It was created WCR_Team, but in 2002 the original was developed by Blizzard Entertainment. The new version is powered by StarCraft II engine and requires only a free Starter Edition of this game to run it. The modification is available for download free of charge from Battle.net's arcade service. The Story Project faithfully recreates the story of the original. Again, the action takes us to the land of fantasy known as Azeroth. This world is once again turning into a battle during a great war, although this time the series of races known from the previous chapters joined two factions: Undead and Night Elves.Warcraft: Army Azeroth offers four extensive campaigns, one from the sides of the conflict. They have been in a predetermined order as they tell the story of war chronologically. Game Warcraft: Army Azeroth PC is still faithful to Warcraft III: Reign of Chaos also in terms of game mechanics. So it's still a classic RTS enriched with some RPG elements. In this game we focus on collecting resources, developing our base, training units and their commanding battles. There are four factions to choose from, each of which has unique buildings, technologies, and units. In addition, heroes who collect experience points to promote their level and develop their abilities are very important as well. All this is available in both story campaigns as well as multiplayer mode. Technical Aspects of Warcraft: Army Azeroth PC is superior to its original terms of graphics that were created from scratch. All models are more detailed and textures are sharper. In addition, quite a few modern visual effects were added. At the same time, the above elements remain true to the unique Style of Warcraft III. The original's sound and voice-over remained unchanged, though. The same goes for all keyboard shortcuts, although developers did introduce some minor interface improvements. Expectations: 8.8 / 10 calculated from 120 player votes.   Azeroth Recruitment Army April 27 2016 News April 13 2016 News 21 comments Hello everyone! Warcraft: Army Azeroth has been quietly plodding along with ModDB for a while, generating excitement for those who love to remember Blizzard's RTS-RPG hybrid. It aims to restore the Warcraft III StarCraft II engine, but with HD models put together from a variety of sources, including WoW. An alpha version that captures one card and two factions – orcs and people, natch – has now been released via sc2 arcade, making it free for anyone, including those who don't own the base game. Experience past and present from the best strategy games on our list. Since it's 2016, this mod even has a lovely trailer, showing all the different patterns they've been able to implement and how they're moving: If you want to play, you can find it by searching the WAA Turtle Rock arcade as per the announcement post. They plan to increase the number of cards, but now that's all there is. It is also not fully featured, with tavern you can remember from the original game fails to provide the neutral heroes of gold that it used to. Obviously, these models still need to be implemented. If you don't own StarCraft II, well, first off you should, but you can still access it as arcade is a fully functional freeStarter Edition version of the game. Just grab a download from Bnet and you're good to go. For The Army of Azeroth, according to their Facebook mod and team will be headed to Kickstarter this month. Perhaps the next plan now alpha is available as proof of concept. The exact legalities behind the process might be a debate, but considering Blizzard hasn't actively stopped them yet, I assume they're okay with it. As long as the mod is never paid, folks being paid for their time spent creating and transfering assets seems witty to me. I think it will be pretty good too. There's a small but loud group of people who always wanted Warcraft 4 and I think they'll happily chuck five bucks against the HD version Game. Personally I'd love to play a visually upgraded version of that campaign, although I wouldn't be following a couple of balancing changes to make it a bit more fun, which seems to currently be a WAA plan.
