Murphy meets with Barchi, discusses new ideas for The Hub

The Hub, an upcoming redevelopment site in Downtown New Brunswick, will support New Jersey’s economic future by being a point for research and start-up, according to The State of New Jersey’s website.

The location is currently approved for up to 4 million square feet of commercial development and will be anchored by the city’s newest features, along with recent establishment and expansion of residential, retail and entertainment additions.

The site is adjacent to the train station owned by New Brunswick and managed by DEVCO, and will be a strong centerpiece of innovation and hold strong relations with corporate, medical and academic research at its fingertips.

On Monday, Gov. Phil Murphy (D-N.J.) met with University President Robert L. Barchi, other top Rutgers administrators and local elected officials to outline his vision for The Hub and the state’s economic outlook.

“For too long, New Jersey has been left out in the growing national innovation economy,” Murphy said. “By creating a site where high-growth industry can thrive, New Jersey will begin to foster new ideas and take advantage of the once-in-a-generation chance to re-make the state as an engine of economic opportunity.”

Tim Sullivan, the CEO of the New Jersey Economic Development Authority (EDDA) that will oversee and guide the development, said that he hopes to partner with private, public and academic sectors to capitalize on the uniqueness of the site, which has such a strong potential for generating job opportunities in the area.

One of those partners is Rutgers University.

Barchi said Rutgers is keen on exploring the ways that The Hub could complement our strategic plan and fit into a vibrant partnership going forward.”

Alex Gorsky, chairman and CEO of Johnson & Johnson in New Brunswick, said that The Hub is a natural heart of innovation, being located near New York City, thriving companies and top universities and that those collaborations, such as The Hub’s coalition with Rutgers, will help launch its success.

“We recognize that transformational ideas come from everywhere, and the new discoveries and collaborations that will emerge from this hub will help change the trajectory of healthcare for patients worldwide. I applaud Governor Murphy, the City of New Brunswick and Rutgers University on this initiative to strengthen the business ecosystem in the State of New Jersey,” he said.

Along with strengthening the economy and creating job opportunities, the State of New Jersey stated on its website that the project has potential to collaborate with Rutgers to further advance its research drive.

The website stated that there is potential for a lab at the site where students and faculty can work to develop innovative solutions to improve resident interaction with government services.

This March, Chancellor Debasish Dutta expressed a need to push for federal funding at Rutgers. He said that he hopes to see the University expand its research capabilities, as reported by The Daily Targum.

The University brings in more federal research dollars than every other New Jersey school combined, Dutta said. His goal is for Rutgers to be among the top 10 public universities for funded research.

“We need to increase our large centers, institutes and networks. That is where the big money is going to come from. That is where federal research is headed,” Dutta said.

The University’s federal funding for research and development holds a budget of approximately $658 million, towering over all other state colleges, according to the Targum.

“The Hub’s location offers direct access to Rutgers University, one of the nation’s premier public research universities, a highly educated, skilled workforce, and mass transit options,” The Hub’s website stated. “This mixed-use project will be a hot bed for innovation.”

Rutgers student dies in accident while snowboarding

A Rutgers student died on Thursday from injuries she received while snowboarding at Big Mountain Resort in Pennsylvania.

Euna Shin, a 20-year-old from Piscataway, New Jersey, and a School of Engineering sophomore, was pronounced dead at 5:36 p.m. on Thursday at the Lehigh Valley Hospital in Salisbury Township, according to a report by NJ Advance Media.

She died as a result of head injuries following a fall that happened the day before, at approximately 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday while she was snowboarding, according to the report.

Lehigh County Coroner Scott Grim said that Shin was wearing a helmet during the fall, according to the report. He ruled her death an accident.

Euna Shin was a School of Engineering sophomore. She died on Thursday as a result of head injuries sustained while snowboarding at Blue Mountain Resort in Pennsylvania. FACEBOOK

2 online programs at Rutgers rank for affordability, high standards

RANGING FROM cost effectiveness to highest quality, two online graduate-degree programs at Rutgers have been recognized in recent rankings for their respective affordability and standards.

In its top-10 ranking of “Lowest Cost Online Finance Ph.D Programs,” Grad School Hub placed the Rutgers online Ph.D. in Finance among the top institutions on the list.

The average graduate tuition for the program is $14,372 per year and the degree requires 60 credit hours of coursework, a research paper and a dissertation, according to the ranking.

Grad School Hub put the ranking together based on data from the National Center for Education Statistics College Navigator, according to its methodology. It looked at an initial pool of 80 potential schools before choosing a final 10 based on in-state graduation rates.

