Item 4 - Advisory Business

Oarsman Capital, Inc. (“OCI”) is an investment adviser registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) that provides investment-management services, mutual fund/exchange-traded fund portfolios, separate accounts managed by independent investment managers (“Independent Managers”), financial-planning services and retirement plan advisory services to a variety of retail and institutional clients. OCI is majority owned by Robert W. Phelps and Benjamin Kebbekus. OCI does not control any other firm; its only business is providing investment advice.

In January 2023, OCI launched LRC Aviation Advisors (“LRC”), a division of OCI. This division has a unique market niche that is focused on airline pilot retirement plans and financial planning. LRC’s target market is airline pilots and their families to provide the knowledge and services specific to the different retirement requirements in the airline industry.

The advisory services of OCI are described below.

Investment-Management Services

OCI provides Investment Management Services to individual, trust and institutional clients seeking to implement long-term investment programs; OCI also serves as a sub-advisor to other investment advisory entities. OCI constructs and manages for its clients portfolios that comprise one or more of the following investment asset classes, among others: common stocks, debt securities (U.S. Treasury, U.S. Government Agency, corporate and municipal), mutual funds, exchange-traded funds/notes, stock options, and cash equivalents. OCI emphasizes the use of securities it believes are of fundamental quality and, in the case of common stocks and stock-based mutual- and exchange-traded funds, offer capital-appreciation potential. Investment programs for taxable individual and trust clients emphasize a long-term perspective, tax-efficient strategies and the control of investment risk. Programs for tax-exempt/-deferred clients seek to achieve risk-adjusted returns superior to an appropriate benchmark over multi-year periods that encompass both ‘bull’ and ‘bear’ market phases.

In identifying potentially attractive common stocks to purchase, OCI favors well established companies that possess, among other desirable attributes, proprietary products and/or services, track records of consistent earnings growth, financial strength, experienced management, and well articulated strategies for future growth. Many though not all such companies are global industry leaders with large market capitalizations. OCI also seeks to invest in stocks with reasonable valuations. In assessing valuation, OCI typically analyzes current and historical data regarding a stock’s price/earnings, enterprise value/cash flow, price/sales, and/or price/book ratios. Discounted-cash-flow analysis is also utilized where appropriate.

OCI constructs for its clients portfolios whose common stock holdings are broadly diversified among several economic/industry sectors, while at the same time may include strategic concentrations intended to benefit from cyclical and/or longer-term trends. To broaden portfolio holdings to include investments that fall outside OCI’s core-equity discipline, OCI will invest a portion of client assets in equity mutual funds and/or exchange-traded funds/notes whose managers employ an investment approach that differs from that of OCI (e.g., small-company stocks, non-U.S. stocks, high-yield income investments, real-estate- and commodity-related investments, among others).

OCI invests client assets in stocks with the intention of holding them for an extended period of time; accordingly, portfolio turnover is expected to be relatively low. A stock is eliminated from a client’s portfolio (sold) if OCI believes the company has lost its fundamental quality or growth potential. A stock position is reduced (trimmed) in a portfolio if OCI believes the stock’s valuation more than adequately reflects the company's assessed quality and growth potential. Short-term market-timing strategies are generally avoided. However, a major change in OCI's market outlook can result in a reallocation of assets among security classes (if consistent with client-established guidelines).

OCI invests a portion of most clients' assets in U.S. dollar-denominated debt securities primarily to provide a reliable source of portfolio income and to enhance stability of principal. In most cases, investment-grade notes and bonds are used, and the average maturity of portfolio holdings generally does not exceed 10 years. Tax-exempt (municipal) securities are diversified geographically and corporate debt securities are diversified by industry. OCI generally holds debt securities for an extended period (e.g., maturity) and portfolio turnover is expected to be relatively low. A debt security may be sold if OCI believes there has been a major reduction in the creditworthiness of the issuer, if OCI identifies a security deemed more attractive in terms of yield and/or quality, or if a change in OCI's interest rate and/or economic forecast necessitates an adjustment to the portfolio's asset allocation, average maturity, sector allocation (e.g., government vs. corporate), or industry exposure.

