MIAA Basketball Championship to remain in KANSAS CITY

Through 2030

The Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association announced its postseason basketball championships will remain in Kansas City's Municipal Auditorium through 2030.

"Following consideration of multiple competitive bids by other communities to host the MIAA women's and men's basketball championships every March, I am pleased to announce that the MIAA Tournament will remain in Kansas City at least through the 2030 Championships," said MIAA Commissioner Mike Racy.

"The MIAA is one of the oldest conferences in the NCAA, and we have one of the most competitive college basketball tournaments in the country every year," continued Commissioner Racy. "Our coaches and student-athletes love competing in the historic Municipal Auditorium, and it's exciting that leaders in Kansas City want to continue to feature the MIAA basketball championships every Spring as part of 'March Madness' in this great college basketball city!"

This year's league's men's and women's basketball championships marks the 22nd year of MIAA Madness in Kansas City's historic Municipal Auditorium. With the Association's previous contract expiring after the 2026 championships, MIAA presidents put the tournament up for proposals and unanimously approved a four-year extension to keep one of Division II's best conference championships in Kansas City.

Located in downtown Kansas City, Municipal Auditorium's 10,700-seat arena has hosted 80 NCAA men's basketball tournament games, including nine Final Fours, which is more than any other facility. Kansas City was also recently selected as the host city for multiple upcoming NCAA championships, including the 2026 NCAA Division II Fall Festival.

"The MIAA is a Kansas City institution and longtime contributor in this community recognized for its sports culture," said Kathy Nelson, President and CEO of Visit KC and the Kansas City Sports Commission. "We're thrilled and grateful to know the MIAA Men's and Women's Basketball Championships will continue to play a key role in making KC an unparalleled destination for college basketball."