This ranking highlights 10 of the most affordable programs in this field, according to the ranking. “Ranging from well-known online colleges to prestigious universities that are respected for their finance programs, these 10 schools all have Ph.D. in Finance online options.”

The other program, the Online Master of Education in Learning, Cognition and Development, was ranked seventh in the “Top 15 Master’s in Child and Adolescent Psychology Online Degree Programs in 2018.”

Methodology to determine the best schools, it rated the graduate programs in affordability, access and credits available online. In this ranking, almost all of the programs offered all of their classes for hands-on education. When considering coursework, it examined what percentage of the program’s classes focus specifically on child psychology.

In the ranking, OPD included programs in child and adolescent psychology, developmental psychology, human development and education, other related fields and general psychology programs with youth-related specializations. With the highest possible score being a 10, OPD assigned points to each program and calculated the final numbers, according to the methodology.

In seventh place, Rutgers received a score of 8.5. The University’s program averages $24,429 yearly in tuition and fees and is the only Master of Education program to make the list, according to the ranking.

OPD drew its data from the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System, the National Center for Education Statistics College Navigator and the Great Plains Interactive Distance Education Alliance, according to the ranking.

“Child psychology is a field that focuses on human development in the early stages of the lifespan,” according to the ranking. “Professionals in this discipline act as experts in behavioral issues, social problems and emotional and cognitive factors that uniquely affect the well-being of infants, children and adolescents.”

UNION COUNTY

Jeffrey Adams, 21, was sentenced Friday to 25 years in state prison, after he killed his father and attempted to cover it up by setting his house on fire. Union Township fire and police departments responded to a house fire at approximately 11:45 a.m. on May 8. When they arrived at the home, responders found the body of Michael Adams, 59 inside the home.

An investigation led by the Union County Homicide Task Force determined that Jeffrey Adams stabbed his father to death following an argument, set the house on fire and fled the scene. On Feb. 5 Adams pleaded guilty to first-degree aggravated manslaughter.

JERSEY CITY

A 52-year-old Union City woman has been charged with having sex with an underage girl he met at a Christmas party.

Amaya was arrested Wednesday and charged with sexual assault, criminal sexual contact and endangering the welfare of a child. During the investigation, conducted by the Hudson County Prosecutor’s Office Special Victims Unit, the girl told detectives that she met Amaya at a party and met him at his friend’s home on Jan. 12 to have sex. Amaya was questioned Wednesday and then arrested — making his first appearance on the charges in Criminal Justice Reform Court in Jersey City on Thursday.

ATLANTIC CITY

A caregiver has been charged with reckless manslaughter and multiple weapons offenses after a 23-year-old Atlantic City man was shot and killed last week.

On March 12, Casselli allegedly shot Daquan Montague — the first homicide victim of the year. Casselli is currently being held at the Atlantic County jail.

In an email sent yesterday afternoon, Rutgers—New Brunswick Chancellor Deborah Datta said, “I am greatly saddened by Euna’s death, and I hope you will join me in offering your thoughts and prayers to her family and friends.”

Shin was actively involved on campus, she said. She was on the executive board of the Honors College Knights’ Table and was an Honors College Ally who worked to support younger students with related majors.

She described her as “a really engaged student — she excelled academically and was active in our community,” Datta said.

In the email, she provided resources for students seeking grief or support. He said students can contact Counseling, Alcohol and Other Drug Assistance Program & Psychiatric Services (CAPS) at 848-932-7884 or visit centers at 17 Seneca Street or 64 Nicholson Avenue in New Brunswick.

He also provided contact information for the Dean of Students Office at 848-932-2350, the Multicultural Council at 848-932-5500, the crisis text line which can be reached by texting KINIGHTS to 741741 anytime and the NJ HopeLine at 1-855-654-6735.

Trump’s opioid fight tactics may cause harm

A HEALTHY DOSE OF JUSTICE

JACOB WASSERMAN

With this Monday’s rollout of a new opioid plan from President Donald J. Trump’s administration, I feel like it is necessary to discuss the seemingly endless fight against drug addiction.

America faces a crisis of opioid addiction and we need to find a solution. However, the plan proposed by the Trump administration does not address the root causes of this epidemic. Instead, it focuses on punitive measures and has not taken into consideration the need for compassion and support.

For instance, the plan includes proposals for increased penalties for drug dealers and a push for more inpatient treatment for opioid addictions. While these measures may seem like a step in the right direction, they do not address the underlying issues of addiction and the need for support and resources.