Mutual Fund/Exchange-Traded Fund Portfolios

For clients whose investment needs or preferences do not call for a fully customized portfolio comprising primarily individual common stocks and fixed-income securities, OCI offers a program that utilizes model asset-allocation strategies, each targeting a specific investment objective/risk tolerance, and implemented using mutual funds and exchange-traded funds (MFs, ETFs).

In OCI's MF/ETF program, the Firm offers several model asset allocations, with initial portfolio composition and ongoing management driven by the firm's economic and financial-market outlook. OCI makes recommendations regarding a particular model/strategy based on factors including, but not limited to, the client's financial situation, long-term goals, investment objectives and attitude toward risk. Specific mutual funds/ETFs are selected based on their ability to provide desired asset exposure, historical investment performance, and cost-efficiency.

Separately Managed Accounts

For clients whose investment needs require additional diversification, OCI may engage certain Independent Managers through Charles Schwab & Co., Inc.'s Managed Account Marketplace program ("Schwab Marketplace") to actively manage a portion of some clients' assets by investing in a variety of investments and employing various investment techniques. OCI evaluates a variety of information about Independent Managers, which generally includes the Independent Managers' public disclosure documents, materials supplied by the Independent Managers themselves and other third-party analyses that OCI believes are reputable. Independent Managers are selected based on their ability to provide desired asset exposure, historical investment performance, and cost efficiency. On an ongoing basis, OCI monitors the performance of those accounts being managed by Independent Managers. OCI seeks to ensure the Independent Managers' strategies remain aligned with its clients' investment objectives and overall best interests.

The specific terms and conditions under which a client engages an Independent Manager are set forth in a separate written agreement with the designated Independent Manager. In addition to this brochure, clients should also review the written disclosure brochures of the respective Independent Managers engaged to manage their assets.

Financial-Planning Services

Oarsman Capital provides financial-planning services that include, among other things, household/business cash-flow analysis; retirement-income planning; risk-tolerance profiling; asset-allocation design; pension- and health-care benefits analysis; tax planning; and family-survivorship guidance. Financial-planning services are generally provided at no additional cost to clients who have retained OCI for Investment Management and/or Mutual Fund/Exchange-Traded Fund Portfolio services, though flat-rate or hourly fee arrangements may be agreed to on a case-by-case basis.

Financial-planning services assist clients in evaluating the appropriateness of existing and/or potential financial arrangements, with the aim of enhancing the probability of attaining various financial goals. In providing these services, OCI uses industry-standard methods and technology-based tools to perform calculations based on information provided by the client or prospect and informed by capital-market assumptions and alternative planning scenarios. Results are hypothetical and intended to be reviewed and updated regularly. Individuals should consult with their legal and/or tax advisers regarding the appropriateness of any financial plan. Clients and prospects are to notify OCI immediately if there have been any material changes in their financial situation.

In conjunction with financial-planning services, OCI may provide clients with discretionary investment-advisory services for their self-directed employer-sponsored retirement-plan (e.g., 401(k), 403(b), PRAP) accounts and/or Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs). If OCI recommends that a client retain OCI to provide investment-advisory services for retirement-plan assets not previously overseen by OCI, that recommendation creates a conflict of interest, as OCI will earn incremental fees if the client follows the recommendation. OCI policies require that all such recommendations be in the client's best interest.

Retirement-Plan Advisory Services

OCI offers educational and/or advisory services to retirement plans and their participants. OCI's services are designed to complement the services of unaffiliated third-party retirement plan administrators in assisting plan sponsors, plan trustees, and investment committees in meeting their management and fiduciary obligations to plan participants under the Employee Retirement Income and Securities Act ("ERISA").

