Many honeymoons come in traditional packages, with guests jetting off to beachside resorts to lounge by the pool. An eco-resort, however, offers a slightly different take on the classic post-nuptial getaway, providing guests not only with a sustainable vacation that won't harm the environment, but also with a chance to connect better with nature, themselves, and their partner. From outdoor yoga, nature tours, healing ceremonies, and healthful food, these eco-resorts let honeymooners unwind with nature after the big celebration.

Best Design: ORIGINS Lodge, Costa Rica

BUY ON TRIPADVISOR.COM

The first luxury lodge in Costa Rica's northern jungles puts a new face on environmentally friendly. The property made up of six lodges with handcrafted canopy beds and hot plunges on their terraces, and the incomparable three-bedroom Villa Vertigo—named for the dizzying height of its treetop perch—is far more elegant than what's expected of an eco lodge. Vegetation-covered living roofs were designed to blend in with the existing flora. There's no plastic nor chemical pesticides used on the 45-hectare primary forest site, which they're actively reforesting by planting new trees. Honeymooners can dive right in with medicinal plant tours, waterfall hikes, horseback rides, lagoon fishing, chocolate making and organic treatments in the open-air spa. Edible flowers and organic veggies from the onsite garden—a beneficiary of composting—make their way into fusion dishes that encompass vegan and vegetarian diets, as well as garden-to-glass cocktails at Skyview Lounge, where each sunset is best spent.
