For the first time, the Patriot League Championship was conducted using a team format rather than the individually-flighted format, which had been used in all previous Patriot League tennis championships. The team format was adopted in an effort to attract an NCAA qualifying slot, which was traditionally weighted upon more heavily by team results.

The format of the 1994 Patriot League Championship changed from a flighted, individual tournament to a team tournament to better align with the qualifying requirements of the NCAA Division I Championship. The League has contested an individual tournament in each of the past three seasons, crowning both flight champions and a team champion. Beginning this season, the team format will pit teams against each other in dual match play, with teams seeded by virtue of their performances during the regular season. Each team will be guaranteed at least two matches, as the first-round losers will participate in consolation round play.
