What Colleges and Universities Are Likely to Give Your Clients Price Breaks?

You will eliminate a lot of guessing by using The Ultimate College List Builder.

Here is a summary of what you'll find in this guide:

- ✓ Average price breaks at 762 private and public colleges
- ✓ Percentage of freshmen receiving scholarships/grants at each school
- ✓ Identity of schools where most or all freshmen receive awards
- ✓ Identity of schools where many freshmen pay sticker price
- ✓ Explanation of what all these figures mean
- ✓ Six-step cheat sheet to finding generous colleges

Why You Should Use This List

Here are two practical reasons to consult this list builder:

No. 1: The list can help you encourage families to look at a larger universe of schools.

Some of you deal with clients with teenagers that have their hearts set on the same dream schools. These tend to be the same three or four dozen schools with impossibly high rejection rates that continually make these wish lists.

This list will allow parents to see that some or all of the schools that they are most excited about give little to no merit aid. High-income parents, for example, who can't cover the cost of an elite research university in the Northeast that doesn't give merit awards, will be able to see that many schools throughout the country would provide their children with merit scholarships.

No. 2: The list demonstrates that merit aid isn't just for "A" students.

Many parents worry that their children must be stellar students to receive scholarships from schools.

This widespread assumption has created a tremendous amount of pressure on students to be perfect. This list illustrates quite dramatically that you don't have to be an "A" student at most schools to receive help.

In reality, most students who attend public colleges and universities don't pay full price thanks to federal and state grants, as well as institutional awards.

The odds of receiving an institutional price discount are highest at private institutions. At private colleges and universities nearly 91% of students receive scholarships and/or grants from the schools themselves, according to the latest annual tuition discount survey from the National Association of College and University Business Officers.

According to the NACUBO, the average tuition discount that freshmen are capturing at private schools is at an historic high. The average tuition discount is 62.1% for freshmen.

Here's an example of how to calculate this: If the tuition at a private school was $55,000, the student receiving the average discount of 62.1% would pay $20,845.

The discounts are so high because college is actually a buyer's market at the vast majority of institutions.

What You Need to Know About the List

I used the U.S. Department of Education database (IPEDS) to generate the line-up of schools in this document. Here are the parameters that I used for the search:

- ✓ Non-profit private colleges and universities.
- ✓ State colleges and universities.
- ✓ Campuses that had a minimum of 800 students.
- ✓ Each school had to have a four-year grad rate of at least 38.8%. (This is the average graduation rate for state universities. Sad, but true.)

Once the search parameters generated a universe of 762 schools, we looked to see what percentage of freshmen at each of these colleges and universities received institutional grants and scholarships, as well as the average amount.

A Closer Look at What's Inside the List

To help you get the most out of this list, I am highlighting some important patterns to note, and how you can interpret the figures.

Schools Where Many Students Pay Full Price

Elite Colleges and Universities

While the vast majority of students at private schools receive price discounts, this isn't the reality at many of the most highly ranked private institutions.

To illustrate this phenomenon, I've provided examples where the percentages of students who receive price breaks are far lower than the average.

Explanation for Low Percentage of Institutional Grants

When you see private colleges and universities on the list that offer institutional grants to a relatively low percentage of students, it will usually mean one of two things:

1: The school only gives out need-based financial aid.

2: The school awards very few merit scholarships.

Institutions that score extremely high in U.S. News & World Report's college rankings don't have to try as hard to attract top students. So many wealthy students want to attend these highly rated schools that paying full price won't discourage them. Because of this strong demand, these institutions don't have to award merit scholarships or they can get by with offering a modest number.

What Does This Mean?

For Families Looking For Need-Based Aid

Private schools that provide little or no merit scholarships can be excellent institutions for smart students who require a great deal of financial help to attend college. A middle-class or disadvantaged student who gets into a school like Pomona, Amherst, Harvard or Yale should receive an excellent financial aid package.

Don't assume, however, that all schools that provide little or no merit aid will automatically provide excellent need-based aid packages. Boston College, for instance, is typically not nearly as generous with its need-based aid packages as some other schools in its peer group.

After generating a list of potential candidates, it's extremely important that parents use an institution's net price calculator when evaluating the generosity of a particular school.

For Families Looking For Merit Scholarships

High-income students who attend elite research universities and the most highly ranked liberal arts colleges will usually pay full price or close to it. This reality can pose a dilemma for smart, wealthy students who are aiming for elite schools, but whose parents have not saved enough to pay for a school that can now cost $85,000 or more a year!

