

School of Medicine
UofL students create a bionic hand for a 6-year-old boy.

School of Dentistry
Tops in the nation for dentistry, pride themselves on community outreach from Pikeville, Kentucky to Belize

School of Nursing
UofL nursing students pass the national licensure at a higher rate than most national nursing programs

School of Public Health & Information Sciences
Coordinated one of the largest number of vaccinations in history to prevent H1N1

James Graham Brown Cancer Center
Finding a cure for cancer by using Kentucky’s number one cash crop, tobacco
Three teams of UofL bioengineering students designed and created multiple “bionic” hand prototypes for Lucas who has symbrachydactyly, a medical condition in which a person is born without a fully functioning hand or foot. The prototypes were designed using open source software found on the Internet and produced using cutting-edge 3-D printing facilities at UofL. Lucas put on one of the prototypes and immediately picked up a ball.
When UofL cardiothoracic surgeons needed greater insights into a toddler patient’s heart conditions prior to surgery, the J/B. Speed School of Engineering’s Rapid Prototyping Center was able to produce a 3D model of the child’s heart using a template created from a CT scan. Using the model as a guide, the physicians were able to develop a surgical plan and complete the heart repair with only one operation.

UofL students create a 3D model of a toddler’s heart.
The University of Louisville partners with some of the top companies in the world to ensure that our region is at the cutting edge of research and development. UofL worked with GE on the FirstBuild microfactory and joined forces with UL (formerly Underwriters Laboratories) for the recently opened UL Additive Manufacturing Competency Center, a first-of-its-kind training facility. Together, these facilities are part of the Institute for Product Realization (IPR).

The IPR is creating an innovation ecosystem at the University of Louisville, connecting industry with campus. The institute currently resides at the northeast corner of the Belknap Campus but eventually will be housed in a development behind the J.B. Speed School of Engineering. The 39-acre Belknap Engineering and Applied Sciences Research Park will house research facilities for the Speed School, office space for applied sciences researchers and areas for private businesses to collaborate with UofL on a variety of projects.
During the summer of 2016, the university announced 15 students had earned Fulbright awards, repeating its 2010 benchmark number and placing UofL among the nation’s top Fulbright-producing institutions. To put things in perspective, UofL had more Fulbright winners in 2016 than all Kentucky institutions combined.

At the University of Louisville, our pursuit of greatness lives in the hearts of our student-athletes – talented young men and women that are taught to look beyond polls, sponsorships, trophies and personal gain. They are bred to focus on the team. Cardinal pride and integrity. Upholding the honor of working, learning and evolving together to achieve a common goal. At UofL, what is learned on the field of play is complemented by what is experienced in the classroom. The results are students that graduate with a rock solid foundation of character and skill that puts them on the fast track to a fulfilled life.

I am Committed to the University of Louisville and its athletic department;
I am Accountable to myself, my team, my family and my community;
I am Respectful to my body, mind and spirit and those of others;
I am Determined to excel in competition and the classroom.
The University of Louisville is a critical resource for improving economic development, social justice, racial harmony and an understanding of urban issues. The city draws on the energy of the University and, conversely, we reciprocate by supporting and engaging the city. Beyond that, we are spurring dramatic economic growth for the Commonwealth and the region. From new jobs, renowned advancements in medical science, bold new construction efforts attracting business start-ups, to the development of educated and talented graduates and post-graduates, the University of Louisville has changed inside and out. Today, we dedicate ourselves to meeting the challenges ahead and becoming the premier metropolitan research university that we are destined to be. Together with the people of this city as our partners, we will advance to realize this dream for our community and ourselves.
