2016 NCAA DIVISION I MEN'S & WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIPS

Saturday, November 19, 2016

Wabash Valley Family Sports Center - LaVern Gibson Championship Cross Country Course

RACE SCHEDULE

Women's 6K race: 11 a.m. ET/8 a.m. PT

Men's 10K race: 12 p.m. ET/9 a.m. PT

LIVE COVERAGE

Live stream: NCAA.com and flotrack.com

Live results: via Record Timing at NCAA.com

COURSE DESCRIPTION

It marks the 12th time the LaVern Gibson Course will play host to the NCAA Division I Championships. Much of the course's popularity is due to its challenging, yet manageable, mix of uphill and downhill sections and its simple straightaway start that stretches for nearly the first kilometer before a turn. For spectators, no other course matches in LaVern Gibson's ability to see nearly the entire race from the right perch.

The major question entering the 78th staging of the NCAA Men's Cross Country Championship is whether any teams or runners can catch the favorites?

In the individual race, OREGON senior Edward Cheserek is seeking to cement his legacy as the greatest athlete in NCAA Division I Cross Country history with an unprecedented fourth national title.

No male or female has accomplished the feat of four individual Division I national crowns, with the current mark of three held by five athletes, four of whom represent the Conference of Champions:

Edward Cheserek, OREGON (2013-15)

Sally Kipyego, Texas Tech (2006-08)

Henry Rono, WASHINGTON STATE (1976-77, 1979)

Steve Prefontaine, OREGON (1970-71, 1973)

Gerry Lindgren, WASHINGTON STATE (1966-67, 1969)

The last person to achieve the three-peat did so in course-record time on the LaVern Gibson Course - Kipyego in 2008.

PAC-12 INDIVIDUAL QUALIFIERS

Bethan Knights, California (8th at West Regional)

The 36th annual NCAA Women's Cross Country Championship will feature a national-best six Pac-12 teams, marking the eighth consecutive year that at least five league member schools have earned NCAA bids.

No. 1 ranked COLORADO has steadily climbed into favorite status over the final few weeks of the season, supplanting Providence atop the national poll in mid-October following a 61-point win at Pre-Nationals. The Buffaloes subsequently cruised to titles at the Pac-12 and NCAA West Regional Championships by 41 and 74 points, respectively, to maintain the top spot. It marked the second straight Conference title and fourth consecutive West Region crown for CU.

No. 4 STANFORD and No. 7 WASHINGTON have swapped finishes in a pair of postseason meets. Buoyed by junior Amy-Eloise Neale's individual title, the Huskies edged the Cardinal by nine points (74-83) at the Pac-12 Championship on Oct. 28, while the Cardinal placed five in the top-20 to beat out the Huskies by 17 points (71-88) at last weekend's West Regional.

MEN'S PREVIEW

Only one other NCAA Cross Country athlete has won four individual titles - Abilene Christian's Nico-demus Naimadu in Division II from 2004-07.

Cheserek has already made history as the first man to win four Pac-12 individual titles with his 14-second triumph in Tucson, Ariz., on Oct. 28, eclipsing the old mark of three he shared with Rono and Prefontaine. His Pac-12 win also garnered him his fourth straight Pac-12 Athlete of the Year award, again unprecedented in league history. Last weekend, he became the first Ducks runner to win three West Regional titles.

On the team side, the Pac-12 will have a national-best six squads competing in the NCAA Men's Championship, with the next closest conference with three entries. However, all of the 31 teams in the field will be looking to keep pace with No. 1 nationally ranked Northern Arizona, which is undefeated on the season, including a 16-point win (60-76) over No. 2 COLORADO at last weekend's West Regional meet in Logan, Utah.

If CU or the other five Pac-12 entrants, led by West Region champion No. 3 STANFORD, No. 10 UCLA and No. 13 OREGON, can take down NAU, it would mark the 17th NCAA team title for current Pac-12 members.

Since the turn of the century, current Pac-12 members have accounted for nine of the 16 national team titles, including all five of COLORADO's crowns. The Pac-12's 16 titles are second only to the Big Ten's 19, all but two of which were won between 1938-88.

WOMEN'S PREVIEW

Neale will be gunning for a postseason individual trifecta after capturing the titles at both the Pac-12 and West Regional meets within the past three weeks.

Like STANFORD and WASHINGTON, No. 12 OREGON has lurked equally as close in a pair of fourth-place showings at Pac-12s and West Regionals, finishing five and 19 points off of third place at each event.

If any of those four teams, or No. 27 UTAH and No. 30 UCLA, can stake their claim to this year's NCAA title, it would mark the 12th women's national championship among current Conference members.