OCI supplements the services provided by the plan administrator – who assists the plan in creating an investment policy statement defining the types of investments to be offered and the restrictions that may be imposed – by providing education services to plan participants and monitoring the performance of the plan's investment vehicles. OCI assists with participant enrollment meetings and provides investment-related educational seminars to plan participants on topics including, but not limited to, diversification, asset allocation, risk tolerance, time horizon as well as other topics specific to a particular plan. Plan participants are responsible for all individual investment decisions and allocations made within the plan.

As of December 31, 2022, OCI had assets of $439,061,423 under discretionary management and $933,985 under non-discretionary management.

Item 5 - Fees and Compensation

Fees paid to OCI are for OCI investment-advisory services only and are negotiable. Advisory fees paid to OCI do not include, for example, fees charged by third-party advisors, such as accountants or attorneys, brokerage commissions, account closing/transfer fees, custodial fees, taxes, separate account investment management fees charged by Independent Managers and other costs incidental to the purchase and sale of investments. In addition, transaction costs and other account fees will be charged by brokerage firms in accordance with each brokerage firm's commission and account-fee schedule. See Item 12, Brokerage Practices, for additional information.

In addition to OCI's investment-advisory fee, all mutual funds and exchange-traded funds in which a client's assets are invested charge their own internal fees and expenses (the funds' 'expense ratio'). This expense ratio represents the percentage of fund assets used to operate the fund, and comprises investment-management fees, administrative costs, brokerage costs, distribution fees and other operating expenses. Though these expenses are paid by the fund, they are ultimately borne by clients via a reduction in fund net-asset value. In most cases, clients can invest directly in MF/ETF shares without incurring OCI's advisory fee. Clients should consider both OCI's advisory fee and fund expense ratios (which are set forth in the prospectus for each fund) when evaluating the total cost of any OCI investment program or comparing that cost with those of other investment programs.

OCI often purchases commission-free ETFs and no-transaction-fee (NTF)/"no-load" share classes of mutual funds, which can be purchased and sold without incurring incremental transaction costs. The use of no-load/NTF funds can be advantageous in volatile market conditions and for clients who make regular contributions or withdrawals from their accounts, both of which can increase trading activity. No-load/NTF funds generally have higher ongoing operating expenses (expense ratios) than similar-objective funds carrying loads and/or transaction fees. Accordingly, clients with larger accounts and those who make infrequent contributions/withdrawals may find OCI programs more costly than other investment programs.

Transactions made by OCI on behalf of clients can result in tax consequences. For non-tax-deferred (e.g., personal, joint and trust) accounts, fund-share redemptions and security sales are taxable events that may accelerate the recognition of capital gains (and losses); some redemptions/sales may result in short-term, rather than long-term, capital gains (and losses).

OCI Advisory Fees

Advisory fees are calculated based on the value of investments in a client's account(s). All asset-based fees are negotiable, but are typically subject to the following fee schedule:*

Assets Under Management	Annual Rate	Quarterly
First $500,000	1.0%	0.250%
Next $500,000	0.8%	0.200%
Next $2 million	0.7%	0.175%
Next $2 million	0.6%	0.150%
Over $5 million	0.5%	0.125%

*Subject to a minimum account size of $100,000 (though this may be waived at OCI's discretion).

Advisory fees are billed in advance, generally on a calendar-quarterly basis at a rate equal to one-quarter of the annual rate. Fees are based on the market value of the managed account(s) as of the last business day of the prior quarter. The fee for any period which is less than a full quarter is pro-rated. A client may receive a pro-rated refund of prepaid fees by giving OCI 30 days' advance written notice of intent to terminate his/her investment-management relationship (provided such notice is given more than 30 days before the end of a billing period). No adjustment or refund is made with respect to partial withdrawals during any billing period. Fees are billed directly to, and debited from, the client's account(s), unless other arrangements for payment are requested by the Client. OCI may, in its sole discretion, combine the value of related accounts for fee billing purposes.

As previously described, mutual funds and exchange-traded funds pay internal advisory fees to their investment managers, which payments reduce the net asset value of the funds' shares. Additionally, OCI bills clients a fee based on the total value of their portfolios, which may be partly or entirely composed of mutual fund and/or exchange-traded fund holdings. Clients whose portfolios include such funds pay two levels of fees, one directly to OCI for investment-advisory services, and one indirectly to the manager of the funds.