High-income families, who find themselves in this predicament, should expand their search and look for schools that will provide wealthy students with merit scholarships. As The Ultimate College List Builder shows, most schools fall into this category.

Plenty of well-off parents unfortunately choose other options when their children get into trophy schools that they believe merit extreme financial sacrifices. They end up taking actions such as borrowing large amounts for college, raiding their retirement accounts and/or dipping into college accounts for a younger sibling(s). I've even heard of parents selling their home to enable their children to attend their dream schools.

Please discourage parents from taking these drastic steps!

I would urge you to give your clients and prospects a Savvy College Planning resource guide entitled, Does Where You Go to College Matter? You will find the PDF resource guide in the Clients References section of the SCP website. I suspect this will be eye-opening for many parents.

Other Schools Where Many Pay Full Price

Art Schools and Music Conservatories

One type of institution that doesn't get a lot of attention, but sport high price tags are art schools and music conservatories. Every year, the U.S. Department of Education releases lists of schools that charge the highest net price (cost of attendance minus the typical scholarships and grants) and every year the institutions that make this hall of shame list include a significant number of art and music schools.

You can find the top 5% of private and public institutions that charge the highest net prices by visiting the U.S. Department of Education's College Affordability and Transparency Center. As you can see in the following list, many of the most expensive private institutions by net price fall into the art or music category.

Institution	City	State
Landmark College	Putney	VT
California Institute of the Arts	Valencia	CA
Ringling College of Art and Design	Sarasota	FL
New York University	New York	NY
Art Center College of Design	Pasadena	CA
Jewish Theological Seminary of America	New York	NY
School of the Art Institute of Chicago	Chicago	IL
Emerson College	Boston	MA
Hult International Business School	Cambridge	MA
Santa Clara University	Santa Clara	CA
Worcester Polytechnic Institute	Worcester	MA
Berklee College of Music	Boston	MA
Pratt Institute-Main	Brooklyn	NY
Baylor University	Waco	TX
Otis College of Art and Design	Los Angeles	CA
Savannah College of Art and Design	Savannah	GA

Arts schools and music conservatories often provide poor awards and some will also limit the percentage of students who receive discounts of any kind.

Schools Where Price Breaks Are Plentiful

Colleges and Master's-Level Universities

The schools that provide most or even all freshmen with price discounts will typically be liberal arts and baccalaureate colleges, as well as master's-level universities, where there are few PhD programs. In contrast, the schools least likely to provide merit scholarships are research universities.

Colleges and master's-level universities have to work harder by offering discounts to attract students because they typically don't possess national brand names like so many research universities enjoy.

Schools Where Nearly All Freshmen Receive Discounts

Here is a small sampling of institutions where everyone or a large majority of students receive a price break:

- ✓ Centre College 100%
- ✓ Clarkson University 100%
- ✓ Gonzaga University 100%
- ✓ Hillsdale College 100%
- ✓ Linfield University. 100%

When the Statistics Are Less Reliable

State Universities

Unlike private institutions, state universities usually don't provide as large a percentage of its freshmen with price cuts.

State universities are priced lower than private institutions so they don't need to offer as many discounts. In fact, one reason why private schools discount is to become competitive with state universities on price.

The percentage of students receiving institutional grants from these public schools won't necessarily provide the same helpful roadmap as the private institutions' aid practices.

This is because in some states the bulk of the aid comes from the state government rather than the schools themselves.

Turning to the same federal data that was used to generate the overall list, I discovered that only 34% of freshmen received institutional grants or scholarships at the University of Florida. This is misleading, however, because as you'll see 82% of students at the University of Florida received grants or scholarships from the state government.

University of Florida

- <sup>1</sup> Includes students awarded Federal work study aid and aid from other sources not listed above.

Some state programs are centralized which means the bulk of the awards are set by formulas on the state level. States that use this system include California, New York and South Carolina.

Other states have a decentralized program – the governments set basic eligibility criteria but they provide the funding to the schools that exercise some discretion when making awards. States in this category include Colorado, Texas and Virginia.

Virginia Tech

I'm using the University of Virginia to illustrate a school where the percentage of students who receive aid from either the state or the institution itself is rather low. The percentage of students who receive awards from either the state of Virginia or the University of Virginia is significantly smaller than at the University of Florida.

Your Next Step in Researching a College's Generosity

Checking the odds of receiving a price cut at a particular school represents just part of the task.