Current Pac-12 members have combined for a total of 11 NCAA team titles, including eight of the 16 awarded since the turn of the century, most recently OREGON in 2012.

Should one the league's six entrants emerge victorious in this year's team race, the Pac-12 would tie the Big East for the most national titles by a conference. The Big East has won 12 women's national titles, eight of which came between 1989-98.

PAC-12 CROSS COUNTRY - CONFERENCE OF CHAMPIONS

The Pac-12 is the winningest conference in NCAA Cross Country history, as current league members boast:

- A national-best 27 NCAA Cross Country team titles (16 men/11 women, both second-best among conferences)
- A national-best 28 NCAA Cross Country individual titles (25 men, most of any conference/3 women)
- 33 NCAA Cross Country runner-up team finishes (18 men/15 women)
- Current Pac-12 members boast nine total USTFCCCA men's cross country national athlete of the year awards, with the next closest conference with three (Big South).

Since expanding to the Pac-12 in 2011, the league has produced the most competitive and successful NCAA teams and individuals in the country, highlighted by:

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

- 2 NCAA men's team national champions, the most of any conference.
- 10 Top 5 men's team finishes at NCAA Championship, the most of any conference. The ACC and Big 12 are second with three apiece.
- 4 NCAA men's individual national champions, the most of any conference.
- 47 men's All-Americans, the most of any conference. The ACC is second with 26.
- The most men's All-Americans each year, highlighted by 15 in 2014 and 12 in 2015.
- 22 men's NCAA Championship participant teams, second-most of any conference behind only the ACC's 26.
- The most men's NCAA Championship participant teams in 2014 (five) and 2015 (league-record seven).

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

- 1 NCAA women's team national champion.
- Seven Top 5 women's team finishes at NCAA Championship, the second-most of any conference behind the Big East.
- 40 women's All-Americans, the most of any conference. The ACC is second with 24.
- 27 women's NCAA Championship participant teams, the most of any conference.
- Five consecutive years with at least five women's NCAA Championship participant teams, the only conference in the nation with such a streak.
- The most women's NCAA Championship participant teams in three of last five years: 2011 (seven), 2012 (five) and 2015 (five).

2016 PAC-12 CHAMPIONSHIPS REVIEW

TUCSON, Ariz. - OREGON senior Edward Cheserek made history as the first four-time men's individual champion in Conference history and COLORADO swept the men's and women's team titles for the second consecutive year to highlight the 2016 Pac-12 Cross Country Championships hosted by ARIZONA at Randolph North Golf Course on Friday, Oct. 28.

Along with the team and men's individual titles, WASHINGTON's Amy-Eloise Neale captured the women's 6,000-meter individual crown in 20:22.9, out kicking COLORADO's Erin Clark and Dani Jones to the finish by just 0.4 and 1.5 seconds, respectively.

Cheserek passed distance legends and three-time league men's champs Steve Prefontaine (OREGON, 1970-71 & 1973) and Henry Rono (WASHINGTON STATE, 1976 & 1978-79) with his four-peat, joining ARIZONA alumna Amy Skieresz (1995-98) as the Conference's only four-time individual cross country champions.

Cheserek broke free midway through the 8,000-meter race and coasted to a 14-second victory in 23:58.9, besting runner-up Grant Fisher (24:13.5) from STANFORD.

The No. 7 COLORADO men won the team title for the sixth consecutive year – every year since joining the Pac-12 in 2011 – to match the Conference record set by STANFORD from 2000-05.

Led by top-10 showings from Ben Saarel (third), Zach Perrin (fourth), John Dressel (sixth) and Ryan Forsyth (ninth), the Buffaloes totaled 41 points to narrowly defeat the No. 2 nationally ranked Cardinal (47). No. 10 UCLA (58) placed third, No. 3 OREGON (94) came in fourth, and No. 15 WASHINGTON STATE (130) closed the top 5.

Paced by Clark, Jones and top-10 finishes by Kaitlyn Benner (fourth) and Makena Morley (ninth), the No. 1 nationally ranked COLORADO women amassed 33 points to coast to their second straight Pac-12 women's team crown. The Buffaloes, who were cheered on by alumna and 2016 Rio Olympics 1,500-meter bronze medalist Jenny Simpson, are the first repeat Conference champion since WASHINGTON accomplished the feat in 2008 and 2009.

No. 2 WASHINGTON, powered by Neale's individual title, was the runner-up with 74 points, followed by No. 11 STANFORD (83) in third, No. 5 OREGON (88) in fourth and No. 17 UTAH (169) in fifth.

It marked the third time COLORADO swept the men's and women's team titles (2011, 2015-16) since joining the league in 2011.