The Trump administration’s approach to the opioid epidemic is one of punishment and deterrence, rather than one of prevention and support. This is not a sustainable solution, and it is unlikely to have the desired effect.

Instead, we need a comprehensive strategy that includes education, early intervention, and access to evidence-based treatments. We also need to address the social determinants of health, such as poverty and lack of access to healthcare.

The Trump administration’s plan is a missed opportunity to truly address the opioid crisis. Instead, it continues to stigmatize and criminalize those affected by addiction. We need a more compassionate and effective approach.

In conclusion, the Trump administration’s plan to combat the opioid crisis is not a comprehensive solution. We need a strategy that includes prevention, support, and rehabilitation. Only then can we hope to truly make a difference in the lives of those affected by addiction.

As March starts to wind down, spring is firmly on its way. Odds are, you’re much more willing to hop on a train to New York City now as opposed to a few months ago. Since the weather is bound to get better, here are some events in NYC and Philadelphia that will be worth the commute.

MEAN GIRLS ON BROADWAY
(OPENING ON APRIL 8)

Tina Fey’s first attempt at movie screenwriting birthed a classic, the ever-quotable “Mean Girls.” Now, 14 years after the movie’s release, a version of the film is coming to Broadway. With music written by Emmy winning composer (and Tina’s husband) Jeff Richmond, the show should be a hit. The stage adaptation will stick close to the original story, but with a Broadway book written by Fey and all original lyrics, it’ll definitely have plenty of surprises. At the end of the day, a Broadway ensemble singing about the odds of “fetch” catching on seems too good to miss.

HANK WILLIS THOMAS @ JACK SHAINMAN GALLERY
(MARCH 29 TO MAY 12)

Hank Willis Thomas is a conceptual artist based out of Plainfield, New Jersey. He’s had his work featured in the Whitney, Guggenheim and MoMA. From March 29 to May 12 his work will be featured in the Jack Shainman Gallery in New York City. Among the work is a piece that features a Confederate flag in variant colors, historical photographs, and a piece made entirely of soccer jerseys. Thomas’s work has always represented an incisive look at our culture and our times, so the opportunity to view his work is an exciting one.

TRIBECA FILM FEST
(APRIL 18-29)

Film festivals are often seen as pricy trips which require a commitment to camping out in a city for a few days. Thankfully, with Rutgers’ proximity to NYC, the Tribeca Film Festival is an option that’s much easier on the wallet. Since the festival occurs while classes are drawing to a close, you’ll probably want to shoot for Matinee tickets. The Matinee package costs $55 and includes six matinee-priced tickets and a one-year subscription to The New York Times. For film nuts, especially those with a passion for independent films, this is an event to keep on your radar.

“BLACK PULP!” @ THE AFRICAN AMERICAN MUSEUM IN PHILLY
(THROUGH APRIL 29)

The African American Museum in Philadelphia was founded in 1976, as the first institution funded and built by a major municipality to preserve, interpret and exhibit the heritage of African Americans. A few blocks away from the Liberty Bell, the AAMP is part of the historic sector of Philadelphia. “Black Pulp!” is an exhibit showcasing print media of various black arts movements and black life from 1912 to 2016. The exhibit pairs print media with contemporary art from African American artists. Some of these are collaborations that could have never happened in real life, as these artists, writers and publishers all lived in different time periods. Works by Langston Hughes, Kara Walker, Zora Neale Hurston, Kerry James Marshall and more are on display. This well-curated exhibit is a showstopper, worthy of a trip to Philly.

LORDE/ RUN THE JEWELS/ MITSKI @ THE BARCLAYS CENTER
(APRIL 4)

This concert is coming up, so if you’re considering going, move fast! Of course Lorde, the New Zealand pop star is headlining, but her openers are two very different performers, from each other and from Lorde. Run the Jewels (or RTJ) is a rap duo of Killer Mike and El-P, artists from very different backgrounds who came together to shake up hip-hop. Mitski is a Japanese-American singer-songwriter who’s been on a meteoric rise in the last couple of years. Lorde is one of the lead figures in alternative pop, RTJ are at the forefront of alternative hip-hop and Mitski is a prominent musician in alternative rock. To have them all on the same bill is sure to be an interesting experience.