Parents should also look at what the average need-based financial aid packages and merit scholarships are at an institution and compare that with the school's cost of attendance. (The list builder provides an average award, but these federal figures don't differentiate between need-based aid and merit aid.)

Let's take a look at why this is important by using two schools that both offer roughly the same average merit awards.

College of Idaho

This is a liberal arts college that has enjoyed high professor ratings in surveys from the Princeton Review.

St. John's University

This is a master's level university that is located in Queens, NY.

---

Here are the average merit awards at the two schools that are quite similar:

College of Idaho: $20,809

St. John's University: $24,876

Net Price

When I subtract the average merit award from each school's tuition and room/board charges these are the net prices:

College of Idaho: $25,565

St. John's University: $41,744

Obviously, the net prices are significantly different even though the merit awards are similar.

Look Closer at Prices

Examining the percentage of students who receive a discount, what the average discount is and the cost of attendance at individual schools can help families generate promising prospects.

You can discover a school's average merit scholarship and average need-based aid award, as well as the school's price tag, by heading to the CollegeData.com website. Once on the CollegeData's website, take the following steps:

Step 1:

Type in the name of any school in CollegeData's search box and you will be brought to the school's profile where you can discover a lot about an institution including admissions statistics, majors and campus life.

Step 2:

Click on the college's Financials tab located at the top of the profile.

What you will first see is the cost of attendance. Most families don't pay full price, but it's a good starting point. If it's a state university, it will have the sticker price for residents and out-of-state students.

IN-STATE	OUT-OF-STATE
Cost of Attendance :	$79,228
Installment Plan Available
<hr/>
Tuition & Fees :	$61,480
Room & Board :	$15,048
Books & Supplies :	$900
Other Expenses :	$1,800

Step 3:

You'll want to check several financial aid statistics under the Costs section.

Look first at the statistic that says what percentage of financial need the school meets.

Grinnell says it meets 100% of a student's demonstrated financial need. Only about six dozen colleges and universities say they meet 100% of a student's demonstrated financial need.

The higher the percentage of need met figure is, the better.

At Grinnell, 76.9% of students applied for financial aid and 100% of the students who were determined to have financial need received assistance and got 100% of their demonstrated need met. That is as good as it gets and is the gold standard—everybody who had financial need got their full need met!

FRESHMAN

Found to Have Financial Need

Received Financial Aid

Need Fully Met

312 (100.0%) of aid recipients

Average Percent of Need Met

100%

Average Award

$55,722

Need-Based Gift

Received by 312 (100.0%) of aid recipients, average amount $53,709

Need-Based Self-Help

Received by 246 (78.8%) of aid recipients, average amount $2,296

Merit-Based Gift

Received by 62 (19.9%) of aid recipients

118 (25.1%) of freshmen had no financial need and received merit aid, average amount $18,688

In this section, you'll also discover what the average merit-based gift is. These are awards for high-income students that the aid formula said had no financial need. The average merit award is $18,688. That is not a high award, but it is better than most elite schools that have excellent financial aid policies like Grinnell, but typically give little to no merit aid.

The Ultimate College Builder Cheat Sheet

Use The Ultimate College List Builder to help you identify schools that could represent financial fits for you.

Here are six steps to follow:

Step 1:

When money is a concern, pay attention to schools on the list builder that provide a large percentage of students with discounts. Students will enjoy better odds of receiving a price cut at these institutions.

Step 2:

With the list builder note what a school's average award is and compare it to the price of the institution.

Keep in mind that the average awards you see on the list builder do not separate out merit aid from need-based aid, but CollegeData does provide this information for individual schools.

Step 3:

If financial aid is a necessity and your child is a stellar student, also check out the schools on the list builder that chiefly or exclusively dispense need-based aid. You will find these schools (nearly all elite institutions) among those that provide a lower percentage of students with price cuts.

Another option that's easier is to look at the guide entitled, The Ultimate List of the Nation's Most Generous Colleges, that your financial advisor should be able to provide.

Step 4:

You need to focus on more than just the percentage of students who receive scholarships or grants and the average amounts. Look at what a school's average merit aid and average need-based awards are. The CollegeData's website provides this information via a school's profile.

While on CollegeData's website, check out the percentage of demonstrated financial need the school typically meets.

Step 5:

It's crucial that you use a net price calculator for each school that interests your teenager. Average awards can be a helpful guide, but you need to get a firm estimate of what a particular school will cost you before your child applies.

Step 6:

Ideally, your child won't finalize his/her college list until you have generated net price calculator results for each institution and, where necessary, eliminated unrealistic options.