OCI may amend its fees upon advance written notice to the client.

The contract for Advisory Services may be terminated at any time upon 30 days' advance written notice from one party to the other.

Retirement-Plan Advisory Services Fees

OCI is generally compensated for its retirement-plan advisory services based on a fixed fee or a percentage of assets. All terms, including the agreed upon fee and payment schedule, will be evidenced in an agreement between OCI and the plan or plan fiduciary. Either party to the agreement may terminate our agreement upon 30-days' advance written notice to the other party. If paid in advance, a prorated portion of OCI's fee will be refunded to the client based on the number of days services were actually provided. Factors affecting the final agreed-upon fee include, but are not limited to, the asset size of plan, complexity of available investment options within the plan, and the overall participant base. OCI's fee is payable quarterly and coordinated with the plan trustee(s) and the third-party administrator.

Independent Manager Fees

Each Independent Manager charges a fee that is in addition to the fee charged by OCI. The Independent Managers' fees are generally charged quarterly and vary between 0.50% and 0.65%, depending on the value and type of the assets being managed. Please refer to the Form ADV 2A for the respective Independent Manager for details relating to their fee-billing practices.

Item 6 – Performance-Based Fees and Side-by-Side Management

OCI does not charge any performance-based fees. All fees are disclosed in Item 5 above.

Item 7 - Types of Clients/Minimum Account Size

OCI makes its advisory services available to a wide variety of clients including, but not limited to, individuals, pension and profit-sharing plans, trusts, estates, charitable organizations, corporations and other business entities. The firm also serves as a sub-advisor to other investment advisors.

OCI may impose a minimum account size of $100,000. However, this minimum may be waived at OCI's discretion.

Item 8 - Methods of Analysis, Investment Strategies and Risk of Loss

OCI's security analysis methods include, but are not limited to, fundamental analysis (evaluating securities based upon their historical and projected financial performance); cyclical analysis (determining the desirability of an issue based upon the status of an issue within the price cycle the security or similar securities have followed historically); and technical analysis (using historical charts to track individual security or market patterns over time).

OCI's main sources of information include, but are not limited to, financial data services/websites, newspapers and magazines, research materials prepared by others, company financial reports, and corporate rating services.

Also, see Item 4 above for a more detailed explanation of the services provided by the firm.

OCI does not guarantee the results of advice given. Significant losses can occur by investing in any security, or by following any strategy, including conservative investment strategies recommended or applied by OCI.

Item 9 - Disciplinary Information

OCI does not have any disciplinary information to report regarding itself or any of its representatives or other related persons.

Item 10 - Other Financial Industry Activities and Affiliations

OCI may recommend or select Independent Managers through Schwab Marketplace to manage certain client assets. Both clients and OCI may receive compensation from Schwab Marketplace in the form of monies to reimburse transfer, service, withdrawal and other miscellaneous fees. OCI may also receive compensation to be used only for its clients' benefit, but this compensation nonetheless creates a conflict of interest as it may offset costs that would otherwise be incurred by the firm.

Item 11 - Code of Ethics, Participation or Interest in Client Transactions and Personal Trading

OCI, or its officers, directors, portfolio managers and employees, may invest in the same securities that are the subject of investment advice to clients. OCI has established a Code of Ethics applicable to all persons at the firm who have access to confidential client records or to recommendations being made for client accounts. Designed to prevent conflicts between the financial interests of clients and the interests of OCI's staff, the Code requires such "access persons" to obtain preapproval of certain securities transactions, to report transactions quarterly and to report all securities positions in which they have a beneficial interest at least annually. These reporting requirements allow OCI supervisors to determine whether to allow or prohibit certain employee securities trades based on transactions made, or anticipated to be made, in the same securities for Client accounts. OCI does not have advance knowledge of trades to be executed within client accounts by Independent Managers. The Code is required to be reviewed annually and updated as necessary. A complete copy of the firm's Code is available upon request.

