I Hope You’re Ready

If your sex life isn’t everything you want it to be - and who’s is these days? - you have probably already realized the mess that is the industry of love through a fruitless and confusing search through dozens of websites, all ready to guarantee that they can turn you into a macho man who gets all the girls.

It's time to face some sad facts about the state of seduction these days.

The world of sex advice is a confusing minefield of pills, programs and posers all trying to tell you that the key to being great in bed lies in being someone you aren’t - the guy with the biggest dick in the room, or the biggest ego, or the biggest wallet...

What if I told you that everything you need to be an amazing lover is already in your possession?

What if all it took to have the best sex you (and she) has ever had is a little bit of creativity and some time?

What is that?

You aren’t “the creative type” you say?

Well buck up honey, because you are today!

Creativity isn’t some special skill that only a lucky few posses. It is entirely within your reach. You don’t need to take dangerous chemicals or buy ridiculous contraptions to become an erotic artist.

All you need is a plan...
Your Long Game

Most sex advice books and websites focus very closely on the moments immediately before, during, and sometimes after sex: dozens of different positions for pleasure, tips on foreplay, maps of the female body. Books about intimacy and communication manuals tend to talk exclusively to couples in long-term relationships.

What nobody seems to be saying is that the real magic happens much earlier than the hook up, but can keep going for a lifetime.

Attraction isn’t about all the hard work that goes into the day-to-day intimacy of a marriage, nor is it about the literal in and outs of getting down and dirty.

Desire happens so much sooner than that, most men miss their opportunity.

Your long game might go on for mere minutes or months - scientists say that this “new love” phase of a relationship can last up to two years.

Whether you go for the fast boil or the slow simmer, your seduction plan shouldn’t be to try and convince someone to have sex with you! She isn’t deciding on a new cell phone plan and she certainly isn’t going to enjoy sex as much as she can if she’s just sort-kind of into it.

You deserve more than that and so does your lover. For her to really enjoy her sexual experience, she needs to feel that desire burning for you just as hot as you do for her. So how exactly do you get there?

Chemistry is About… Chemicals?

You thought “sexual chemistry” was just a metaphor? Think again!

There are two main aspects of sexual chemistry that run on different chemical tracks: lust and attraction.

Lust is a combination of the primary sex hormones, estrogen, progesterone and testosterone at play. While these chemicals are primarily dependent on one’s environment and physical fitness, there are ways to give the body a boost of sexy hormones.

For example… a recent study found that a person could boost their natural testosterone levels significantly by spending ten minutes sitting or standing in a “powerful” pose. These body positions, with the legs strong and relaxed, hips open, chest wide, arms free or even pumped up over the head - positions of celebration and triumph - make you feel not only more confident, but more sexy as well.

This attraction technique not only makes you appear more attractive as a confident person, but it encourages confidence in the people around you. Others will naturally mimic your strong posture and your powerful body placement, which can contribute to testosterone boosts in the people around you as well - talk about turning on a room! This technique is incredibly powerful.

If you notice your date doing things to make her body look small, do what you can to encourage her to celebrate her body more. Ask her to join you on the dance floor where you can really cut a rug and get those hormones pumping.

The second factor in sexually chemistry, attraction, is based on an entirely different set of chemicals, namely hormones which act as neurotransmitters.

The presence of “natural drugs” in the brain and body mark the kind of sexual chemistry that is about building habitual desire - the kind that makes someone fantasize endlessly about you when you’re gone and want to be with you every moment of every day.

The primary drive behind attraction chemicals is the “pleasure principle” - things that make us feel good also make us want to do other things that feel good.
Pleasure opens up the mind to new ideas and opportunities, new physical possibilities.

When we experience pleasure with a person, it is natural to begin fantasizing about experiencing other kinds of pleasure with that same person.

In other words, having fun and celebrating your senses with a woman, even in non-sexual ways, can help boost both of your levels of desire and attraction!

The four primary chemicals of attraction are:

- Dopamine
- Norepinephrine
- Seratonin
- Nerve growth factor

Dopamine

The most commonly discussed of these sexy chemicals is dopamine, a hormone and neurotransmitter which is intimately involved in reward-driven learning, habitual behaviour and addiction.

Dopamine is that burning desire to spend every waking minute with the person you’ve fallen for, the way they make your entire world seem bigger and better and brighter. It tells our brain when things are so good they are worth doing again… and soon.

Any pleasurable stimuli will boost dopamine in the brain. It should be obvious that doing things which are exciting and enjoyable will make someone want to spend more time with you! Eat really delicious food and drink good wine.

Norepinephrine

Norepinephrine, another hormone and neurotransmitter which is synthesized from dopamine, is the “fight-or-flight” chemical. That may not sound so fun, but think about the physical characteristics that go along with it: faster heart rate, increase in blood flow (to the brain and muscles and the genitals), oxygenation of the body tissues, and more.

This rush can make the body feel more alive, though too much of it can push the body into a panic. Norepinephrine is vital for maintaining attention and making critical decisions - like whether or not to go home with someone after a date!