TO THE CLASS OF TWO THOUSAND EIGHTEEN

Loyal Sons & Daughters of Rutgers

For 60 years, the Rutgers Alumni Association (RAA) has honored volunteers who have made a meaningful and long-standing commitment to Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey. This year’s class of eight outstanding “Loyal Sons & Daughters” is comprised of a diverse group that distinguished themselves through outstanding service to Rutgers or have made a significant impact on University life and culture. The honorees will be inducted during a black tie affair to be held at Nelson Dining Hall on the Cook/Douglas Campus at 6:00 p.m. on Saturday, April 14, 2018.

If you would like more information about the awards banquet, please call the RAA office at 732-932-7474.

ships in Cleveland, Ohio on Saturday looking for the sweep, but suffered a 9-8 walk-off loss in a game that featured big innings from both teams.

Florida Gulf Coast had a 3-1 lead after the second, but the Knights heading into the bottom of the seventh inning, an RRs rallied to score 6 runs and complete the comeback win.

The 5-0, walk-off came from Maddon, who was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded. Moyer was 2-5 with two RBI's. Collins improved her record to 3-2 on the season from the circle, pitching the final three innings of the game.

After taking out No. 1 seed Darion Cruz of Lehigh, 2-0. Suriano was unseeded. He met in the championship match by No. 3 seed Spencer Lee of Iowa, who had just defeated No. 2 seed Nathan Thomasos of Ohio State. Suriano battled with the middle of the title match, compared to the rest of the season and even the prior matches at the championships.

With the first homestand will begin on March 30, as the Knights will play three games against Penn State (3-18). Currently, Rutgers was 8 matches above the Big Ten ahead of conference play.

"It leaves a bitter taste in the mouth to have the game won late and not be able to pull it out," Litterio said.

Bowerbank, fifth-year senior first baseman Chris Foligno and sophomore shortstop Kevin Welsh each had two RBI's in the loss, and freshman heaterFeat struck out seven in six innings of work. One of the highlights of the weekend was the Knights' ability to produce with two outs. They scored 6 runs with two outs, which was part of the reason why they were able to claw back from deficits multiple times.

The Knights will kick off conference play with a series against Balfant Field against Penn State this weekend.

"I think everyone did their part over spring break," Nyisztor said. "Everyone succeeded in their own role, nobody tried to do too much and everyone did what they could to help the team win. We all contributed equally, which led to our success."

Rutgers wins 3rd straight series at FGCU

JORDAN FARBOWITZ

The Rutgers baseball team headed down to Florida for spring break, but it wasn’t there to enjoy the beach like most other college students. It was there to play, and play it did, coming away with favorable results.

After sweeping Army and beating Florida International in a mid-week game, the Scarlet Knights (11-7) ended the road trip by taking 2 of 3 from Florida Gulf Coast (14-5) this weekend, winning their third series in a row.

“It was a quality week, and it’s something that we can build off of going forward,” said head coach Joe Litterio.

Rutgers won the first game of the series 13-9 in a game that it had to fight hard to win. The Knights found themselves in an early 6-2 hole after three innings, but clawed back, scoring 3 runs in the fifth and 1 in the sixth to tie the game.

They then broke the game wide open with 6 runs in the top of the seventh, and hung on for the win despite 3 runs in the bottom of the frame for the Eagles.

Freshman left fielder Mike Nyisztor had four RBIs in the win, including the game-tying sacrifice fly in the sixth, while junior right JULES HENINGBURG, senior attacker and captain on the men’s lacrosse team, was named National Player of the Week by US Lacrosse Magazine on Monday.

Heningburg is coming off a week where he scored 7 goals and added three assists.

Junior outfielder Luke Bowerbank went 6-11 over the three game series against Florida Gulf Coast, scoring 5 runs and collecting three RBI’s in the process.

Over spring break, the Rutgers softball team played a total of 11 games, going 6-5 and improving its record to 15-14 on the season.

The first bevy of games came at the Florida Atlantic Tournament from March 9-11.

In that tournament, the Scarlet Knights earned a 7-5 win over Pittsburgh, a 7-2 win over Texas-El Paso, and a 4-1 win over LIU Brooklyn, but lost to Stony Brook 5-2, and took a loss to Florida A&M 4-1.

In the 5-2 loss to the Seawolves, sophomore Cambria Keefer pitched four and two thirds innings, giving up 4 earned runs. Rutgers only strung together four hits in the game, two of which came from sophomore left fielder Hailey Hoklotubbe.

On Saturday of the tournament, the Knights played a double header against the Panthers and Rattlers, two teams they lost to earlier in the season. In game one against Pittsburgh, junior Whitney Jones earned the win in the circle, while senior catcher Sierra Maddox slashed three hits, one of which was a home run.

In game two, Keefer received the loss despite pitching well, going five and two.