Item 12 - Brokerage Practices

OCI does not exercise discretion to select custodian/brokerage firms (collectively known as "Service Providers") for its client accounts; clients are free to use the Service Provider of their choice. OCI generally recommends clients use one of several Service Providers with which it has established relationships that facilitate the efficient delivery of investment advisory services. Clients should be aware that when they use the transaction services of recommended Service Providers they may not always realize the most favorable execution of transactions. However, OCI believes potentially higher costs are offset by the more efficient service delivery attained by using recommended Service Providers. Clients should also be aware that should they choose to use a Service Provider other than one recommended by OCI, they may not receive execution services (or costs) comparable to those received by other OCI clients. For example, some 'full-service' brokerage firms have minimum transaction charges that are many times greater than those available through recommended Service Providers. In addition, when making a large number of like transactions for multiple client accounts, OCI generally will execute the larger number of trades at recommended Service Providers prior to executing the smaller number of trades at other client-designated Service Providers.

Service providers are recommended to OCI clients because of their execution capability, cost-effectiveness, quality of technology platforms, and value of investment-research, client-relationship and practice-management services. Research services include analytical reports on industries and individual companies and their equity and debt securities, as well as global economic, financial-market and geo-political developments that bear directly on the investment decision-making process. Client-relationship and practice-management services include timely notices of corporate actions (e.g., bond calls, security tender offers) affecting securities held in client accounts, the ability to efficiently move funds as directed by clients among their investment accounts and other accounts they may designate, and timely notification that desired transactions cannot be completed due to insufficient liquidity (cash). OCI does not process transactions through recommended Service Providers in return for those Service Providers referring new clients to OCI.

OCI will generally seek to obtain the best execution at the best security price available with respect to each transaction. The best price means the best net price without regard to the specific sales price and specific commission. OCI will seek reasonably competitive commission rates. However, OCI clients may not always pay the lowest available commission. OCI may "block" similar orders for multiple accounts into one order for the purpose of trying to obtain a better average price for all accounts in the block.

Clients should be aware that their accounts may incur transaction costs in addition to any commissions charged by their custodian broker when transactions occur in over-the-counter securities on an agency basis. Also, brokerage firm custody of a client's assets may limit or eliminate OCI's ability to obtain best price and execution.

As described above, OCI receives economic benefits as a consequence of the custody and trading relationships it has with Service Providers. These benefits include the following products and services, provided to OCI without cost or at a discount: duplicate client statements and confirmations, consulting services, access to an 'institutional' trading desk, access to block trading (which provides the ability to aggregate securities transactions for execution and then allocate the appropriate shares directly to or from client accounts), the ability to have advisory fees deducted directly from client accounts, access to an electronic communications network for client order entry and account information, access to mutual funds with no transaction fees, and free or discounted compliance, marketing, research, technology, and practice-management products and services offered by Service Providers and/or third-party vendors. Service Providers may also pay for business consulting, professional services, and research received by OCI and may also pay or reimburse expenses (travel, lodging, meals, and entertainment expenses) for OCI personnel to attend conferences or meetings relating to their service platforms or to their advisor custody and brokerage services generally. Such services made available by Service Providers are intended to help OCI manage and further develop its business enterprise, and such services may or may not depend on the amount of brokerage transactions directed to them. Some of these products and services made available by Service Providers may benefit OCI, but may not directly benefit its clients.

The receipt of economic benefits by OCI creates a potential conflict of interest and may directly or indirectly influence OCI's recommendation of Service Providers for custody and brokerage services. From time to time, OCI aggregates like transactions for a number of client accounts into a 'block' trade that it directs to a third-party broker (i.e., other than the client's custodian) for execution. The execution fees associated with such third-party trades, paid by clients participating in the trades, provide OCI access to investment research products and services that would otherwise be unavailable to it. When a client account participates in such a third-party block trade, it may pay a higher transaction cost than would have been obtainable elsewhere. Higher transaction costs will not be paid unless OCI determines that 1) the amount is reasonable in relation to the services in terms of a particular transaction or OCI's overall responsibilities with respect to client accounts; 2) such commission payments are made in compliance with applicable state and federal laws; and 3) total commissions paid by the clients either alone, or in aggregate with other accounts, are reasonable in relation to benefits obtained. Research products and services obtained by OCI as a consequence of third-party block transactions are used to inform investment decisions that affect all OCI clients; OCI does not attempt to allocate benefits to clients according to incremental transaction costs incurred.