Not only will doing pleasurable things, especially of the heart-thumping exciting variety, allow your date to get more pumped up about your future adventures and help her to make clearer decisions about her own desires, it will also help you be a better and more attentive lover.

Seratonin

The third main hormone and neurotransmitter involved in sexual chemistry is serotonin, intimately linked to memory, learning, sleep and mood.

After bouts of pleasurable stimuli, serotonin helps the body to remember the amazing experience and learn from it. It also encourages restful sleep (which is also great for learning and memory) and drastically improves mood.

Seratonin’s presence can make every moment you and your lover spend together feel like heaven… and its absence can make you feel as if you can’t possible go on for another minute without them.

Nerve Growth Factor

Finally, the Nerve Growth Factor protein encourages even further learning by stimulating nerve growth in the brain, helping you make new connections. It is this simple protein that gives lovers that feeling of being more alive.

Pleasure brings more vitality into your life and can improve every aspect of your health and relationships. If you can avoid thedownfalls of being distracted by a new lover, it can even improve your performance at work.

All of these chemicals are completely natural and are being produced and used in the body all the time. You don’t have to memorize their names or take a lesson in biology to use the basic principles in your love life.

The big secret to seduction that no one is telling you lies in the depths of these chemical interactions. Pleasure, and the anticipation of pleasure, are all the ingredients you need to have the most exciting and enjoyable sex life you can imagine!
Fantasy Land

The important thing to remember about sexual chemistry is that anticipation is (at least) half the fun! Those things which we enjoy the most, from which we gain the most pleasure, are almost always those things which we long for and fixate on in our imaginations.

Chocolate, long walks on the beach, the scent of our favourite flowers, a hot stone massage, a bubbly bath, hot espresso? What does the woman you desire dream about in her fantasy time?

More importantly... where do you fit into those fantasies?

Instead of trying to get her to go home with you, the man with the long-game hopes a woman will go home alone and dream about having sex with him.

Why?

Because anticipation makes everything more exciting!

The Fifty Shades Phenomenon

Until very recently, our sterilized culture was quite comfortable with the idea that men think about sex all the time and women only think about it when they have to.

Thanks to Fifty Shades and the huge boost in female-orientated erotica, to feminist pornographers and erotic artists around the world, we are finally beginning to get a clear idea of what it is that women want.

And it turns out, it isn’t all that different from men.

People love to fantasize. On average, they say that men tend to be slightly more visual than women, though stats show that approximately one in every three porn viewers are female. Women also often appreciate an emotional aspect to their sexual desires, something that tends to be lacking from mainstream porn.

Feminist porn by artists like Erica Lust and Camille Paglia have pioneered the way to making great sexy porn, but the big benefit of written erotic is in its ability to stimulate the imagination.

When you are watching porn, it might be easy for you to see yourself in it, since it is so often made from a man’s point of view (penis goes here, hands go there). But for women, it is incredibly difficult to see themselves in the fake boobs and fake orgasms that are so common in mainstream erotic videos.

In books, however, she can see the main characters almost any way she wishes. She can picture herself as the heroine and you as the hero, even if the actually characters don’t look anything like you two. The rich, descriptive passages in quality erotic allow her mind to wander, to fill in the blanks as she sees fit.

To create the kind of sexual bond filled with lust and desire, all you need to do is give her a script, a story, a little bit of sensual information to work with so she can begin to craft her fantasy world with you in it.

Yes, I said that you decide who you want to be.

What kind of lover will she dream about at night? What kind of man will she see in you and lust after?

That is all up to you.

So here is where things start to get tricky. Stay with me.

When it comes right down to tried and true techniques, the way to engage her mind is actually through her body!

Talk about coming full circle.

So what does it mean to engage the mind through the body?

If you really want your lover’s attention, if you want a woman to want you so much that she’s thinking about you all the time, you need to address all of her senses, long before it’s time to get naked.

The most important things that you can do to ensure your lover has the time of her life should be happening so far outside the bedroom that you may have a hard time seeing the connection.

Think of it like this: your body, and hers, are like gardens of possibility. (Hang in there.)

Through engaging the physical senses, you can plant small seeds in that garden. Those seeds are nurtured by the imagination.

Each smell, taste, sight, sound and touch you offer to her sensual delight will ruminate around in her brain. She can extrapolate each of these senses in her personal fantasies.

The enchanting smell of clean linens can have her daydreaming of a long, luxurious afternoon between the sheets with you. The taste of fresh fruit and chocolate from your fingertips holds the promise of breakfast in bed and even more sensual delights.

She can’t shake the image or sensation of your fingers delicately tracing patterns on the back of her hand. The sound of your deep voice expressing delight with a mouthful of delectable food has her hoping you will be so enthusiastic when you devour her flesh.

You will, won’t you?

These experiences of pleasure are also an intimate gateway into understanding her own erotic responses. Not only do your responses to pleasurable stimuli provide her with something to fuel her fantasies, in the same way her responses to the pleasures you share - good food and wine, exciting surprises, engaging adventures - can give you a glimpse of her body in the act of enjoyment.
