

Angela Yee

Angela Yee was born and raised in Brooklyn. She graduated from Wesleyan University with a BA in English.

After college, Angela became assistant to the CEO of Wu-Tang Corporation. Having a knack for marketing she spent the next five years working with internet startups, a distribution label, and clothing brands. A few years later she became a morning show host at Sirius Satellite Radio after establishing her niche in a memorable interview with Jay-Z. After pitching her own weekly nighttime show called “Lip Service,” The show was the only female-hosted program on Shade 45. After six years at Shade 45 Angela left to work with New York City’s Power 105.1 and formed ‘The Breakfast Club’ with DJ Envy and Charlamagne. Fast forward, the nationally syndicated morning show is now heard 30 markets weekday mornings and over 70 markets on the weekend. Angela donates her time and effort to speaking at schools, educational panels, other charitable organizations.