Schwab Marketplace

OCI engages certain Independent Managers whose portfolio management services are available through Schwab. Schwab does not act as a sponsor in relation to Schwab Marketplace, and its compensation for Schwab Marketplace services, which may include brokerage, custody, research and other services, is separate from the Independent Manager's fee. Clients who participate in the Schwab Marketplace program generally appoint Schwab as the broker for the execution of transactions with respect to the applicable account assets. The Schwab Sponsored Program brochure, which is delivered to clients participating in such a program, further details Schwab's brokerage practices and brokerage fees.

Item 13 - Review of Accounts and Reports

OCI Portfolio Managers and Investment Advisor Representatives utilize both custodian-provided Internet platforms and internally-supported third-party portfolio-management software to monitor key parameters of client accounts (e.g., changes in market value, cash flows and balances, recent transactions) on a near-continuous basis. In addition, client accounts generally are reviewed by the same OCI personnel no less frequently than quarterly, in conjunction with the written-report process described below. Factors triggering additional portfolio reviews, which generally occur numerous times per year, include significant changes in economic and/or financial-market conditions, favorable or unfavorable news about a specific security or issuer, and client requests for ad hoc reviews and/or meetings.

OCI generally provides written reports on a quarterly basis to accounts under its discretionary investment management. Some clients, including but not limited to those whose portfolios are managed via one of Oarsman's mutual-fund/ETF/ETN asset-allocation strategies, may receive only custodian-generated reports, generally on a monthly basis. OCI's written reports generally include the period-end market value, historical cost and current yield of assets in the client's portfolio, as well as data on recent investment performance. These reports are retained by OCI and used during client meetings, which, though not regularly scheduled, may be arranged by OCI and the client from time to time.

OCI does not place fixed limits on the number of client accounts assigned to any investment professional.

Item 14 - Client Referrals and Other Compensation

No person who is not a client of OCI provides an economic benefit to OCI for providing investment advice or other advisory services to its clients.

OCI does not, as of the publication date of this brochure, compensate anyone who is not a supervised person of OCI, nor does it compensate any other firm, for client referrals (although OCI reserves the right to do so while disclosing any such arrangement to clients and prospective clients). Any such arrangement will involve the cash payment by OCI of a portion of the client's advisory fee over one or more years. Such arrangement will not increase the amount a client pays for the advisory services of OCI. In connection with any arrangement of this sort, OCI will provide the client, in advance, additional disclosure regarding the arrangement and the compensation.

Item 15 - Custody

OCI does not take custody of client funds or securities; these safekeeping services are typically provided to managed accounts by the Service Provider processing securities transactions ordered by OCI. To the extent a client receives any account or other investment ownership statement from OCI, OCI recommends the client carefully compare the report to information provided on the custodian's statements received by the client.

Item 16 - Investment Discretion

Most clients grant OCI discretionary authority in its provision of investment advisory services; OCI and its Representatives may exercise investment discretion when that authority is granted by clients. Discretionary authority permits OCI and its Representatives to select the securities to buy and sell, the amount to buy and sell, when to buy and sell, and the commission rate paid without obtaining specific consent from the client for each transaction. Representatives may make different recommendations and effect different transactions with respect to the same securities to different advisory clients. Commissions and execution of securities transactions implemented through Service Providers recommended by OCI may not be better than the commissions or execution available if the client used another firm; however, OCI believes the overall level of services and support provided to the client by recommended custodians and broker dealers justifies potentially higher costs.

When an Independent Manager is used to manage all or a portion of the client's account, the Independent Manager, not OCI, exercises discretion to purchase or sell investments in the account managed by the Independent Manager.

If a client directs OCI to effect transactions through a particular Service Provider, OCI will do so. However, such an instruction may result in the client incurring transaction costs that are higher (or lower) than if the instruction had not been given. Also, restricting OCI to particular broker/dealers may limit OCI's ability to include a client account within block orders to obtain the best price or execution. In addition, if OCI is effecting transactions in a security for clients by means of a block order, as well as an order in the same security for a client who has directed OCI to use a particular broker/dealer, OCI will effect the block order prior to effecting the directed brokerage trade. Thus, clients directing OCI to use a particular broker/dealer may not receive the same average price for securities bought or sold that would be received if the order was part of a block order.

In the event of an order error, it is OCI's policy to take action to make the client's account whole.

Item 17 - Voting Client Securities Proxies

OCI and its Representatives may vote proxies on behalf of clients. The following information summarizes OCI's Policies and Procedures regarding the voting of proxies when providing advisory services to its clients.

OCI's Policies and Procedures relating to voting proxies are designed to ensure that proxies are voted in the best interests of clients. The Policies and Procedures do not apply in cases where the client retains voting authority, a determination generally made at the time of account opening and completion of the OCI asset management agreement.

Clients who retain voting authority will receive proxy solicitations and supporting materials from their account custodian (or a transfer agent), not from OCI. OCI will, upon request, assist clients who retain voting authority with questions regarding proxies and/or voting procedures. In cases where the client has delegated voting authority to OCI, OCI will nevertheless abide by specific voting instructions as requested, in writing, by the client on a case-by-case basis.

Proxies OCI Will Vote. Given the time and costs associated with the analysis of proxy solicitations and the mechanics of voting, OCI has determined that voting every proxy is not in the best interest of clients.

Unless otherwise agreed in writing with a client, OCI will vote, on behalf of clients who have delegated proxy-voting authority, proxies for common stock securities listed on OCI's most recently filed 13F report, which is available to the public on the SEC's website: www.sec.gov/edgar.

To assist in the analysis of proxy solicitations and the administration of proxy voting, OCI has retained Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS), a third-party advisory firm. OCI will review research materials and recommendations provided by ISS on a proxy-by-proxy basis. While OCI will in most cases cast votes on behalf of clients in accordance with ISS recommendations, OCI retains discretion to vote in a manner different from those recommendations on a case-by-case basis.

Primary Objective. Proxies will be voted in a manner intended to maximize the value of client investments. In evaluating a particular proxy proposal, OCI will take into consideration, among other things, the period of time over which the shares of the issuer are expected to be held, the size of the position, the costs involved in the proxy proposal, and the existing governance documents of the company, as well as its management and operations.

OCI will vote in accordance with management's recommendations on many issues, as management capability is an important criterion used by OCI in selecting investments. Proxy proposals that change the status of a company will be reviewed to evaluate the desirability of the change and to determine the benefits to shareholders. OCI's primary objective is always to protect and enhance the economic interests of its clients.

Exceptions. When OCI believes management is acting on its own behalf or in a manner adverse to the well-being of shareholders, OCI may elect to vote against management's recommendations as a means to represent its clients' interests. In situations where OCI is displeased with the performance of current management, OCI may withhold votes or vote against proposals by management as a means of communicating this dissatisfaction. OCI reviews all proposals relating to management and director compensation in light of the company's performance and corporate governance practices. OCI normally will vote against significant compensation increases, or compensation not tied to company performance, in instances where it believes the company is under-performing and/or management has not added value commensurate with compensation.

Social, Political & Environmental Issues. OCI recognizes the activity or inactivity of a company with respect to matters of social, political or environmental concern may affect the success of the company and the value of its securities. Given that management capability and alignment of management and shareholder interests are important criteria used by OCI in selecting investments, OCI normally supports management's position on matters of social, political or environmental concern, except where it believes a different position would be in the best interests of shareholders.

Shareholder Proposals, Transparency. OCI will not support shareholder proposals that dictate a company's business practices, unless OCI believes such proposals are in the best interest of clients. OCI believes proposals related to ordinary business matters are more properly the responsibility of the company's management and board of directors. However, OCI may support shareholder proposals it believes will increase the transparency of the company's business decision-making processes (as opposed to those seeking to dictate the outcome of those processes).

Conflicts. In evaluating proxy proposals, OCI must consider whether any circumstances exist that may give rise to a conflict of interest in connection with voting client proxies, either because of a business relationship between OCI and the company or otherwise. If OCI determines that a potential conflict of interest exists, the matter will be reviewed by management and, to the extent necessary, legal counsel, and a final determination will be made as to whether it is appropriate for OCI to vote. If such a final determination results in OCI not voting a particular proxy for which it has accepted responsibility to vote, affected clients will be notified and given the opportunity to vote themselves. Alternatively, OCI may, after disclosure of the conflict, consult directly with a client and obtain the client's consent to vote the proxy.

How to Obtain More Information. For additional information regarding OCI's proxy voting policies and procedures, or to obtain information regarding specific votes cast on your behalf, you may contact us by writing to OCI at 759 North Milwaukee Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, 53202 or by calling (414) 221-0081.

Independent Managers. Independent Managers will vote proxies for client accounts under their management as agreed upon with the client and disclosed in the Independent Manager's ADV Part 2A.

Item 18 - Financial Information

OCI does not receive fees of more than $1,200 six months or more in advance; thus, no financial statement for OCI is attached. OCI does not have any financial condition that is reasonably likely to impair its ability to meet its contractual commitment to any client.

CFP Qualifications

The CFP® certification is granted by Certified Financial Planners Board of Standards, Inc. The certification is voluntary; no federal or state law or regulation requires financial planners to hold CFP® certification. It is recognized in the United States and a number of other countries for its (1) high standard of professional education; (2) stringent code of conduct and standards of practice; and (3) ethical requirements that govern professional engagements with clients.

To attain the right to use the CFP® marks, an individual must satisfactorily fulfill the following requirements:

- Education - Complete an advanced college-level course of study addressing the financial planning subject areas that CFP Board's studies have determined as necessary for the competent and professional delivery of financial planning services, and attain a Bachelor's Degree from a regionally accredited United States college or university (or its equivalent from a foreign university). CFP Board's financial planning subject areas include insurance planning and risk management, employee benefits planning, investment planning, income tax planning, retirement planning, and estate planning;
- Examination - Pass the comprehensive CFP® Certification Examination. The examination, administered in 10 hours over a two-day period, includes case studies and client scenarios designed to test one's ability to correctly diagnose financial planning issues and apply one's knowledge of financial planning to real world circumstances;
- Experience - Complete at least three years of full-time financial planning-related experience (or equivalent, measured as 2,000 hours per year); and
- Ethics - Agree to be bound by CFP Board's Standards of Professional Conduct, a set of documents outlining the ethical and practice standards for CFP® professionals.

Individuals who become certified must complete the following ongoing education and ethics requirements in order to maintain the right to continue to use the CFP® marks:

- Continuing Education - Complete 30 hours of continuing education hours every two years, including two hours on the Code of Ethics and other parts of the Standards of Professional Conduct, to maintain competence and keep up with developments in the financial planning field.
- Ethics - Renew an agreement to be bound by the Standards of Professional Conduct. The Standards prominently require that CFP® professionals provide financial planning services at a fiduciary standard of care. This means CFP® professionals must provide financial planning services in the best interest of their clients.

CFP® professionals who fail to comply with the above standards and requirements may be subject to CFP Board's enforcement process, which could result in suspension or permanent revocation of their CFP® certification.

Chartered Financial Consultant (ChFC) Qualifications

ChFCs must have a bachelor's degree from an accredited institution and must complete a course of study in financial planning. This course should cover topics such as financial planning, retirement planning, estate planning, tax planning, investment planning, and risk management.
